CONSISTENCY OF LIFE

A woman missionary in India was speaking one day to a group of native women. She was describing the Christian life and specifying the duties involved. She noticed a woman slip out of the meeting and ten minutes later returning with a friend the woman who she left, the woman replied, "I went out to talk to the man who worked in your garden. I came back when he told me that he really do the things you are urging us to do."

Lord Cecil once said, "People watch what I do six days so that they will know what I mean on the seventh." If some people who attend church were watching, they stop praising God and instead were to dislocate the things they were thinking about and plans they had for future action, the service of worship might be turned into something far different from what a church service is expected to be.

Of course, there is a lot of hypocrisy outside the church — in fact a great deal more vest side than inside. People outside the church who point an accusing finger at what goes on in church members are usually trying to conceal something in their own lives vastly worse. But it is a fact that consistency in the Christian life is a rare achievement. Christ never said or even indicated that the discipleship to which he called men is easy but he did teach that no sincere effort ever passes unnoticed before the eyes of God.

Let us not judge — either the apparent saint or the notorious sinner.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 24th, 1941

April 22nd is the day of Reginald's patron saint, St. George, an apt choice of a heroic figure by a truly heroic people, as the United Allies defend world democracy today. The spirit of St. George thrust through Britons in their cause of doing the utmost for mankind.

St. George was born in 270 A.D. of noble family at Lydda in Palestine; tradition says his father, a soldier, had been a martyr to his Christian faith. At seventeen years of age, the son became a soldier of Rome and won rank as tribune under Diocletian. He tore down the edict of the emperor ordering Christian persecution and was martyred for his act of faith and courage in the year 303 years. His fame spread. In the reign of King Edward the Confessor, St. George was adopted as patron saint of England. His flag was the national flag. Andrew and St. Patrick. St. George's Day is a day of celebration, a day for rededication of all peoples of the Commonwealth to the noblest calling, the defence of the right. St. George is more than a symbol or a legend. To day the English, Scotish, Welsh and Irish people of stout heart defend the right.

Silence the Knockers and Help To Boost Belleville. The financial standing of the city is sound. It's public utilities are profitable and the assets closely approach the amount of the municipal debt. The money expended on the waterworks and gas plant, although nominally a debt, is really a profitable investment if figured in a sinking fund each after the sinking fund and interest have been provided for.

Love Makes Worms Glow

Ottawa Journal

It's love that makes the glowworm glow. A German zoologist, Dr. Helmut Schwalb, has spent years looking into this odd belief and found it true.

This month we learn why the female glowworm is earthbound. Those that flit and flicker in the summer evening are the males, and not all the males. There are two species of glowworm. Males of the phausis splendidula glow. Males of the lampyris noctiluca are dark. One might wonder what life had for a glowworm that did not glow. Dr. Schwalb found it had a better chance of happiness for him than for the glittering kind.

What Dr. Schwalb was most anxious to find out was why the males glow at all. It couldn't be to attract the females. He knew the he are she's stuck on the ground. What did Dr. Schwalb never solved. But knowledge rewards those who woo her for her own sake. In glowworm affairs love for cross utility. Dr. Schwalb learned other things, too. Ads of either variety circles a yard or two above the ground. When he shone a searching female he drops and startles mating toward her as soon as he reaches the ground. When he reaches her, her light goes out, if he is her kind of glowworm. And here's where the lampyris male, the dark one, has the advantage over the flashy fellow. Perhaps because he has no light of his own to distract him he almost unerringly finds a lampyris female. She is not quite as bright as the other kind. What's more, the number of lampyris males and females is about even. But the glittering phausis males outnumber their prospective mates five to one, and they are poor at recognizing their own females. This leads to much disappointment, for the lampyris females will have nothing to do with them.

Only adult glowworms glow. The larvae are dark and spend their time hiding in ambush that to nip him. The adult do not eat. They just glow and they find a mate. Then they stop glowing.

Harris Signs Truce (Sort of) With TV Ads

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

In some of my recent columns, discussing the flaws and foibles of television broadcasting, I touched upon a raw nerve . . . .

(Are you lonesome, depressed, unpopular with members of the opposite sex? Do you hate to wash your skin blotchy, your nose stuffy, your head aching? Then read "Strictly Personal" and learn what to do about it. Don't miss a single word in this space, and see what a difference it will make in your whole personality. Because of a secret writing process no other column can make this claim.)

. . . . when I mentioned the "assembly-line format" that should be used on TV, it seems perfectly obvious to me that the program content of television should be developed and controlled by men skilled and technicians for the channel or network, and not by the producers, agencies, packaging outfits, or . . .

. . . by the vice-presidents in charge of sales and commercials. Sponsors should buy time on television just as advertisers buy space in newspapers and magazines, but the content and the scheduling of programs should be determined . . .

(At last, science has found a way to help you lose that unwanted pound! Now, for the first time, a passionate dose of "Strictly Personal" can be consumed with delightful ease. No more lazy preparations, no more painful studying, no more expensive diet books, and no more academic courses . . . just pop one column, or more if you need, once a day, evening only, a few minutes before retiring, and all the intellectual vitamins your mind requires. There are all of New York scientists working on reducing Harris, I understand the Thin Man's extraordinarymetabolism is a freak.)

. . . by the time-honored heads of general American audiences. Moreover, the continuity and frequency of the commercials will be viciously and foolishly interrupted by flamboyant commercial claims, sung more than a news story or editorial is fragmented by the noises in an advertiser's message.

(It'll be back in a moment with more commercials, but first a few words about the ingredients that make "Strictly Personal" a unique combination of the classic, easiest, newest, purest, safest, best . . .)

Debt Might Outlive House

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

Canada is already deeply involved in the housing business to keep home construction booming, so it is to be hoped Ottawa will keep alert to the latest suggested south of the border.

The special housing message of President Kennedy proposed government insurance of no-down payment 30-year mortgages on homes costing no more than $20,000 and at interest rate of 5½ per cent.

The long period of such loans seems a considerable risk. A 30-year-old man built a home today, may be retired at 65 when making his last payment. His equity would build up slowly, but the value of his property rather quickly in case of inflation, which seems to be so selfish — our sense of proportion and life's true values become vague. They come back in healthy form when we take care and think things out slow.

To Your Good Health

Bronchiectasis Common Disorder Involving Lungs

By Joseph C. Meisner, M.D.

Bronchiectasis is a disease which evidently has a poor press agent because it doesn't get nearly the publicity it deserves.

The combination of symptoms gives the doctor a very good clue to the presence of the disease. Added to the one mentioned yesterday, the doctor may detect gurgly moisture in the lungs, and this is highly suggestive of bronchiectasis although, of course, like so many symptoms, it may be found in other diseases, too. The pattern of symptoms is usually what a physician looks for. A group of symptoms gives the answer, whereas a single symptom can be extremely misleading.

Anyway, with bronchiectasis, which is a dilation of the bronchial tuber or smaller branches of them, the confirmation is often made by X-ray.

Ordinarily a chest X-ray may show signs that are suggestive of this disease, but a special type, called a bronchogram, is required for a positive answer.

A bronchogram is the name for "lung mapping," involves the introduction of fluid into the affected areas. This shows up clearly in the X-ray the "padding" which is characteristic in the dilated passages.

Treatment varies, depending on the severity of the disease.

Sometimes postural drainage helps a great deal; means that having the patient rest with head lower than the chest, so the accumulated mucus may drain out of the expanded pockets, rather than having to be coughed up. After a little period of trying to do it by coughing, the patient gets much desirable tired of the effort!

Antibiotics are a logical and useful adjunct. There is infection present, and until it is cleared up, there is no reason to expect the trouble to repair itself.

If the case is extensive, or if bleeding has occurred, then surgical removal of the affected area may be advisable. Heavy hemorrhage, after all, can be serious and even fatal.

Some years ago surgery involving the lungs was a difficult undertaking. However, in the last decade or two, the situation has changed. Antibiotics, newer surgical techniques, blood transfusions, better anesthesia, and some lesser factors, have made enormous improvement in the success of such operations.

A recent report on patients having severe cases of bronchiectasis show that 69 per cent of them recovered or greatly improved after surgery. Of the same type of patients, not having surgery, the improvement rate was only 13 per cent.

I do not believe surgery unless other treatments don't help, or cannot be expected to help. If surgery is needed, then go ahead confidently. In bronchiectasis, if there's recovered in five times as good with surgery as without it.

So the final questions: I don't know about liquor, but I certainly will say that smoking certainly will aggravate bronchiectasis and the "continuous cold" is quite characteristic. So without any ifs, ands, or buts, I decidedly say "no smoking."

"Dear Dr. Molner: When my alarm clock goes off in the morning I'm not ready to start. I have noticed that my heart beats heavily. Can this cause damage? — Mrs. C. H."

No, it will not damage the heart. But it may make you very much more cranky than you are now.

Note to L.M.: There is no cure for vitiligo. Modern drugs sometimes help very much; sometimes they don't. And sometimes vitiligo "runs away spontaneously and cures itself, it is not dangerous or harmful, it just has an odd appearance.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

A young engineer friend of mine in Japan, spending two years at a remote station on the Dew Line where he was a neighbor of a community of about forty people plus the air force personnel who arrived and departed.

What staggers him, now that he is back in the world of human society, is the colossal indifference of people to one another.

He stood at my office door overwatching the downtown bustling by.

"Just look at them!" he cried. "Look at him! He's walking along seeing nobody! Look at her! Look at them all! There isn't a single soul among them that is conscious of anybody else!"

Anyhow, he sat on his mother's front steps last evening watching the casual passers by. He saw people, not friends, towards each other, pass, and not what did they say to each other, each other, they seemed totally oblivious.

"It's that," he said, "I'll get back north as soon as I can, before I become numb too."

Numb! What a perfect word to describe the multitudinous ness of cities.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

LOSSES

Never mind the losses! We all need them occasionally. Let us thank God for the experience we learned.

Losses are common to all, at one time or another. When they come let us take them in earnest and humility.

Another irreparable loss is that of unexpected.

Youth is full of fire and passion — but mature age is full of experience and accumulated wisdom. Age can look back at youth and revel in its memory, but youth can look ahead to age! All seasons of life have their losses as well as their glories. One of the marks of wisdom is a man or woman lives in his or her ability to overcome the losses. The loss, even of health, is less in importance to that of courage or readiness.

In some manner or other all losses are balanced. We should never forget this. Why can't we all appraise our losses and get going?

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By-R. J. SCOTT

CASTRO WARNS

"designed as a preventive measure" to remove "all who in some way were inclined to help the enemy."

"We now hope to bring the situation back to normal and since yesterday have started to free many people."

But the premier warned that in future it would be "death without clemency for terrorists."

Castro used a wall map to show the landings and read out lengthy plans captured from the rebels, detailing arms used in the invasion and others to be sent later. The plans were written throughout in English.

Castro said the invaders apparently had counted on complete air domination but Cuban pilots had chased some rebel planes "nearly to Miami." By the time the final assault was led against the invasion force anti-aircraft fire and "one of our jets" had shot down all the rebel planes, he claimed.

Now, that the invasion has been defeated, Castro said, the Americans "can no longer bear the consequences and threaten direct intervention."

Such a move "will cost them not only their prestige but also their colonies," he said.

Castro gave viewers his own detailed analysis of the benefits of a planned economy over free enterprise and claimed economic failure has obliged the United States to undertake aggression in "series of local wars, military and economic."

He reviewed Cuba's past economic dependence on the U.S. and compared Cuba to a sardine "which the North American shark found hard to digest."

The premier spoke shortly after Havana Radio disclosed the execution of two more anti-Castro revolutionaries by a firing squad in Havana.

More details of Castro's speech were given in the broadcast translated in Key West, Fla., by The Associated Press. Castro was quoted as saying about dealing with the captured rebels:

"Counter-revolutionaries must be shot. We have to act with hard hands. Don't let the terrorists entertain illusions that they can act with impunity while they persist in these plans! Let them not ask for clemency."

KENNEDY LIKE HITLER

Castro attacked the U.S. administration, President Kennedy personally, the Central Intelligence Agency and the U.S. way of life. He compared Kennedy to Hitler, called him an "international bully" and the administration "thugs" who threaten the world with war.

Castro implied that clemency for the captured rebels would depend on a pledge from the U.S. to end any attempt to oust communism from Cuba.

The hint came before he insisted that it would be necessary to shoot "counter-revolutionaries."

Castro put it this way:

"Now the imperialists are promoting a campaign in Latin America to seek clemency for the invader captives). Certain rulers of Latin America are promoting a movement of condemnation (of Cuba) and a movement for clemency.

"We are going to tell them first to ask the CIA and the United States for clemency for the children who were murdered here, that they have clemency for the victims of their bombs, that the bringing of weapons to Cuba cease, that the supply of explosives stop."

APPEARS HEALTHY

Castro appeared in good health. His speech was accompanied by his customary gestures. Occasionally he waved his arms or thumped the table with a clenched fist.

He asserted: "The threat of Kennedy is much like that of Hitler, Hitler threatened small countries, Kennedy threatens small countries."

Should any new invasion attempts be launched, all Latin America would rise violently against the United States, Castro said, and he called for an end of the U.S. "empire."

Castro said Cuba has no Soviet MIG jet fighters operational at this moment, although he said he wished it had.

H.S. Teacher Burned to Death In His Home

George McKevery, aged about 50, a Bancroft High School teacher, was burned to death in his home in Herschel township about six miles west of Bancroft, early Sunday morning.

Neighbors turned in the alarm to the Department of Lands and Forests fire department about three o'clock Sunday.

Mr. McKelvey lived alone in a converted school house.

Flying sparks spread the flames from the house to a cedar-and trailer on the property with all three being destroyed. Faulty wiring was blamed for the blaze.

Mr. McKelvey was head of the commercial department at the North Hastings district high school at Bancroft. A graduate of Queen's University, he was a keen dog breeder of dogs.

He is survived by a son Gregory McKelvey of Orillia.

Provincial police at Bancroft are investigating the death. Coroner Dr. O. W. Anderson of Bancroft attended. It has not been decided whether there will be an inquest.

BELIEVED

necessarily mean endorsement of all aspects of the plan. Each agency has somewhat different ideas.

While Kennedy did not call a national security council meeting to approve the invasion, he checked the plan with all the members of this advisory group except Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon, director Edward R. Murrow of the U.S. Information Agency; and defence mobilizer Frank Ellis.

The general idea was to have a landing by Cuban exiles in support and supply anti-Castro rebels already in the Cuban mountains and, hopefully, touch off such mass defections that Premier Castro himself would topple.

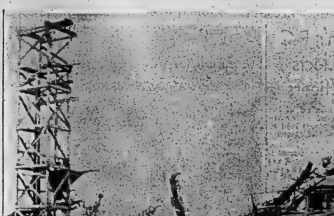
TIMING DISPUTED

The timing was an issue. Some felt action should be postponed, as it had been postponed during the Eisenhower administration, until exile forces became stronger and Castro's suppressions at home made the Cuban populace riper for revolt.

Younger arguments prevailed. They were that the morale of the anti-Castro refugees might suffer if they were not allowed to act, that Castro was tightening his hold over the populace to the point where no uprising would be possible, that arms from the Soviet bloc including topoppective jet fighters would make him much stronger against outside attack, that Guatemala had ordered preparations for an invasion from there stopped, and that the strike would be undertaken before heavy rains set in in May.

What happened came as a shock to high Washington officials and showed up serious faults in the intelligence estimates on which the go-ahead decision had been based.

Castro, even without MiG jets, was far stronger than had been supposed.



The hoped for defections failed to take place.

About 1,200 men were said to have engaged in the abortive landing on the Cuban coast southeast of Havana. They were never able to get a strong beachhead to hold to in the Cuban population think they might have a chance of overthrowing Castro.

The extent to which U.S. government funds, training and arms were supplied in the rebel movement undisclosed because of the secrecy surrounding cloak-and-dagger operations.

'Fish Are Running' Coded Alert That Started Small Force's Push Into Cuba

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

MIAMI (AP)—"The fish are running," said the coded alert.

It was beamed to tired, ragged resistance fighters hidden in Cuba's Escambray Mountains. A message of hope.

The "fish" — a few hundred guerrillas—landed at a beach near Cuba's southern Las Villas province. They pushed on into the murky swamps of the Zapata peninsula.

Their mission was to bring supplies, equipment, food and reinforcement to anti - Castro fighters, several thousand strong.

It was hardly an invasion. It could better have been described as a commando infiltration.

Behind it in Miami and New York were the revolutionary council of exiled Cuban leaders.

BUILT TOO HIGH

A super-abundance of wishful thinking among exiled Cubans longing to go home, wild rumors and uninformed guessing soon had the lonely expedition built up to the proportions of a powerful invasion.

The soaring expectations aroused by all this suffered a disastrous letdown within 72 hours the government of Fidel Castro triumphantly told the world it had crushed an invasion sponsored and supported by the mighty Yankee colossus to the north. And the Yankee colossus had sustained a severe blow to its prestige in the world.

The Castro government evidently had been expecting a counter - revolutionary move. There had just been a wave of spectacular sabotage in Cuba. And on Saturday, April 15, just before sunrise, at least three Cuban air force pilots defected after bombing and strafing three Cuban air bases.

About five hours after the landing, exile sources were telling the world that this was the real thing, the beginning of the end for Fidel. From New York came a Cuban exile's report that provisional president Jose Miro Cardona and his whole revolutionary council had left for Cuba and probably had arrived.

CLAIMS WILD

From other Cuban exile sources came extravagant claims: The invaders were anywhere from 3,000 to 15,000 strong, with more to come.

Until the end the revolutionary council did not report the number involved. But it failed to convey the impression of a real invasion and by itself claiming that swarms of Cubans were or would be deserting Castro and swelling the force of a huge liberation army.

Some exiles reported "large-scale landings" in Matanzas province, heavy fighting with militia, big unopposed landings in Santiago, in Pinar del Rio province. One reported all Pinar del Rio had fallen, another that the Isle of Pines was taken and all its 10,000 political prisoners liberated.

The cause was not hopeless because a battle seemed lost. Perhaps there would be more landings, more brigade, bigger attempts to drive Castro out. Perhaps, on the credit side, the revolution had accomplished something if it had damaged Fidel Castro's status or caused him to be removed from or diminished in power. His complete silence during the week was astonishing.

QUESTIONS ASKED

But what happened last week had not. And it raised momentous questions.

Can the revolutionary council expect to be truly effective when it is divided dozens of ways on politics, strategy and even Cuba's future?

In the light of the first misadventure, how will potential defectors react to a new try?

For Americans there was a similar question to ponder: Will those who might have fought to overthrow communism in Cuba place their faith in significant material support from the United States in the future?

A Cuban underground leader in Oriente province summed it up in a message to the outside: "At the moment, we are very confused."

20 H.S. Guidance Teachers Told of Medical Lab School

Dr. A. N. Rots, chief pathologist at Belleville General Hospital, Saturday told about 30 district high school guidance teachers that excitement, interest and a chance to provide valuable service to mankind await high school graduates who look for a career in medical laboratory technology.

Dr. Rots invited the teachers to assist him in a program to recruit high school graduates for the, hospital's School of Medical Laboratory Technology, which was established in 1952 with the approval of the Canadian Society of Laboratory Technologists.

The 1961-62 class will begin Sept. 13, but applications must be submitted not later than Aug. 16. The one-year course is available to either grade 12 or 13 graduates, although experience has proved that grade 13 graduates are better equipped to handle the curriculum. The school is open to male and female students.

Instructors include Dr. Rots himself, in addition to being the hospital's chief pathologist, is also principal of the technology school; C. W. Stone, chief technologist; Dr. J. S. Loynes, chief of the department of radiology; Dr. P. G. Loder, director of the department of radiotherapy; Miss Mildred Hassel, hospital superintendent; Miss D. Smith, director of the department of nursing, and Dr. John Orr, professor of bacteriology, Queen's University.

INVITE STUDENTS

Interested high school students will be invited to tour the Department of Pathology on Hospital Day, May 13, and be given a chance to learn first hand about the School of Medical Laboratory Technology.

Mrs. Nora Barber, senior technologist in biochemistry, said that anyone contemplating a career in medical laboratory technology should have an interest in science, "because it is a scientific field".

She said the work of a medical laboratory technologist is not stagnant because new developments always crop up.

"I think grade 13 students will have quite a bit of difficulty (in the course) because of their lack of scientific knowledge", she said.

C. W. Stone, chief technologist, who trained under an apprenticeship system in England, said he believed that a high school graduate interested in becoming a technologist must have a sound grasp of grade 13 chemistry.

The Canadian Society of Laboratory Technologists will not register graduates with grade 12 education. Grade 13 is required for registration.

"It's not so essential for females to become registered technologists", said Mrs. Stone, "but I feel it is essential for all males".

Dr. Rots said there is a "tremendous" shortage of medical laboratory technologists in Ontario. At present there are 150 job openings in the province.

The members of Col. Phay Wills Branch Canadian Legion for ex-service women, held a general meeting Thursday evening at the Legion home on Pinnacle St.

The president, Betty Kirby, was pleased to introduce three new ladies: Hilda Olsen, Kathleen Smith and Doris Keenan, who later were initiated to become members of the branch.

A selection of sealers was presented to the group, however, a full agreement was not established; some preferred the more feminine bow, while others wished to remain with the military appearing long tie. To settle the argument Olive Schmidt moved that each person wear the tie of her own choice, navy blue or black. Lengthen colors. This motion was approved.

On Thursday evening the regular monthly meeting of the University Women's Club of Belleville and District was held in Education Hall with the president, Mrs. A. E. Lewis, in the chair.

Following brief reports by the assembly on behalf of the "New Family Y", Mr. Gerald Hyde stressed the overcrowding at the present "Y" facilities, and the increase in membership by ten percent each year. The present "Y" membership of 1,587, he said was greater than the total enrolment of all the schools of Belleville when the "Y" was built 50 years ago. Mr. Hyde expressed the hope that everyone would back the "Y" and must to support the drive for the new building.

SCHOLARSHIP COMMITTEE

Of prime interest was the report of the Scholarship Committee, composed of Mrs. A. S. Lewis, Mrs. W. Bangay, Mrs. J. A. Jarvis, and Miss Eric Grout, on the subject of the University Women's Club Scholarship and the Manly Macdonald and Alice Bowell each year to the Belleville and District girls, obtaining high-school grades to reach Junior 12 papers, who are not already receiving $1000 from other scholarships or bursaries.

The recommendation was that the University Women's Club Scholarship and the Manly Macdonald Scholarship each be each raised from $100 to $200. The motion was passed almost unanimously.

SPRING TEA

Mrs. J. E. Nellis, general convener reported on the total progress of plans for the annual Spring Tea and Exhibition of Manly Macdonald paintings held on the first Saturday in May. She said that the tentative reservations in the Kitchen and dining room had been made and the attractiveness of the setting for the "Spring Tea". She reported that the Manly Macdonald's all painting would be available for sale. The Gift Shop Store, and urged members to make their tickets available to the public. Procure them as the receipts from these tickets go entirely to the Scholarship Fund.

Mrs. J. E. McArthur and Miss Josephine Ackerman were appointed members of a joint committee of the Business and Professional Women's Club and the University Women's Club to consider the offering of women's names for civic boards.

SPEAKER

At the close of the business meeting, Mrs. Douglas Wright introduced the speaker of the evening, Mrs. F. H. Bellstedt, a Club member, who was a guest in the South African town of Wellington, where she was graduated there from Huguenot University College which is affiliated with the University of South Africa.

Speaking on the subject "Education in South Africa", Mrs. Bellstedt reported that there were 13 school years up to matriculation, and that primary schools were nearly separated from the high schools. Some schools were co-educational, others not, depending on the choice of the school boards. With the consolidation of small country schools, children beyond walking distance use school buses as they do here, or stayed at school hostels where some students were weekly boarders while others were home only two weekends during a term. There were separate hostels for boys and girls.

The school year in South Africa began in January, and ended early in December, with a week's holiday at Easter, three weeks in mid-year, one week near the end of September, and six weeks at the end of the year when South Africa has its warm season.

TWO OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

With two official languages, English and Afrikaans, South Africa had now, she said, two completely different sets of schools to reach linguistic in schools for each language. In earlier years a dual language system was used, but by the time a pupil left school, he was practically bilingual. Whether the language was English or Afrikaans, the second language was first taught beginning in the second school year. This called for instruction of English and Afrikaans speaking children naturally seemed to be directed towards mutual understanding towards racialism.

In the Afrikaans language, Mrs. Bellstedt explained, was an independent modern language, derived from the Dutch, but a form of its already virile literature.

Hospitalization's New Concept Talk Given at W.H.A. Meeting

The Women's Hospital Auxiliary welcomed as its guest speaker, Dr. Donald Scott, who was introduced by past president, Mrs. W. Finkle as a most entertaining person, interested in all phases of hospital work. Dr. Scott used the talking part in church and community affairs to illustrate his topic on the subject, "A new concept in Hospital Organization."

In this new planning an open ward with central nursing station, complete with supplies and highly specialized equipment with highly trained personnel would be right at hand for immediate intensive care. Under this system the patient would be less apprehensive, and the staff able to cope with emergencies.

INTERMEDIATE CARE

When sufficiently recovered, a move to intermediate care would be in order for the patient. Here, a moderate amount of nursing would be required and a less strict routine followed.

The next phase of hospital care, rehabilitation would consist mainly of teaching toward rehabilitation and patients would be encouraged to care for many of their own needs.

At this point, Dr. Scott spoke of the long term chronic case with the depressing outlook with the recovery period long and tedious and suggested that such cases need special attention.

HOME CARE

Lastly, in his new order, a team from the hospital would continue to care for the patient at home, to provide therapy and supervision. Altogether, this new concept of hospital care would be a streamlined system of caring for the sick in all their varied needs where, if necessary, immediate, intensive, health care and treatment would be at hand in rooms specially arranged and equipped for handling it.

Dr. Scott predicted many new approaches in the treatment methods of caring for the sick.

A question period followed and many queries were expertly answered.

Mrs. F. Bayley expressed the thanks of all to Dr. Scott for his explanation of these new ventures in the planning of hospitals.

Mrs. M. F. L. Jones, the president, conducted the business of the auxiliary and in the beginning, reports from the various departments were given.

Mrs. W. Musgrove read the minutes of the previous meeting and Mrs. W. Thompson, secretary of letters regarding hospital business and also had written high school girls regarding nursing transportation to Kingston and Toronto.

A satisfactory account of the Coffee Shop was given by Mrs. H. E. Murray. It was mentioned the new air conditioner to be installed shortly, and asked for more assistants for afternoons.

Mrs. N. C. Macfie announced she had mailed 207 bulletins for the April meeting.

The exercise puppett committee with Mrs. P. Allcorn as convener, has been busy using the many donations of material in its work and has sent to isolations hospitals, books and crayons for sick children.

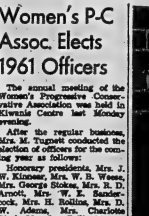
Arts and Crafts Exhibition Displays Meticulous Design

The annual exhibition and tea of the Belleville Arts and Crafts Club was held Saturday, April 22, at the Recreation Centre, Pinnacle Street. The exhibition was opened by His Worship, Mayor A. McLean Haig, who complimented the members on their contribution to community life and wished them continued growth and expansion in their chosen fields. The president of the club, Mrs. John Grant, also said a few words of welcome to the many people gathered to enjoy the display and tea.

The upper floor of the Recreation Centre was most artistically arranged with the exhibits and tea tables surrounding a miniature rock garden containing a fountain, pools and many lovely flowers.

FINE DESIGN



That these arts and handicrafts had left the field of the amateur and entered that of the professional was easily discerned by the concept, design and meticulous workmanship with which they were executed. Each object gave the feeling that the artist enjoyed creating it, whether it was one of a purely decorative or useful purpose. Each bore the definite stamp of its creator being highly individual. The craft exhibits were under the conversantship of Mrs. R. Williamson. Instructors in the crafts include: mosaics: Mrs. Phyllis Diamond; and the daffodil arrangements throughout: Mrs. O. Bingleman.

Mrs. Phyllis Diamond was cashier for the occasion.

ARRANGING EXHIBITS

Assisting in the arranging of the exhibits were Mr. Jack Williamson, Mrs. H. Robbins, Mrs. J. W. Flatt, Mrs. G. Stackhouse, Mrs. F. Godden, Mrs. F. Carnahan, Mrs. W. Whitehead, Mrs. R. Brettingham and Mrs. O. Bingleman.

The artistic posters advertising the event were made by Mrs. W. G. Wylie, Miss Marion Geisthorpe, Mrs. W. T. Simpson and Mrs. O. Bingleman and Mrs. W. H. Heaven.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Albert Kingston are shown following their recent marriage in Mountain View United Church. The bride is the former Miss Jean Evelyn Barber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Barber, of Belleville, R.R. No. 7. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Kingston of Belleville.

KINGSTON — BARBER

Mountain View United Church was the scene on Monday, April 3rd, at 12.30 p.m., for a very pretty early spring wedding when Jean Evelyn Townsend, assistant pastor of Bridgewater Street United, Clifford F. Barber, to Charles Albert Kingston, son of Mr. and Mrs. of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Kingston. Tall standards of pink gladioli, and white lilacs, banked with ferns and Easter lilies, adorned the chancel rail. While soft music created the guest pews.

Mr. Robert Barber, cousin of the bride, provided the wedding music, which included Purcell's "Processional" and the "Trumpet Tune," and accompanied the church choir in its rendition of "O Perfect Love" before the ceremony, and "The Lord's Prayer" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in her bridal gown of white crystal silk organza fashioned with fitted bodice having a rounded scalloped neckline with scalloped lace trimmed sleeves, and bell-lowing skirt in princess style panels, the side which cascaded into a chapel train, was accented with Valenciennes lace forming panel treatment at the waistline. The combination veil and headdress edged with pearl petals and iridescent sequins, was of illusion tulle in chapel length. She carried a cascade bouquet of deep-red roses mingled with white stephanotis and ivy.

She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Marilyn Fox, as matron of honor, of Bloomfield, by Mrs. Grace McKeown, of Springbrook and Miss Dianne Dalton of Peterborough, as bridesmaids, and by Miss Penny Barber, cousin of the bride, as flower girl. All senior attendants were gowned in floor length organza in aquamarine, with matching roses appliqued at the waistline, and with full bouffant sleeves. The short bouffant skirts were accented in the same manner. They wore matching organza headdresses and mitts and carried crescent bouquets of pink carnations and white mums.

The little flower girl was in white silk organza, featuring a pleated bodice with short puff sleeves and bouffant skirt. She wore a white floral bandeau, white shoes and carried a basket of red Sweetheart roses and white mums.

Mr. Berton Kingston, of Belleville, attended the bridegroom, while the ushers were Mr. John Barber of Scarboro, Ontario, and Mr. Douglas Kingston of Belleville.

For the reception held in the church parlor, which was pretty decorated with pink carnations, white chrysanthemums and snapdragons.

The bride's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake topped with white spring bouquet and encircled about the base with white tulle and scattered red Sweetheart roses. The bridal flowers completed the nuptial setting, complemented by silver candlesticks and pink candles.

The guests were received by bride's mother, who wore navy blue silk crepe with pink hat, matching gloves and navy shoes, with corsage of white carnations and stephanotis tied with a white bow, by the bridegroom traveling to Niagara Falls and Washington D.C. the bride chose a beige-toned walking suit with tri-toned shoes, purse and scarf, light brown hat and gloves, and corsage of Talisman roses.

The bride was entertained, previous to her marriage by a Kitchen Shower given by her mother, and at a rehearsal dinner by the bridegroom party given by the parents of the bridegroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Kingston are residing at 21 North Front St.

Nurses Have Good Surplus To Work On

TORONTO (CP)—The Registered Nurses Association of Ontario was told at its 35th annual meeting Friday a comfortable financial surplus would be elected in benefits to members in the form of extra conferences and institute services and a larger study loan fund.

The meeting was told $10,000 has been included in next year's budget for extending conferences and institutes designed for the improvement of patient care.

Another $30,000 will be added to the permanent education loan fund to assist graduate nurses to take further preparation at university level. The association is also budgeting $2,400 to assist students in training.

Laura Barr, in her first report as executive secretary, announced membership of 24,092 or 62.2 per cent of the total number of registered nurses in the province.

Helen McArthur, who headed a working party investigating the proposed college of nursing — a big issue at last year's convention — said the subject would not be presented this year.

Word had been received from the minister of health, she said, "that it appears to be in the course of wisdom to leave the proposed legislation in advance this year."

Miss McArthur added: "Our past history has indicated that new nursing legislation has never come in a hurry and we note that the minister states that the delay by no means spells the end of what he still believes to be sound legislation for standards of nursing education and practice."

Research May Put to Rest Some of Fears

HALIFAX (CP) — A group of Halifax doctors is in the midst of a medical research project which, if successful, might help put to rest some of the fears held by pregnant women.

The group is making a study of the effect on unborn babies of such illnesses as mumps, measles, influenza and the common cold when they are caught by pregnant women. It has been known for years that measles and certain types of polio can harm the health of the baby if the mother gets the illness early in pregnancy but there are many questions still unanswered.

For two years the three-member team, working at the Grace Maternity Hospital with money supplied by the National Research Council in cooperation with the Dalhousie University medical school, has searched for the answers. The project may take three or four more years.

Simply, the project works this way. A pregnant woman who has caught any of the diseases and who wishes to assist the project is examined regularly by a member of the team during pregnancy. The tests are followed by two years' observation of the child to see whether there are any delayed effects.

Out of all these tests, the doctors hope to establish a clear relationship between the mothers' illness and the babies' health.

One of the doctors, Dr. Sergio S. Causing, says the basic objective of the work is to improve the chances for a healthy mother and baby.

"Beliefs are founded on investigation and this work may eventually prove many assumptions wrong. Whatever the results, the research will be of value."

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. G. A. — Without any warning, he walked in on us, with a beard.

Warren A. — Why should they care? It's a personal project, isn't it?

Mrs. G. A. — Imagine my humiliation when Warren came home for his spring vacation with a three-month-old beard which he hadn't said a word about in his letters. He just turned the key and walked in on my cousin's party, where all my friends were waiting to greet him.

Look at him. You'd never know that behind that mess there's a clean, good looking fellow. I almost fainted when I saw this freak, this monster at my door. My first impulse was to call the police. Is this supposed to turn him into a Samson?

Anyway, when he grinned and said, "Hi-ya, Mom!" the voice was familiar. It was the same old Warren, up to some new tricks. Only this one can't be laughed off. It must be shaved off!

Warren A. — I wanted to try growing a beard. Lots of the men at school are doing it. Since when is a guy supposed to write home for his mother's permission? It's just too bad that my vacation coincided with my beard-cultivation period. In another month I'll decide whether I want a Vandyke or mutton-chops, and I'll start to tame it.

I like the shrubbery. I admit it's going haywire now, but when I begin to groom it, my mother may like it too. As to her friends, I'm not worried about their opinion.

If my mother is embarrassed, that's too bad. Some of the Junior Miss dresses she goes around in embarrass me, while we're on the subject, but like my beard, that's personal and I don't dictate.

The Council — Breathes there a man, Mrs. A., who doesn't wonder how he'd look with whiskers and as Abe Lincoln or Rip Van Winkle beard? What color, what directions, how long? These are questions some of them find answers to at some time and under various pretexts. Warren chose the ideal time of life for Operation Beard — a period when he doesn't have to worry about anybody's frowns but his boss's nor his wife's nor his customers'! Only his mother's, and she's a pushover.

Perhaps we can help Warren push her closer to equanimity by pronouncing beard - growing a harmless pastime. Whatever the motivation, be it curiosity, experimentation, or out-and-out exhibitionism, the whole project dwindles usually and, in retrospect, becomes a "passing fancy."

At any rate, we doubt whether Warren will hold on to the bush after graduation, when he goes out into the business world for a job. Unless, of course, he looks for a job in a barber's college, or as a grizzled Forty-Niner in a TV western. And there's always a chance the Man-from-Schweppes may seek a stand-in, while he satisfies his own curiosity as to how he'd look without a beard!

Warren's only bootoo was in not lopping his mu off ahead of time, so she (and the girls) could be steeled emotionally for the fuzzy-wuzzy. It does take some adjusting to. Kissing through a "mattress," for example, is a bit of an art. Failing to have warned Mrs. A., he might have stopped off and had the adornment trimmed, shaped, and dressed a bit, so as not to burst in like a survivor of a shipwreck.

No, Mrs. A., there's nothing wrong with growing a beard. It's an innocent way of making life exciting and interesting for a young man. It brings him a fleeting distinction and recognition which he needs. When he sees how much real care it actually requires to look smart, he may well decide to chuck it for the good old safety blades.

Asparagus Is In Season

By Mary Moore

Last year in this column at this time I gave you the careful method of cooking asparagus to retain its precious flavor, vitamins and minerals. I accompanied this with a recipe for Genuine Hollandaise and another for Asparagus Parmesan.

I still think that asparagus cooked in a minimum of water for a minimum of minutes is just make it tender but retain its bright greenness is the best way to serve it — accompanied with hot melted butter or genuine Hollandaise.

But it is time we branched out a little for some budget-conscious cooks find asparagus a little too expensive. Hence our recipes today are extenders — calling on the faithful casserole that so many of you cherish.

Boys Abuse Baby Sister

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—What can I do to keep my two boys from hurting the baby? They are four and six years of age. She is just three months. Some of the time they pat her and show some interest. But the youngest one slapped her one day and I had to scold him for it. The older one snatched away her rattle and made her cry. I am getting nervous about what will happen next—JITTERS.

DEAR JITTERS—Trouble is, they are jealous. You only add to it when you scold them and put their noses even more out of joint. Of course you do have to keep them from hurting little sister.

They wouldn't have to be jealous if they were still sure of their place in your affections. Part of the job is to show yourself with them; both boys need times with you which belong to them individually. The other part is to share their sister with them.

One mother said that since the new baby came she had no trouble in getting the older ones up, and washed and dressed in the mornings. The secret? First one ready for breakfast could hold the baby. Take a tip from her and figure out some rewards which revolve around caring for or playing with Number Three.

DEAR DORIS:—I have five younger brothers and sisters. Lots of times I come home to find no dinner ready and dishes to do both at noon and night. Mom gets talking sometimes on the telephone and forgets what time it is. She enjoys talking to people and is quite active in school work. But when I try to tell her—something she says I'm not going to boss her. She is not very well and maybe I'm expecting too much but I am trying to be reasonable.

I wash floors and paint, and wash all the children's clothes. I go to the Parent-Teachers meeting for Mom and have talked to their teachers. They are doing quite fine in school. They are in Girl Guides and Boy Scouts and I'm quite proud of them. But I want a life for myself too. I don't want to be selfish.—SISTER SUE.

DEAR SISTER SUE:—Little danger of that! And you are certainly entitled to a life of your own.

Are the others doing their share? Sometimes a capable older sister falls into the role of waiting on everybody. It looks as if this is what has happened here. If you weren't around, they would have to manage somehow. Even your mother has not realized that she must save you or something will have to give.

You have a right to time off; time for fun and for your own pursuits. Talk to your mother and see whether the other children and your father could not share the load.

DEAR DORIS:—We are trying to start something in our area for the employment of people who have some kind of physical handicap. I understand that such places exist. Where can I learn how to go about it?—CLUB MEMBER.

Emily Post Says

WHEN YOU BRING GUESTS TO YOUR CLUB

A letter from a reader—Mrs. K. L. V., of Chicago — offers some interesting questions. I quote:

"Your column about the actions of waiters, when serving club luncheons or dinners, certainly struck home! As a member of three clubs here, I know that trying to correct this unpleasant situation has been a long battle. I think your column will help all concerned.

"I wonder if you can help me with some other problems that come up at these functions? For example, a large luncheon is given, at which a prominent speaker is to be honored. Members of the club are allowed to bring a certain number of guests (the members of course, pay for them). Small tables, seating about eight or ten each, are placed at the ends of the head table, at which are seated the president and officers of the club, other important guests, and of course, the speaker.

"My question here is: When seating my guests at one of the small tables, should I place them so that they face the head table? If so, should I put between my two most important guests? This worries me because, if I do this, I, the hostess, actually have the best seat of all! Should I do this, or take my place with my back to the big table?

"Another thing that bothers me is how to write the names on placecards. Should it be "Mary Jones," "Mrs. Richard Jones," or just "Mrs. Jones"?

"I would be truly appreciative of your telling me what you think is the correct procedure to follow in both of these cases."

Even though you, as hostess, arrive at what you call "the best seat," it would be very rude if you did not have your two ranking guests on your right and left. This is the way to do it, even if it does put you facing the head table, while some of your other guests have their backs to it. They can always turn their chairs around during the actual speech.

Placecards contain only the surname, "Mrs. Jones." Or the only exception would be if two of your guests happened to have the same surname. Then it would be "Mrs. Richard Jones" and "Mrs. Paul Jones." It is never proper to use first names on a placecard at such a function.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Question — I am in an awful mess! A close friend of mine recently had her second grandchild. When her birthday rolled around, and wanting to be really thoughtful, I got two pair of gold dice — an which the names of the two babies were engraved — for her to wear on her charm bracelet. She seemed delighted when I gave them to her. Then, to my horror, I noticed she already had two charms on the bracelet, just like those I had given her! She made no comment and neither did I. What should I have done — or not done? — Mrs. A. S. H., Baltimore, Md.

Answer — You should have been frank, right then and there! Not going so has resulted in her hoping you won't notice the other charms, and you being upset. I would suggest being honest with her now. To make it easier, purchase some other gift to take their place, and ask her to give you back the charms. She may fuss about it, but tell her you won't have it any other way. Make a joke, of it laugh it off, and forget it.

In a situation such as this, it is wise to play safe in the beginning and tell a close friend that you are planning a personalized gift, just in case it might be a duplication. While this does take away from the surprise on the birthday itself, it avoids embarrassment on both sides.

East Hastings District W.I. Marks 60th Anniversary

The newly decorated township hall at Melrose was the picturesque setting for a rapacity gathering of ladies who met last Wednesday, to celebrate the 60th anniversary of East Hastings District W.I., with Melrose branch as hostess.

At the front of the hall was an elaborate plaque in Institute colors of blue and gold with a mammoth glittering W in the centre; the district banner was on display while a beautiful basket of flowers in memory of the late Mrs. A. MacFarlane, a valued former president, occupied a prominent spot on the platform. Colorful plants also adorned the piano and the window sills.

Mrs. Tucker opened the meeting. Mrs. K. McMechan gave an "Address of Welcome" and each branch in the district contributed an item on the program which was as follows: Tyendinaga East: medley of old-time songs, including "When You and I Were Young, Maggie" and "Grandfather's Clock"; by a quintet dressed in quaint costumes worn years ago

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The next two or three weeks are going to be tough ones on the bowls-minded oakey-conscious. The curtain has gone up on the "Knife-and-Fork" League. Turkey, roast beef, ham, etc., are going to take a terrific battering. The will-power of the dirt-minded will be assulted.

The bowling leagues, mixed, male and female, take front and centre. This is the time of year they honor champions, collective and individual, share the monetary awards and make the within ring around the banquet table.

Waistlines take a boating, inside and out. New presidents and executives are elected or old ones returned. The victors proudly accept their awards. The vanquished jittily echo the old Dodger war cry, "Wait until next year." Everybody has a good time.

There is good-natured raillery. Champions, generally, are quiet in their newly-won glory unless baited. Near-champions relate what might have been. Seasonal rivalry. Keen appreciation for the verbal fire and counter-fire. It is all good clean fun.

Usually nobody goes home empty-handed. True the captain of the championship teams totes away a big trophy. His team-mates accept individual awards. Triples, singles and average winners get their share. But the monetary awards, in most cases, are graduated so that everybody even the last also-ran receives a token for his activities.

Bowling is a great developer of sportsmanship. In all the years this reporter has been a guest knight at the keglers' round tables I have yet to see what is termed in other realms of sport, a poor loser.

The game seems to breed a fine type of fellowship. The sort of camaraderie that is typical of war veteran organizations. Envy, perhaps in one sense of the word but not green-eyed jealousy. If there is then bowlers, generally speaking, possess that admirable trait of being able to conceal the baser instincts.

Perhaps the mixed tops started the idea but of late the top-bracket circuits like the Major "A" and Classic League have included the distaff side in the post-season festivities.

And the gals have enjoyed themselves. Last year the boys in charge created an Hawaiian motif that was a knockout from miniature palm trees to real leis and pine-appied ham. Not to mention a grass-skirted hula gal.

This year, Wednesday night to be exact, they're going "Western." There'll be cowpokes and cowgals (each gal will be presented with a Stetson hat) a chuckwagon dinner of western beef and all the El Rancho trimmings. The Major "A" and Classic hambros are going all out on this one. Horses and guns will be checked at the bal corral. The rodeo is being held at the K. of C. ranch.

Thursday night another fine bowling party is scheduled. The Quinte Mixed League is holding forth with their usual outstanding dinner-dance at the Club Canara. This has been one of the "most-looked-for" social events in the bowling calendar for years and officials tell me this year's ball will be one of the best ever scheduled.

Friday night the Deloro Mixed League is holding forth with its annual festivities. Our man Garry A., poised on the brink of matrimony, will miss after that one. On the same night the Quinte Riding and District League is holding its first annual "Horseman's Ball" at the Club Canara, and this, too, promises to be a gala affair.

On May 9 at the K. of C. hall, the Major "B" League is staging its annual dinner and presentation evening. Gowanlock O'Feever is said to be one of the peckers of the evening and has secured the services of Perry Mason to help refute the charges of one Jack Storms. (the "D.A.") and company, who have threatened to bring Zwick's Island its first public hanging.

Tigers Claw Angels, Take Over Lead

Orioles Take Yankee Series

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

Bob Scheffing, Detroit's fifth manager in three years, looks like the man to see today at Tiger Stadium with his youth movement paying big dividends.

The Tigers left their opener and then reeled off seven straight victories, taking over the American League lead in their weekend series with Los Angeles Angels who now have lost seven in a row.

Jim Donohue, 22 - year - old right - hander not expected to stick with the big club, figured prominently in both of Sunday's victories, 3-1 and 3-2 in 11 innings. The youngster, up from St. Paul, stamped out a ninth inning rally and saved the first game for Don Mossi. He won the second in relief of Jim Bunning.

Jack Kralick, a young lefty with a chance to be the No. 3 man on Manager Mickey Vernon's behind Pedro Ramos and Camilo Pascual, shut out Washington 1-0 with relief help. He also drove in the only run with a fifth-inning single that broke up a string of 19 scoreless innings and gave Dick Donovan.

Jackie Brandt and Brooks Robinson led a 13-hit Baltimore attack in a 4-1 victory over New York behind Milt Pappas. Willie Mays, Mantle's fifth home run. Cleveland shaded Kansas City 10-8 with the help of a wild pitch and a throwing error in a game that is a new American League record and tied the major league mark when a total of 14 pitchers—seven on each side—saw action.

Bob Shaw, Chicago's jobless holdout in spring training, pitched Chicago White Sox to a 7-1 decision over Boston and an even break in a doubleheader. Tom Brewer won the first for Boston 4-3 although his arm tightened and he left the game after eight innings.

In Saturday's games Kansas City defeated Cleveland Indians 7-2; Minnesota edged Washington Senators 2-1; Boston whipped Chicago 7-6 and Baltimore Orioles defeated New York Yankees 5-3 in the first game. The second game, tied 5-5 in the seventh inning, was called because of rain. The game between Los Angeles Angels and Detroit was rained out.

Scheffing, fired as boss of Chicago Cubs in 1960, continued to get the most out of his Tigers. Bruce was two outs away from his first Big League shutout when Ted Kluszewski homered and Don Lee doubled in the Angels. Scheffing brought in Terry Fox who hit two men, loading the bases. Donohue balled him out by retiring pinch hitters Ken Hunt and Leo Burke on pop flies.

In the second game Dick Brown's pinch single won in the 11th after Angel pitchers loaded the bases with walks. Donohue, 6-4½ and 190 pounds, succeeded Bunning who went out for a pinch hitter after 10 innings. The pinch hitter, Dick Gernert, had tied the score with a homer.

Kralick delighted 13,406 fans who ignored morning rain to watch the Twins play the Senators. After Billy Gardner doubled in the fifth, Kralick drove him home with a single. Donovan, beaten on errors opening day by Chicago and whipped by Cleveland after the season's first win, was another tough one allowing only four hits.

Chuck Estrada, knocked out in the first inning last Sunday, bounced back and beat the Yankees with help from Dick Hall. Brandt and Brooks Robinson each had three hits off the slants of loser Danny McDevitt and four successors.

Shaw relieved the first 14 men he faced and entered nine hits after Tom Brewer won the opener for Boston in a steady drizzle.

The A's lost when, with two on base in the ninth by walks, Joe Koppel's fourth ball to Johnny Temple was called a pitch, letting a run score. Caliber Haywood Sullivan threw wildly, letting a second run come in. Wynn Hawks was the winner over Ken Johnson.

Hot Leafs Trim Jersey, Share Lead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The not - so - secret weapon that has moved San Juan Marlins into the International League's first division is a 31-year - old outfielder named James Edward Beauchamp.

The Marlins have won three of the six games they have played so far and Beachamp, who hit .358 at Tulsa last season, has personally accounted for two of them. He broke up Friday's game against Buffalo with a three - run eight-inning homer and followed it Saturday with a ninth - inning homer with one on base to give the Marlins a 5-4 decision over the Bisons in San Juan.

The second game of the scheduled doubleheader, which drew only 1,000 spectators, was rained out.

Toronto's torrid Maple Leafs had to go 11 innings to beat Jersey City Jerseys 12-7 in another poorly - attended game, but they moved into a tie with Richmond for first place as the Virginians split a doubleheader with Syracuse Chiefs. The game at Jersey City drew 2,002 fans.

Syracuse took the opener from Richmond 7-3 on a pinch homer and lost the nightcap by the same score in the seventh, also on a homer.

Columbus Jets made it four straight with a 4-2 first - game victory but the Red Wings came back to win 10-4 on Columbus errors.

It was the first victory of the season for both Syracuse and Richester.

Richmond walloped Syracuse 12-2 Saturday, Toronto at Jersey City and Buffalo at San Juan, Saturday's other scheduled games, were rained out.

The Bisons, with homers by Felix Torres, Billy Taylor and Jackie Davis accounting for three of their runs, led 6-1 Sunday going into the eighth. Then San Juan's John Gleon and Ben Mateoski homered off Max Surkont in the eighth to make it 6-4 and Beauchamp broke it up after Henry Mason relieved Surkont with one out in the ninth.

Toronto scored six runs in the 11th inning against Jersey City after Jim Fullmer, Carman, seeking a November Boston Garden date with an eye toward a $200,000 gate and as much as $150,000 more in television money, already has been negotiating with Marv Jenson, Fullmer's manager.

Each fighter has a stout standing in his way. Fender, mostly on the strength of his 3 for what Paul hopes will be a repeat of his seven - round TKO of the Englishman in Boston last January, Fender has been guaranteed $100,000.

Onetime middleweight and welterweight ruler Basilio blinked through a swollen face tatooed by Fender left jabs and hooks to predict Paul will not go past Promoter Sam Silver- far apart. Fullmer has been a top contender for middleweight honors since he won the title from Gene Fullmer in December.

Relaxing after his third successful defence Saturday night against gallant little Carmen Basilio, Fender admitted: "I want this Fullmer so bad I can taste it. I want to square this thing away."

Fender, 30 - year - old ex-fireman from Brookline, Mass., is considered the world's 160-pound king in Massachusetts, New York and Europe. Fullmer, from West Jordan, Utah, is the 48-state National Boxing Association champion.

Though the match has not been made, the camps are not able to beat Fullmer. Carmen, who lost a unanimous 15-round decision to Fender Saturday, has been stopped twice by Fullmer.

"I fought them both," Basilio said. "It would be a tough fight but Fullmer would win. Fender would stick and move; Fullmer would just crowd and shove his way along and wear him down and then whack him out of there."

Fender did a convincing job on the 34 - year - old Basilio, knocking him down for an eight count in the 13th round and nine count in the 15th before 12,168 garden fans. Basilio had not been floored in 78 previous pro bouts.

Fender withstood some jolting bombs by Carmen in the early going before taking over with a stylish offence and defence built on the left hand.

On the official cards, referee Eddie Bradley had Fender 149-135, judge Joe Blumsack 147-132 and judge Harry Sundberg 147-138.

Fender received a cut over his left eye and Basilio, who said he is going to "sleep-on" thoughts of retirement, had a bloody nose.

Fender continued to use his right hand sparingly — the one he broke in a 1955 bout with Fullmer — but employed it effectively on the inside. He says his right is ready for Fullmer now. Paul went the full 10 rounds with one good hand in the loss to Fullmer six years ago.

Soo Birds Even Series

SAULT STE. MARIE (CP) — The Eastern Professional Hockey League wraps up its 1961 championship series Tuesday night with Hull - Ottawa Canadiens favored to grab the glory in a showdown with Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds.

Thunderbirds made the best-of-seven final look easy on the ice when they beat Canadiens 3-2 here Saturday night. The deciding game is set for Hull-Ottawa and Canadiens are favored because of the home-ice advantage.

Thunderbirds, second during the regular season, deadlocked the set when they scored two goals in the first period and one in the second to hold off a rally by Canadiens.

Hull-Ottawa moved to within one goal of clinching Thunderbirds when centre Bill Carter scored with 33 seconds remaining in the third period. But that was as far as Canadiens got as 4,340 customers looked on.

Western League Expands

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Seattle Totems Western Hockey League has expanded into California in what league governors describe as the first giant stride toward unifying major league status.

Addition of Los Angeles and San Francisco and dropping of Victoria was approved at the league's annual meeting Sunday. Directors said the move will lead to a challenge within three to five years for the Stanley Cup, cherished by the National League, as its exclusive property.

Al Leader of Seattle, re-elected president of the WHL for a three-year-old term, said the league will seek exemption from the NHL player draft so that NHL clubs can protect their players. NHL teams now can draft any number of players for the WHL for $20,000 a man.

Jim Piggott, Saskatoon business manager of the Quakers, said the Victoria Cougars this season, was given permission to transfer his franchise to Los Angeles. The club will play out of the new 14,000-seat Coliseum.

Coley Hall, Vancouver hockey promoter since 1945, won the San Francisco franchise over a bid by Jack Perrin, owner of the WHL Warriors. Hall will put a new club into San Francisco's 12,000-seat Cow Palace. He has more than $200,000 to install an ice plant in the Palace in time for opening of the 1961-62 schedule Oct. 13.

The league has nine teams—San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Spokane, Victoria, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver—and a bid for a 10th franchise in the 1962-63 season. The latter was made Sunday by petroleum manufacturer Art Edwards of Long Beach, Calif.

Spahn Misses Shutout

Phillies' Art Mahaffey Whiffs 17

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Staff Writer

Art Mahaffey, 22, a Philadelphia right hander, came within one strikeout of joining Bobby Shantz and Sandy Koufax in the record books Sunday by retiring 17 Chicago Cubs on strikes in the top feat of a busy day.

If it had not been for Mahaffey and Frank Sullivan, who teamed up with a startling pair of 1-0 shutouts for the last-place Phillies, the big news might have been Milwaukee's Warren Spahn who won game No. 289 on his 40th birthday. Spahn just missed a shutout when Don Hoak homered for Pittsburgh in the ninth, but he won 3-1.

Or it might have been Wally Moon, the spectacular Los Angeles Dodger who continued to blast those "Moon shots" over the left field screen at the Coliseum. He hit another, his eighth homer of the season, all to the "wrong field" for a left handed batter. Moon's hit that gave him a .500 batting average helped the league - leading Dodgers trim Cincinnati 5-1 on a six-hitter by Roger Craig.

HAD A CHANCE

San Francisco had a chance to take over first place after beating St. Louis 2-1 in the opener. The Giants took a 4-3 lead into the ninth inning of the second game but the Cardinals rose up with five runs in the ninth and got a split 7-4. Maury McDermott's pinch double drove in three big runs.

Sunday's feat may be only the first of many to come from Mahaffey, a talented fast baller. In the first four innings Mahaffey struck out nine men. Going to the ninth he had 16. He struck out the first man but fell one short of the record of 18 set by Feller of Cleveland in 1938 and tied by Koufax of the Dodgers in 1959. Mahaffey allowed only four hits.

Although Dick Ellsworth allowed only three hits in the first game, the Phils got a big number Sullivan when Bobby Gene Smith crashed a home run in the ninth.

Spahn was closing in on his 326rd shutout when Hoak hit his home run in the ninth. He gave up seven hits and struck out four, boosting his lifetime total to 2,085. Vern Law, the Pirates' 20-game winner of last year, suffered his third straight defeat.

Moon continued his fantastic spring spurt in the Coliseum where he has hit safely in all 12 games. Although he hits left-handed, he has punched all of his eight homers to left or left center, most of them over the left field screen. Don Demeter also homered for the league-leading Dodgers and Jerry Lynch smashed his second pinch homer for the Reds.

Just when the Giants appeared poised to take over first place, the Cardinals woke up with their five-run spurt in the ninth to grab the second game. McDermott, signed as a free agent to help the bullpen corps, smashed his three - run pinch double relief man. Jim Duffalo. McDermott saved the decision for Lindy McDaniel, for whom he hit, although Mickey Micelotta the last inning himself.

Billy O'Dell, who failed in the second game, teamed up with rookie Bob Bolin to put down a Cardinal uprising in the first game and saved the verdict for Sam Jones.

Saturday's scores: Chicago 6, Philadelphia 4; Cincinnati 6, Los Angles 1. Two games were postponed by rain: St. Louis at San Francisco and Milwaukee at Pittsburgh.

Liked Kitchener Ice

Maroons Shade Terriers

KITCHENER, (CP) — Winnipeg Maroons found the Kitchener ice much to their liking Sunday and blasted their way back into the running for the Canadian senior hockey championship.

They scored two first - period goals and made them stand up for a 3-1 victory over Galt Terriers in the third game of the best - of - seven Allan Cup final which Galt now leads 2-1.

The Maroons promptly said it would be better for both clubs to have more games transferred to Kitchener, complaining the surfaces at nearby Galt is "like gravel."

The Terriers have not been too happy about their ice either. But the fourth game will be played there tonight and Jack Roxburgh, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, indicated it is too late to change the rest of the series which calls for only the seventh game, if necessary, to be played in Kitchener next Sunday.

The Winnipeg win toppled the Terriers' unbeaten record in 11 playoff games and 16 including league play.

So pleased was Maroons coach Gord Simpson that he predicted the club will not go the seven - game limit. He praised his club for an "all-out effort" but said the biggest better Kitchener ice made the difference.

Galt coach Lloyd Roubell offered no alibis although he admit he felt the second Winnipeg goal came on an offside play.

"We didn't get the break at we did in the first two games and our shooting was terrible," said Roubell. "I think our players were trying too hard, although I figure we outplayed them after the first 10 minutes."

As they did in the first two games, the Maroons took the lead early, John Kendall, a left-winger playing his first game of the series, was in the ice with the Terriers shorthanded and Ray Abbott made it 2-0 before the period ended.

The second period was scoreless and in the third the season's record crowd of 7,366 fans began to chant for the kind of late rally that has become almost routine for the Ontario Hockey Association senior champions.

But it failed to develop and only 29 seconds were left in the game when Joe Malo cut in from left wing and fired the puck into the right corner past Gord Dibley to save the Terriers from a shutout.

Galt outshot the Westerners 35-30 but Dibley was equal to the occasion and his mates effectively killed off seven minor penalties, compared with only four to the Terriers.

Kendall and Dibley, who took over from replacement goalie Don Collins, flew from Winnipeg to join the club Saturday.

Kendall got his goal at 6:13, batting in a rebound from the Terriers with Galt's Pete Kowalchuk in the penalty box for elbowing.

Abbott and Rose Parke broke behind the Galt defence at 17:36. Bost Hurley stopped a shot but it bounced high in the air, hit him on the beck as he fell and trickled into the net.

Galt protests that it was offside went for nothing.

The Terriers had their best opportunity late in the third when Winnipeg was two men short for 45 seconds. But Dibley turned back two good drives, including one from close in by Darryl Sly.

Trap, Gun Results

The Quinte Trap and Gun Club opened its 1961 season's activities over the weekend and a veterans of the shotgun sport got off to a flying start by turning in a perfect score.

Burnley Does Trick

Mighty Spurs Defeated

LONDON (Reuters)—Tottenham Hotspur, the team that clinched the English First Division soccer championship last week, crashed to a 4-2 defeat Saturday against Burnley, last season's champions.

Burnley trailed 3-0 at the half, Gordon Harris and Ray Pointer booted goals during the first eight minutes of the second half play and Harris and Jimmy Robson added the others.

Wolverhampton (2nd and 4 times blasted Arsenal 5-1 to take over second place from Sheffield Wednesday.

The Wolves have 57 points, one more than Wednesday, which lost 3-1 to Everton. But Sheffield Wednesday has two more games to play to the Wolves' one, so Wednesday can come out ahead.

The Spurs' defeat must have given heart to Leicester City, which meets Tottenham in the Football Association Cup final in London May 6. Leicester gained a 3-2 tie at Nottingham.

The relegation struggle probably was resolved. Preston North End and almost certainly Aston Villa United will be playing Second Division soccer next season.

East Anglia will field a First Division team for the first time next season. Ipswich also made certain of promotion from the Second Division by blanking Sunderland 4-0.

Smother Moncton 11-2

Irish Reach Cup Final

By BARRY SHARPE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — St. Michael's College Majors won a berth in the Memorial Cup final Sunday after a whirlwind series that left the opposition shaking their heads in bewilderment.

"I'll never know what happened," said coach Ron Gaudet in the gloom of Moncton Beavers' dressing room.

What happened was that the champions of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior 'A' Series demolished the Beavers in the first crack at the Eastern Canada Final a Maritimes at team has had in 37 years.

The Majors wrapped up the best-of-five series in the minimum number of games by bombing Beavers 11-2, the same score as in Wednesday's opener. In between they eased off for a 6-2 victory.

Next stop for St. Michael's is Edmonton and a best-of-seven set for the Dominion junior title against Edmonton Oil Kings.

Moncton fired the first goal Sunday and St. Mike's came on with 11 straight before the Beavers managed the final tally.

Andre Champagne was the Majors' big gun with four goals and two assists to give him a total of six goals and seven assists for the series. Brian Walsh with two, Terry O'Malley, Paul Jackson, Duncan MacDonald, Barry McKenzie and Sonny Osborne scored the other goals.

COLLECTED 31 POINTS

St. Michael's picked up 31 scoring points in the game, outshot Moncton 47-18—25-7 in the last period alone — and drew 19 minutes in penalties to Moncton's 10.

Beavers return to Moncton with some added hockey knowledge and the satisfaction that they advanced as far as they did.

Said coach Gaudet: "We should have done better because we played better during the season."

As far as the game went, Keating put Moncton ahead at 5:33 of the initial period but less than a minute later, MacKenzie tied the score. Walsh put the Majors ahead to stay at 13:45 and Jackson potted the even-tual winner at 18:01.

Champagne, after scoring his first goal at 1:40 of the second period, connected for two more before the game ended. At 14:57 he relayed Osborne's pass behind goaltender Tommy Carrier to make it 8-4 and then took Bruce Draper's rebound and whipped it in the short side at 18:16 for a 9-4 lead.

He made it three in a row and 10-1 at 8:31 with his fourth goal, a shot through a maze of legs at the goalmouth.

The Trots

HAMBURG, N.Y. (CP)—Howard Rosecroft, eight - year-old chestnut owned by Sheridan Farms of Lucan, Ont., and reinsman Bug Gilmour, posted a going - away triumph in the $5,000 pace topping the Hamburg card, At the wire Howard Rosecroft had a 5½-length margin on Canadian rival Captain Hanover.

The winner paid $13.90.

REACH B FINALS

OWEN SOUND (CP) — Owen Sound Greys ended a long uphill climb Saturday night by defeating St. Marys Lincolns 4-3 to reach the Ontario Hockey Association Junior B finals for the first time in 21 years. It was the third straight victory for the Greys, who trailed St. Mary's 3-1 in games at one time during the best-of-seven series. The Greys meet St. Michael's College Buzzers in the first game of the finals in Toronto Tuesday night.

Bower, the league's oldest player, and Mahovlich, the newest sensation, are newcomers to the select circle of all stars.

It was the sixth time Beliveau was chosen as the first team. He was also picked to the second team once.

The Tracks

NEW YORK (CP) — Globemaster led all the way Saturday to stage an upset win in the $86,250 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct and plump himself square-ly in the Kentucky Derby picture.

The colt, owned by Leonard P. Sasso and ridden by John L. Rotz, beat out the favored Carry Back by 1½ lengths in the 1¼-mile test for three-year-olds. Jaunty Step was third, six lengths behind Carry Back.

Globemaster covered the distance in 1:50 flat and paid $20.40, $7.60 and $3.40. Carry Back returned $2.40 and $2.40 and Ambiopse $2.20.

At Laurel, Md., Barbiar romped to a 1½-length victory in the $25,000 - added Laurel Handicap, covering the 1¼-mile course in 1:50 1-5. He beat out Greek Star, in second place by 1½ lengths over Nimmer.

Ashlar paid $14.40, $5.40 and $4.20. Greek Star returned $4.40 and $3.80 and Nimmer $5.40.

Brigid Bazlen, 16, in First Film Role, Wins Contract

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Brigid Bazlen, a striking 16-year - old brunette, is so square she was able to play the libidinal temptress Salome in the forthcoming Kings of Kings.

It was her first film role and won her a contract at MGM, where she was in starring in The Honeymoon Machine.

Her career started with her playing The Blue Fairy on a children's TV show in Chicago. That brought her much notice and a role in a brief TV series, Too Young to Steady.

One day when she was visiting New York, her agent took to see producer Samuel W. Bronston. After a few minutes' conversation, he asked her, "do you have a passport?" Within six days she was on her way to Spain to play Salome.

Brigid wants to sail full speed ahead on her film career. She doesn't expect marriage to interrupt her career, not for a long time, anyway.

"A lot of girls marry too early—again because of social pressure," she said. "They go from one home—their parents' —right into another home—their husband's. They have no time in between to live their own lives, apart from responsibilities."

GINGER'S LUCK

The Luck of Ginger Coffey, TV adaptation of the novel by Brian Moore, will be shown on the CBC in a 90-minute production in June.

AT THE BELLE — Gina Lollobrigida resists the advances of Antony Franciosa in a scene from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's powerful love story, "Go Naked in the World", co-starring Ernest Borgnine. Filmed in Color and CinemaScope, the new picture is Gina's latest Hollywood hit, and is playing today, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Belle Theatre.

What's My Line? May Be Around Another 12 Years

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Guests on What's my Line? Sunday night were a young man who gives mud baths, a lady who counts fish in a government hatchery and actor Peter Ustinov, Oscar-winning husband of the former Susan Cloutier of Ottawa.

The panel guessed two — the fish counter and the oscar-winner—which was about par for the show. But as far as the home audience was concerned, correct guesses were only incidental to the personalities and repartee.

In the sudden death world of TV, this program rubs along year after year as a Sunday night fixture. John Daly, Arlene Francis, Dorothy Kilgallen and Bennett Cerf are broadcasting institutions.

The show rarely has changed its rules and it's formal only once—the panel members now walk in to take their seats. This change was made so the women in the audience could get good, full - length glimpse of Arlene's and Dorothy's new gowns. Cassandra

With each passing year, the audience has come to expect certain things of certain panelists: Bennett's puns, John's little jokes and big words, Arlene's funnies, Dorothy's concentration on the game.

The players are much old hands that the dialogue rarely

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

General Tendencies: Those fine and wonderful ideas that were recently yours now have a good chance of becoming a success if you will but bring them down to workable expression. No detail is unimportant. Get everything clean and spick-and-span in your surroundings as well. See if you can't find accessories you need at this time.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) —You can perform any labors that need immediate attention very well today, whether at home, business or on the road. Also, see that files are in order, letters written, pets cared for, and be sure that your wardrobe is in order in P.M.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) —Get to barber or beauty shop early so that you will be ready for the busy and important day ahead and can later take in social affairs or sports that please with a feeling of ease and savoir faire. Be gay and have a happy time.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) —Handle any affairs that pertain to home and family without fail today, and be sure to bring home little gifts in P.M. that will please kin. Also, ask their advice with regard to your own personal affairs or whatever has to do with work.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — A fine day for shopping and taking care of your car or planning any necessary trips. Get an early start so that you have time to go out in the evening with good friends and have a jolly time. Dress nicely and wow 'em!

Leo (July 2 to Aug. 21) — You are highly inspired now to get into new outlets that will mean greater success for you and having far bigger bank account. Follow your inclinations and confer with experts who can give you the know-how you need. Listen carefully.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) —You can more or less follow your own inclinations today and tonight, however you must still have a positive attitude or you accomplish absolutely nothing. This can inadvertently lead to social and profitable contacts.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) — Look for advisors now who best can help you to handle that petty situation that is bothering you. Be secretive, however, and don't broadcast it about either and you'll.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) —You are fortunate in having many good pals cooperate with you in your ambitions today. But you have to be generous in spirit, show appreciation for, their alliance and then be sure to give support you need to carry through successfully.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Nosing around and contacting those who are at the head of organizations will net you much needed information so that you can be more successful in the future. Increase prestige by being quiet, thoughtful instead of bombastic.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — There are so many excellent ideas and opportunities about you now that you would be wise to, study your paper well, trade journals and the like. Later, get out and ally yourself with ethical and prosperous people. Expand.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — Now you can go after that good advice from authorities that will help you to get all business and personal affairs in far better order. Then tonight you can have a delightful evening romantically that will long be remembered.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) —While long conversation with associates may seem like a waste of time and energy, you will find the germ of many a fine new idea in them and you know how to handle others more wisely. Learn to co-operate more and increase success.

If your child is born today . . be, or she, will be one of those delightful persons who can make a success of almost anything due to the fact that there is much practical sense in his chart. A good education is a must here, since the mind is intricate and the profession that requires medium un-po that requires both mental and physical ingenuity should be followed, such as designing, engineering, medicine and the like.

CUTS FARM GRANTS

CHATHAM (CP)—Kent county council Friday reduced its grants to county farm organizations in a move described as being designed to encourage the organizations to stand on their own feet. Roy Jenner, reeve of Harwich Township, opposed the cuts on the grounds that they would cripple 4-H programs.

after living through six hours of war-like tension.

TANKS REMOVED

Tanks which guarded the approaches to the French National Assembly and other key buildings during the night boiled away as the invasion threat abated, at least temporarily.

The extra security guards who had been on duty on bridges over the River Seine were withdrawn and obstructions placed on the approaches to Orly and Le Bourget airports to prevent a rebel landing were removed.

Meanwhile, the French government pushed the transfer of money to Algeria and submarine patrol to the North African territory.

Tanks, armored cars and huge rifle unit detachments were rushed into position to defend Paris early today after Premier Michel Debre warned in repeated radio broadcasts that a rebel invasion force—estimated at 1,500 men in 40 planes—was preparing to fly on Paris from Algeria.

"Give us arms! Give us arms!" appealed Debre to civilians as men besieging the French interior ministry during the night.

AWAIT OF CRISIS

The government said every detail of the rebel invasion plan was known and that the resolution of the people of Metropolitan France had thwarted the scheme of the four rightwing generals leading the rebels.

But, the government said, "it seems too soon to assume that the danger has ended."

"It seems that it has only been averted provisionally."

A hastily-formed "citizens' army" prepared during the night to battle the rebels.

At one point, Agence France-Presse reported that informed source" as saying the invasion force was on its way. The attack was expected to accord with the paratroopers landing south of Paris.

As the sun rose, there was a noticeable lightening of tension. But a few hours later, when no planes appeared, the government issued an informed source saying the invasion apparently had been "averted provisionally."

HALTED ALL FLIGHTS

An order halting all flights and directing French fighter planes to open fire on any aircraft which did not respond to a challenge was withdrawn a few hours later. But the government said flights of French military aircraft will stay under "strict surveillance."

Officials at the interior ministry said a "state of alert" was being maintained throughout France. Civil defence groups formed during the night would receive mobilization orders during the day and would be issued with arms tonight.

Key officials responsible for security, communications and other essential services were ordered to duty this morning.

Meanwhile, the rebel-held Radio reported that "calm and confidence prevailed in Algeria and jeered at the "confusion and panic" in Paris.

The radio said the rebels now have 400,000 tons of "arms and ammunition of the navy, army and air force . . . ranged behind them."

CLAIMS FULL CONTROL

The radio also listed the principal commanders in Algeria who have gone over to the support of the four right-wing generals, who now claim to control the entire North African territory.

The state radio and television system in France remained open throughout the night to give Frenchmen instant warning of any landings. Civilians were told by Debre to flock to the landing places on foot or by car the moment sirens gave the alert to "convince the misled soldiers of their serious error."

The first real break in the night-long tension came at 5:15 a.m. when Cultural Affairs Minister Andre Malraux announced that no departure of planes from Algeria had been picked up by radar.

Malraux said officials had picked up a message from Gen. Maurice Challe, one of the rebel leaders, "complaining because the planes have not left."

Some 1,000 French gendarmes stood guard throughout the night at the Elysee Palace, de Gaulle's official residence.

Security officers formed heavy and riot police also stood by at the Matignon, the premier's office and the police prefecture, blocking all surrounding streets.

Forty tanks took up positions within easy reach of the Elysee Palace and parliament.

Debre's broadcast warning that an invasion appeared imminent came a few hours after de Gaulle ordered extraordinary powers to deal with the right-wing uprising.

DE GAULLE FURIOUS

De Gaulle appeared on television in his wartime uniform of a five-star general and said in a voice cold with fury:

"In the name of France I order that all means — I say all means — be used to bar the way of these men."

He denounced the revolt as an "odious and stupid Algerian adventure" by a "band of pitiful ambitious and fanatical officers" who do not keep the nation."

He ordered all French soldiers to disobey the mutinous generals.

There was no indication so far what positive action de Gaulle would take to put down the mutiny. International appeared to be a blockade of Algeria or military action against the insurgents.

Effect of a blockade would be slow, for the forces are well-bolstered to have large supply stocks. Military action would mean a disastrous civil war, pitting French man against Frenchman. And operations for military action was hampered also by uncertainty as to how many of the 500,000 troops in Algeria had joined the mutiny and how many would remain loyal to de Gaulle.

The French Army has another 300,000 men, 50,000 of them in Germany and about 10,000 in the Paris region. The navy generally was mostly still loyal to the government, there being only several score coastal patrol vessels and an unknown number of submarines in Algerian waters.

ENROL FOR DEFENCE

Interior ministry sources said about 1,500 men enrolled in civil defence groups in Paris overnight and that a recruiting centre was remaining open.

Security officers formed them into 10-man commando squads to guard public buildings in Paris.

Most of them were eager young Gaullists. One youth clutched his fists and shouted: "Let them come. We'll take care of them."

Few buses were running in Paris early today — many of them had been requisitioned overnight ready to be used as roadblocks.

But soon after 8 a.m. much of the massive security machinery erected overnight had been dismantled, at least temporarily, and Paris began to look more like its usual spring self again.

AFP today quoted an order of the day of Challe over Algiers Radio declaring that the Algerian armed forces would "identify the struggle against Algeria fighting for Algerian independence.

Algiers Radio also reported that Pierre Lagaillarde, who led the right-wing "barricades rebellion" in Algiers last year, had joined the new uprising.

Lagaillarde, a former member of the French National Assembly, fled to Spain while being tried on charges arising from last year's revolt and was sentenced to 10 years at hard labor in his absence.

Scouting activities

By CHRIS LEGGAT

CHRIST CHURCH BANQUET

The gaily decorated tables in the parish hall looked very inviting, but visitors were wondering why so many well constructed models of log cabins, canal, ordnance gates, bridges etc. were displayed. Later on the Scouts assembled a model camp on a large carpet of artificial grass. It was all done in a very few minutes and when finished was an exact replica of a Boy Scout's camp with hills and valley and the model cabin and so on. Quite a remarkable achievement and worthy of note.

Promptly at 6.30 p.m. grace was said by Archdeacon J. B. Creegan. Christ Church ladies are well known for their banquets and this one was no exception. Everybody was very quickly served and from remarks overheard our ladies can add another success to their record. As Chris Leggat said when thanking them, "We are very proud of our auxiliary and grateful — not only for the annual banquets but also for the many valuable services they render for the Cubs and Scouts throughout the year. The help and encouragement given to our wonderful leaders is in no small way responsible for the fact that the 2nd are one of the best groups in the district".

Chairman H. Burley then introduced the guests: L. G. Monteith, president District Council; Cub A. Monteith; D. C. Phil Allcorn; Scout Victor Burley; Archdeacon J. B. Creegan; R. H. Vaughan, SM, 19th O.S.D.; Scout Jack Sparpek, O.S.D.; E. E. Palmer, Men's Club; Rev. Everett Smith; Jack Hodgson; Mrs. H. G. Rainbird, president auxiliary.

AWARDS

District Commissioner Allcorn presented Akela Kemp to present Dr. Joan Bronskill with her 10-year Service Star.

Patrol Leader Bill Gibson having completed his First Class Journey, received a bound record of his achievement from D. C. Allcorn. We are hoping to report a Queen's Scout ceremony for Bill later this year. Mrs. Rainbird, on behalf of the auxiliary, made him a gift of a beautifully engraved sheath knife. The DC paid high tribute to Scouter Lionel Blaker, who has always helped Scouting and has been of great assistance to the DC in particular. It is with sincere regret we learn that SM Blaker is being transferred to Peterborough. Our very best wishes go with him and to Mrs. Eleanor Blaker, also a great leader in Scouting. "Good Scouting" to both these fine people. Please visit us when you can.

ENTERTAINMENT

Cubs Ron Potter and Jimmy Coles played several numbers on trombones, rather large instruments for small boys, and played them very well. Cub Jimmy Hodgson proved to be a good pianist. While this was going on the Cubs were preparing their presentation and when the curtain went up the audience was delighted with "Toyland." Some of the Cubs had black faces and all were properly dressed as wooden soldiers, spacemen, dolls and other characters too numerous to mention. It was a wonderful production and very well acted out. The colored costumes were perfect. Congratulations 2nd Cubs on a grand show.

S.M. Harold Vaughan, the A.S.M. Wallace Mills with 2nd OSD Scouts attended and subscribed to the entertainment "a bus trip to the Grand Canyon" in pantomime. The tourists were Ricky Colesimon, Ricky Leslie, Floyd Dostaler, Rusty Clarke, an inebriated gentleman, Tom Morwood. An old lady whose dress has to be seen to be appreciated, (Clifton Corbin' accompanied by an old gentleman, very shaky, (Cubby Roach); two very active and inquisitive teenagers, (Terry Stewart and Cecil Peclar); a hunter, very careless with his gun (Bobby Schultz, and the patient driver (Lance Biff). They were all good and put on a hilarious show. Might we suggest that some of the boy be given their entertainment badges for their clever and amusing acts.

Cub Jim Dafoe is the latest Cub to be a member of the exclusive "13 Club." Leaping Wolf badges were given to Denton McBridge and Richard Wagner. Musicians badges to Scouts D. McCormick, W. Boogard, D. McBride, R. Scriven. Entertainers, Electrician and Handyman to Glen Rainbird. Richard Wagner received the Handymans' badges and the rare Aquarist badge to H. Goldie and I. Grant. Scout Bill Gibson was presented with his All Round Cord.

Thank you for inviting us to your grand evening and special thanks for title of "The Second's Pal." We appreciate it.

REPULSE REBEL PARATROOPS AT ORAN

Laotian Govt. Accepts Appeal For No Word From Rebels, USSR 'Taking Action'

VIENTIAN—The pro-Western government of Prince Boun Oum accepted today the joint British-Russian call for a cease-fire in Laos.

There was still no word from the pro-Communist Pathet Lao rebels, but a royal government spokesman expressed the hope that the fighting would halt by noon Wednesday.

(A British spokesman in London said he understood the Soviet government "is taking action as far as the Pathet Lao is concerned.")

Britain and Russia are seeking out invitations for a 14-power conference to work out arrangements for a neutral, independent Laos. The invitations said the conference would open May 12 in Geneva.

The Laotian government announced its commander-in-chief is "ready to establish contact at any moment with the responsible head of the opposing forces" to fix the "day and hour of an effective cease-fire."

REBEL HEAD IN HANOI

Prince Souphanouvong, head of the Pathet Lao, flew from Communist Chiss to Hanoi, North Viet Nam, today after a visit to Moscow and Peking with Prince Souvanna Phouma, his half-brother and the neutralist ex-premier still recognized by the Communist bloc as the head of the Laotian government.

The three-power control commission—India, Canada and Poland—which will supervise the truce is scheduled to hold its first meeting in New Delhi Friday. The United States has reserved words that it will not attend the Geneva conference until a truce is in effect and has been verified.

The flurry of peace moves came as the royal government was airlifting troops to the northern town to meet the threat of Pathet Lao troops who during the weekend drove gov-

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top U.S. officials see a large gap in the Laos cease-fire plan they could let Communist - backed rebels begin forging another military offensive before the proposed 14-country peace conference opens.

They emphasize that this hazard is one of many which will have to be surmounted in the long and uncertain struggle to create an effective international agreement for a neutral, independent Laos.

Britain and Russia, as co-chairmen of the 1954 Indochina settlement which created Laos, called Monday for a cease-fire to be checked by the three-power control commission on Indochina, then a 14-power parley on Laos' future to start in Geneva May 12. India, Canada and Poland make up the control commission.

(The pro - Western Laotian government of Prince Boun Oum has accepted the cease-fire, a Vientiane dispatch said.)

The cease-fire gap showed in the U.S. view that Russia probably Monday night. The plan was to have the cease-fire a halt to the fighting, beyond saying it should stop before the Geneva parley begins.

U.S. authorities portray the Laotian government forces as being ready to try their offensive big promptly. But they fear the rebels, backed by mounting Soviet-airlifted supplies, would open a final push to seize additional important areas of the small Southeast Asian kingdom.

The allies' diplomatic bargaining position already has suffered heavily from rebel advances in the past month. December they have captured large areas of Laos adjacent to Communist North Viet Nam. Laos is threatened with being split at the middle.

The U.S. state department served notice Monday that without a verified ceasefire the United States will not go to the Geneva meeting.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Monday, April 24, 1961

A prorogation target of July 1 became evident as the Commons voted over Liberal objections to extend its sitting hours by one hour a week from the present 25½ starting next Monday.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker disclosed preliminary railway-union conversations as a "prelude" to full negotiations in an effort to avert further wage disputes and every 16 rail strike.

The prime minister also forecast that the government will seek approval for a limited extension of the $20,000,000-a-year "rail-back" subsidy to the railways that will result in the impact of a freight rate increase authorized in December, 1958.

External Affairs Minister Green said Canada is planning a $300,000-a-year program of educational assistance aimed at the new French-speaking countries of Africa.

The Liberals moved a motion of non-confidence in the government's trade policies, charging inconsistency and failure to develop a long-term foreign economic policy that would benefit Canada.

Erhart Regier (CCF — Burnaby - Coquitlam) expressed CCF-New Party support of the motion, moved by Lionel Chevrier (L—Montreal Laurier).

Two Men Killed, Trucker Injured Near Napanee

KINGSTON (CP) — Two men were killed and a third injured severely injured today when a car and truck collided at a highway intersection 10 miles west of here near Napanee.

The men were burned beyond recognition when the car exploded in a fiery seconds after the crash. The 1954-model vehicle was registered to John Barton Meikle of Toronto.

Provincial police were dispatched for 45 minutes in his truck while fire razed the car, imbedded in the front portion of the truck.

Twelve truck drivers played fire extinguishers on the blaze to keep it from spreading to the transport. Welch, freed from the wreckage and taken to hospital is believed to have suffered severe face, shoulder and knee injuries.

Hundreds of motorists on their way to work were delayed for two hours while the blocked highway was cleared of wreckage.

Attempt to Hurl Unmanned Space Capsule Into Orbit Ends in Failure

CAPE CANAVERAL (AP) — An attempt to hurl an unmanned Project Mercury space capsule into orbit around the earth failed today when the Atlas booster rocket exploded in flight about 20 seconds after launch.

The 1½-ton capsule was pulled free by an escape mechanism and parachuted toward the Atlantic Ocean just off the cape.

The Atlas was to have hurled the bell-shaped capsule into a single orbit 100 miles above the earth. An attempt was to have been made to recover the craft after it completed the 116-minute journey around the globe.

The 77-foot Atlas with the capsule perched on its nose rose smoothly from its pad at 11:15 a.m. EST and appeared to be flying a true course.

But 30 seconds after lift-off the Atlas suddenly blew apart with a brilliant flash that left a huge fog of fire and smoke hanging in the sky for several minutes.

EUROPEAN TRADE DEBATE SUBJECT IN PARLIAMENT

Opposition Blasts Alleged Threats

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons opposition Monday night painted a picture of a federal government bullying one way and behaving another, dangerously, in its attitude toward European trading blocs.

Both Lionel Chevrier (L—Montreal Laurier) and Erhart Regier (CCF — Burnaby - Coquitlam) blasted the government for alleged threats of retaliation in the event that external tariffs of the six - nation Common Market affect Canadian exports adversely.

Mr. Chevrier, using the Commons adjournment motion to launch a two-day debate with a non - confidence motion charging the Conservative administration with inconsistent stands on trade, also was critical of threats to raise Canadian tariffs if the United Kingdom "plays itself in a European free trade area.

"Such an attitude is not only unrealistic but dangerous in today's world because it is in sharp contrast to the new trade talks and it may lead us only to isolation or continental dependence," Mr. Chevrier said.

He quoted one official at the Common Market headquarters in Brussels as saying:

"It seems to us that Canada overrates its own importance these days. We want to trade with you, but you must understand that if necessary, we shall get along without you."

Mr. Regier said that as he understands the situation, the Commons "were sent back

Liner Aground

SOUTHAMPTON (Reuters) — The 21,717-ton Canard liner Saxonia went aground off Southampton, England today shortly after leaving the port for Montreal with 455 passengers aboard.

The ship was summoned by radio were trying to tow her free from the mud flats where she grounded during strong gusts of wind and heavy rain.

The port official said the passengers were not in danger and would remain on board.

Nazi Nightmare Recounted At Trial of Adolf Eichmann

JERUSALEM (AP)—A wispy, bearded little man wearing a black skullcap recounted a Nazi nightmare today and testified in the trial of Adolf Eichmann. "It was the first time I ever saw the wild barbarism of the Germans."

The witness was Zindel Grynszpan, father of a Jewish boy who killed a Nazi Embassy official in Paris in 1938.

What the Nazis called "the crystal night" followed the assassination, by 17 - year - old Herschel Grynszpan, of Ernst vom Rath, Nazi councilor of the German Embassy in Paris. In the widespread outbreaks synagogues were burned, Jewish homes and shops were looted into and some Jews were killed.

The elder Grynszpan was a thin, frail little figure of 75 as he testified in Yiddish. His voice shrilled as he recounted the events of the night of Oct. 27, 1938, in Hannover, Germany.

Grynszpan told of a police-man pounding on Jews and taking them to a concert hall where some 600 already had been herded. "They kept us for 24 hours until Friday night," Grynszpan said. They were taken by train to a point near the Polish border. "Trains were arriving from many other points in Germany, and he estimated about 12,500 Jews finally assembled on the border.

The SS guards allowed each person to keep only 10 reichsmarks. Any other money was taken.

He did not know where they were being sent.

The guards marched the Jews about a mile and a half to the border.

"They were whipping us," Grynszpan went on. "There was blood on the road.

"It was the first time I ever saw the wild barbarism of the Germans."

Some people died, he said. "They died of heart attacks."

The Jews were herded across the border into Poland. The Poles put them in a military camp, Two days later, on Sunday, the first food arrived—truckload of bread for the 12,000.

"Some were lucky," Grynszpan said simply. "They got some bread. Others were not."

He said he wrote a letter to son in Paris.

"And this son," Assistant Attorney-General Ya'akov Bar'or said dramatically, "was Herschel Grynszpan?"

"Yes," said the father.

This was the last question.

Royal York Hotel Strikers First Night of Walkout

TORONTO (CP) — A strike by a union representing some 1,200 of the Royal York Hotel's 1,350 employees has turned a sleepover at the Commodore Canadian official said Monday night.

Angus MacKinnon, the Royal York's general manager, said the hotel will be able to operate "a long, long time" despite the walkout.

He said about 60 non - union employees were expected to arrive by plane today from other CPR hotels to bolster the beleaguered corps of supervisors and non - strikers.

Mr. MacKinnon said he didn't know how many union members would ignore the strike call. But

National Jobless Lobby To Ottawa Said Success

OTTAWA (CP) — Six hundred jobless Canadians confronted with parliamentarians here Monday, were offered two pick-and-shovel jobs and went home quite content. At least that's been a success.

"All in all, we have roused the consciousness of Canadians and of members of the government to the unemployment problem," said Stanley Thornley in the closing rally of the National Unemployment Lobby.

The statement followed a day that began at 6 a.m. for 500 of the men and women who travelled here by train from Southwestern Ontario cities. They were joined later by another 100 from Montreal.

Mr. Thornley, a 47-year-old former rubber factory employee and the head of its union for 17 years, said there has been favorable reception of the organization's 5,000-word brief. It calls for subsidies to a paper-casing a cut in defence spending to finance new projects.

Thirty delegates met with Labor Minister Starr, Works Minister Walker, Defence Production Minister O'Hurley, Health Minister Monteith, and Trade Minister Hees for nearly four hours.

This meeting was followed by a march from the southend Coliseum headquarters to Parliament Hill.

NEW ROUND RAILWAY TALKS UNDER WAY SOON

Opens in Montreal On Wednesday

OTTAWA (CP)—With a country-wide rail strike just three weeks away, a new round of railway-union negotiations will open Wednesday in Montreal.

The full negotiating teams of the major railways and 15 non-operating rail unions are to meet again in a new, government - sponsored effort to resolve their multi-million-dollar wage impasse and avert a transcontinental railway tieup threatened for May 16.

The exact meeting place and time of the talks—which may continue for some time — are being kept secret.

The contract dispute is Canada's biggest and trickiest labor-management scrap, involving some 111,000 railwaymen, the CPR, CNR and four smaller railways.

Key figures in the dispute were brought together Monday at a meeting arranged by Stanley Haidasz, Liberal MP for Lakeshore, and Labor Minister Starr.

The conference was attended by CPR President Donald Gordon, CPR Pr s i d e n t Buck Crump, chief union negotiator H. H. Hall and Vice-President George Pawson, secretary of the 15-union joint negotiating committee.

Once together, they agreed to continue their discussions Wednesday—bringing in the full negotiating teams as well. However, the two presidents may drop out of the detailed negotiations, leaving them to their senior vice-presidents in charge of personnel.

DEVELOPING BASES

Indications are that the government provided a basis on which new, meaningful negotiations can take place.

However, it is not known whether the new contract talks revolve around the union demand for a 6-cents-an-hour boost in a two-year contract as recommended by a federal conciliation board.

Some informed observers believe a brand new compromise plan may be in the wind—something based on a longer contract than originally suggested by the conciliation board.

The board report, which is not binding on either side, suggested a two-year contract that would end Dec. 31, 1962. It also proposed a three - step wage boost, two cost - of - living - allowance increases in Jan. 1, 1962, five cents an hour retroactive to Sept. 1, 1960, and a three per-cent payment on May 1, 1961.

The railways turned this down. They said it would add $34,000,000 to their annual payroll costs.

The dispute went to a strike threat last winter, but Parliament intervened at the last minute with a 30-day truce.

Young Ottawa Home-Builder Tries To Put Toronto Project on Feet

OAKVILLE (CP)—A 28-year-old Ottawa house-builder has set his sights on pulling one of the Toronto area's most promising but chronically depressed industrial subdivisions out of the red.

First stage of William Teron's undertaking today with the official opening of his first four model homes, which will go on public display Friday.

For Mr. Teron, builder and developer of Bramalea Woodlands Village and first in the Ottawa area to win a coveted housing design award, the task of making Trafalgar Township's Falgreen Hills subdivision a paying proposition is the greatest challenge of his career.

He hopes to build 300 homes this year from the four models. Mr. Teron says he has purchased a share in profits from the 600-unit subdivision in addition to the fact the investors concede losses of more than $1,000,000 since the land was bought 10 years ago.

Last year 20 model houses were built by two firms, but they failed to make a hit with the public despite Fairwood's location, midway between Toronto and Hamilton, with easy access to the Queen Elizabeth Way and the Ford of Canada Oakville assembly plant.

Mr. Teron says the industrial area, site for 27 planned industrial buildings on the Queen Elizabeth Way, so far has attracted only a handful of industries, largest of which, Ford of Canada Ltd., is a parts supplier to Ford.

The investors pin their hopes on a young man who never completed his junior matriculation (grade 12) and started building houses on his own design with $414 in the bank.

Mr. Teron insists each of his homes will be a little better for it, because each model is selected by many groupings. He said he is prepared to turn away potential buyers to preserve the ordered appearance of the subdivision.

The Teron-built homes, each with a fireplace, will be placed on lots with a 70-foot frontage. They are expected to sell in the $15,000-$19,000 range.

Mr. Teron says the potential buyers are to be found in the executives and more highly-paid workers at the many industrial plants between Toronto and Hamilton.

French Fleet Leaves Toulon To Crush Revolt

Only Fifth of Forces In Algeria Join Rebels

PARIS (Reuters) — France's Mediterranean fleet set sail today as Premier Michel Debre warned arms will be used against the Algerian rebels "if they do not speedily sur-render."

The navy ministry said the fleet—about 25 warships including an aircraft carrier—sailed from Toulon "for an undisclosed destination."

The government also began bringing troops and armored units home from West Germany to put an infantry division on a war footing.

Debre spoke after the assembly president, Jacques Chaban-Delmas read aloud a message from President de Gaulle calling for the support of the country's legislators. Debre declared:

"The arms deserted for rightling the Moslem insurgents will have to be turned against the rebel officers and men if they do not speedily surrender."

De Gaulle's message, also read to the Senate by Speaker Gaston Monnerville, assured legislators that the Algerian dictatorial powers only because of a threat against the nation's independence by "certain military chiefs."

De Gaulle's message concluded: "in the hard and deplorable experience the nation is now going through I count on all your help to carry out the duties given to me by the constitution."

Meanwhile the first shots were fired in Algeria since the rebel junta seized power in a bloodless putsch Saturday.

REBELS REPULSE

Navy ships stationed off the huge base of Mers el Kebir in western Algeria fired warning shots when paratroopers attempted to take over. The right of the rebels' address after the burst of gunfire.

Tanks and troops streamed across the border from West Germany to bolster the country's defences. Border police said two battalions of French troops in Germany, together with NATO forces in West Germany had crossed the Rhine into France.

The build-up came despite a statement by Defence Minister Louis Terrenoire that only about one-fifth of the 400,000 French troops in Algeria had joined the revolt against de Gaulle's policies for the North African territory.

Others who had joined the rebels were in a hurry to change thoughts, Terrenoire said.

The ministry said information said 10,000 reserve members had been recalled to duty by military units in Algeria and 5,000 in France.

Katanga Premier Flays Kasavubu For UN Accord

COQUILHATVILLE (AP) — President Moise Tshombe of Katanga province walked out on the rest of the political leaders at the Congo today after accusing President Joseph Kasavubu of the Leopoldville central government of selling out the Congolese people to the United Nations.

With sarcastic and stinging insults, Tshombe refused further co-operation and discussion with the central government unless Kasavubu repudiated the accord he recently concluded with the UN command—an accord Tshombe said "humiliated all the people of The Congo."

Tshombe's walkout ended at least temporarily, hopes for the confederation of Congolese states which all factions except Antoine Gizenga's Stanleyville regime agreed on in principle last month at the Tananarive round-table conference.

ARMED AS BELGIANS

Tshombe's chief objection to the Kasavubu-UN agreement Monday was its call for immediate withdrawal of all foreign advisers not engaged under Kasavubu's authority. This was clearly aimed at Tshombe's large contingent of Belgian advisers and the foreign mercenary officers of his Katanga army.

Self-confident and unyielding, Tshombe mocked the promises of financial aid from the United Nations to the Kasavubu government.

"I wonder how the United Nations is going to afford it this when they have their own financial troubles," he scoffed.

SETS STIFF TERMS

Tshombe stipulated three conditions for his continued participation in the Coquilhatville conference — conditions obviously unacceptable to the central government leaders. They were:

"A solemn denunciation" of the Kasavubu-UN agreement.

A protest to the United Nations against armed invasion" he calls the "attack" on Katanga forces by UN Ethiopian troops and the Katanga town of Kabalo earlier this month.

Kasavubu authorities who took part in the Tananarive conference should be allowed to participate in Coquilhatville.

Construction of the sidewalk at the Sidney Street overhead bridge is scheduled to commence on May 8th, city council learned yesterday.

City manager J. R. Reynolds said he would be advised by the CNR that the structural steel brackets and hand railing had been fabricated and that the erection of the sidewalk addition to the present vehicular bridge would commence early in May.

It is the city's responsibility to provide the sidewalks at the north and south sides of the bridge.

Local Citizens Join Premier As Patrons

William S. Wills, general chairman of the Y.M.C.A. New Building Campaign, announces today that the following local, or former, citizens will join Premier Leslie M. Frost as Patrons of the campaign: Mrs. Harry W Ackerman, Mrs. C. A. Cameron, Frank A. Domenico, Dr. Duffy Angus D. Fraser, C.D., Mrs. J. H. Forrester, Mayor R. McLean Hale, Warden Harley A. Hamilton, Lawrence A. Kells, Archie S. Lewis, Rev. (Canon) A. S. McConnell, Mayor H.J. McFarland and Jack N. Vanover. Mr. Wills reports that the enlistment of the 624 men and women, who will serve on various campaign committees, is proceeding rapidly — 333 have already enrolled, with additions daily. "We are delighted," Mr. Wills said, "with the response from those workers whom we have contacted. Such general willingness to devote time to our project convinces us that our decision was sound. Belleville youth are undoubtedly our greatest asset; and they deserve every possible facility to help them become citizens of character and worth. The new Y.M.C.A. building will be a means to this end — a beautiful central, functional structure, in which our program can develop sound bodies, keen minds and friendly spirits, with something to interest every member of every family."

Associated with Mr. Wills in direction of the combined campaign is Robert W. G. Freestone as associate chairman.

First Installment of Taxes To Be Paid on June 30th; $900,000 Asked for Hospital

Belleville taxpayers will not be asked to pay the first installment of their taxes until June 30th, two weeks later than last year.

Yesterday City Manager J. R. Reynolds told city council this was the earliest date now possible for the first installment to become due owing to the delay in setting the city tax rate.

Council councillors yesterday expressed concern over the delay in striking the tax rate, but both City Manager Reynolds and Mayor A. M. Haig said it was necessary to have the audit before the tax rate could be properly set.

PLANS OUTLINED

Plans for the construction of a 60-bed addition to Belleville General Hospital at an estimated cost of $900,000 were outlined to city council Monday afternoon.

Hospital board chairman Jack H. Lawrence spokesman for a three-man delegation waiting on council told members that the proposed addition would take care of only immediate hospital needs and in the not too distant future a second hospital would be required for Belleville.

Cost to the city of the proposed 60-bed hospital addition was given as $370,000 with $290,000 to come from the province and $430,000 expected to be received through grants from the Federal and Provincial governments.

Mr. Yanover said if council gave their go-ahead signal now, construction of the addition could get under way in the fall. Council has started considering preliminary plans.

The hospital board delegation also included Hastings County council Treasurer Mrs. Decobsel and Dr. Donald Scott, president of the medical association. They attended Monday's meeting of city council.

Mr. Yanover went into hospital financial capacity figures showing that last year the Belleville hospital had 107 per cent occupancy with this expected to rise to at least 110 per cent during 1961. Provincial hospital authorities feel that 85 per cent occupancy is a safe level.

To achieve the recommended 85 per cent occupancy Belleville hospital would require a total of 285 beds. He said there were now close to 400 persons on the hospital waiting list.

"Every day about 35 people ask for a bed at Belleville General Hospital and only 30 can get one," he said.

Hospital records show that on any one day 49 per cent of the patients in the hospital will be from Belleville, 38 per cent will be from the county of Hastings and 13 per cent will be from outside the county.

Each year the demand for hospital accommodation grows and in 1960 it was expected a total of 410 beds would be required. Now the demand would be for 610 beds.

Built with the construction of the proposed 60 bed addition, the present site would be exhausted.

NO MORE ROOM

Any further construction at the present site would mean extending service facilities. Eventually he said a brand new hospital on a new site would be required on another site. The city could then be operating two hospitals.

Council took no immediate action on the request from the hospital board, but most of the members had a few pertinent questions for Mr. Yanover to answer.

One of these was whether Prince Edward County residents could be asked to contribute toward the cost of the addition seeing that quite a number of beds are used from this area.

Mr. Yanover said this had been tried without success at the time the last addition was constructed.

Neither could Mr. Yanover see any possibility of making it a condition for outside patients as a means of recovery some of the construction cost.

This had been tried out a number of years ago but had proved unsatisfactory and the ill feeling it had caused.

Cloverleaf Just East of City Urged by Planning Board

The Belleville and Suburban Planning Board would like to see a highway cloverleaf constructed east of the city on the 5 highway and members of city council have added their endorsation to the recommendation.

Alderman Walter T. Elliott chairman of the city traffic committee told council the planning board has been asked to give an opinion on the advantages such a cloverleaf east of the city would have and that the city would stand to benefit.

No exact location for the cloverleaf was decided in the recommendation although the village of Shannonville was mentioned.

But Alderman Ben Corke felt the cloverleaf should be nearer the city than Shannonville.

"This is important", he said "As it is strangers cannot find their way out of the city.

He said he agreed with the recommendation but felt the cloverleaf should be built on the side the city limits, possibly the east side of Bell sideroad.

"Also at last night's meeting there was a recommendation from the traffic committee asking the Department of Highways to construct a cloverleaf at the intersection of Sidney Street and 401 highway. The recommendation indicated the city would not approve of merely an overpass at this intersection.

No action was taken on the recommendation with Alderman Elliott asking that it be withdrawn in view of the passing of the previous motion.

Adult Members Of Boy Scouts Hold Conference

On Saturday, adult members of the Boy Scouts or Canada gathered at Campbellford for their annual Leadership Conference. This was the occasion of the Ontario Quinte Region's Conference, with some 200 Scouters, Committeemen and Ladies Auxiliary members in attendance from the Napanee Valley, Picton, Brighton and Belleville, Moira Valley, Madawaska, Petawawa, R.C.A.F. Trenton, and Quinte Region Trenton Scout Councils.

The theme of the conference, "Scouting For Boys", was developed through two major papers read, "Scouting For Boys Up To Date" and "Boy Scout Ideals Of Scouting Changed".

While it is very true that some of the ideals of scouting have changed over the years, in keeping with the changing membership of the movement and the changing times, those basic ideals of Baden-Powell are established by the foundation of the movement laid by Baden-Powell, are still as applicable in today's society as they were fifty years ago. With the ever adverse influences affecting the young people of today, what greater need is there than for a movement dedicated to the development of good character and the breaking down of those barriers of creed and race, prejudice, mis understanding and intolerance, those barriers that set creed against creed, race against race and color against color, and the ugly world of ours rocking on the precipice of war all the time.

Guest Speaker at the evening banquet, Rev. Father Patrick J. Byrne, Secretary to the Bishop of the diocese of Peterborough, used the theme "Scouting in the Future" — and the application of the aim of Scouting to the needs of the youth of today.

A highlight of the day's proceedings was the presentation of Scouter Joe Irish of Stirling, for his long and faithful service to the movement. He was presented with the Long Service Medal for over ten years faithful and efficient service, both as a Scouter, and in latter years as District Commissioner.

Conference Chairman Albert Bradley, assisted by Area Commissioner, closed the Conference with enthusiastic predictions on the future development of Scouting in this Region. At the moment there are 8,500 Scouts being trained in the Region and in the next five years it is expected that this number will double!

Members Enjoy Display Shown By T.J. Ransom

One of the best attended meetings of the Hastings County Historical Society was held recently in Belleville when more than 70 persons gathered in the auditorium of the Carnegie Public Library to hear Mr. Tom Ransom speak on "Farlor Amusements."

He began by displaying and explaining the various parlor games such as dice, cards, chess and other board games. Among the articles shown was a sheet of 1815 playing cards which it was cut up to form a regular deck.

Mr. Ransom then outlined the development of parlor games and showed an old backgammon board with unusual "boneggers" woven playing counters, dice and dice cups; an early Ontario pegged solitaire board; a folding Georgian table game which was the ancestor of the "snakes and ladders" game; an early type of "Ludo" game and many interesting types of early games. Several of these were of an educational nature, including history, science and other subjects.

AUDIENCE DELIGHTED

Musical amusements were next on the program and here Mr. Ransom displayed early Under music boxes; a barrel organ with interchangeable cylinders, and an Edison cylinder phonograph. The musical selections were played for the audience.

The next section was entitled "Pleasant Work for Busy Fingers" and here he displayed seven pictures, painting on satin, needlework, bead work, lacages whittled from a single piece of wood, and many other articles.

Riddles and puzzles were next described and displayed. Some of these riddles date back to Biblical times.

Visual amusements made up the final segment of the display and included parlor albums of old photos, parlor stereopticons; autograph books, stereoscopican views, magic lanterns and slides — a demonstration of these proving most interesting.

Those present spent considerable time looking after the meeting examining the material which Mr. Ransom had spent so much time in preparing for display.

City council is going to write off $583 in back taxes which, despite all efforts, it cannot collect, it was decided Monday after trying to collect.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds told council that 90 per cent of the total was in odd cents and would cost more to collect than the city would receive.

Several weeks ago Ogburt of Belleville Realtors Association asked that the above taxes be written off but the matter was turned over to the city manager for further investigation. Last night he reported to council and it was recommended the above amount be written off and council agreed.

To a question from Alderman George Wilson, the city manager replied that writing off the taxes would not jeopardize the property owner's chances of running for municipal office.

Mayor A. M. Haig moved a resolution from the city of Windsor asking that Section 13 of the Assessment Act be changed to read that the Act limits municipal taxation of gross receipts of a telephone company to five per cent of the total of such receipts.

Thomas Bata Sees Need For Mutual Understanding

FRENCH FLEET

factry division had been put on a war footing.

The arrival of the troops from West Germany followed another night of tense vigil here but a rapid lowering of tension was expected at any moment did not materialize.

The troops crossed into eastern France at Strasbourg and were loaded aboard special trains to take up their defence assignments.

France has some 80,000 troops stationed in West Germany. All their leaves were cancelled last Saturday when the bloodless right-wing coup in Algiers.

The government summoned immediate powers to requisition property and to call up the classes of reserve forces to defend mainland France.

At the same time, President de Gaulle cracked down on the right-wing leaders of the uprising, stripping six generals and four colonels of their military ranks.

The government also slapped an information blackout on Algeria Monday night, suspending all movements of funds, all bank operations and all civil maritime traffic.

The army calculated that the rebels would be unable to hold out for more than two weeks without supplies.

Paris waited tensely throughout the day for the first reaction which did not come. It was the second false alarm in 24 hours as the government officials still feared today that the rebels would try to launch the French capital in their revolt against de Gaulle's Algerian policies.

Tanks rumbled into place at strategic spots throughout the city and checkpoints were dropped across airport runways minutes after sinister rumors had been warned for the second straight night of a danger of invasion.

Heavily armed troops scanned the skies throughout the night but no repetition of the flights on the plan on flights was lifted at 7:30 a.m. (1:30 a.m. EST).

Meanwhile, there were indications that the rebel leaders' grip on Algeria was not nearly as strong as they had claimed.

Five commanding officers in the Algerian garrison of Constantine commanding generals in the important Constantine region assured de Gaulle of their loyalty.

FLY TO FRANCE

Seventeen military aircraft—10 transport and reconnaissance planes and seven fighters—flew out of Algeria to France. The flyers reported big demonstrations by airmen on the previous day when airmen near Algiers had attacked the rebel generals.

Lt. Michel Fourquin, the appointed Monday night as commander-in-chief of the French air force in Algeria, issued an order to his men telling them that "Paris has given orders to which you are being subjected" by the rebels.

"Don't repair their machines, don't give them gasoline, don't transport their troops," he ordered.

Second Forces Minister Pierre Messmer broadcast an appeal to the "misguided people" in Algeria not to obey the orders of the rebel generals. He urged civilian and military officers to come back to metropolitan territory whenever there is a favorable opportunity."

De Gaulle had an official description of the rebel generals. They are senior officers of their ranks.

The generals named were Maurice Challe, Raoul Salan, Andre Zeller, Edmond Jouhaud, Paul Gardy and Andre Petit.

FLOOR SANDING AND FINISHING
GLEN ELLIOT
186 Dufferin Ave. WO 2-3080

TRENTON — Thomas J. Bata, president of the Bata Shoe Company of Canada and head of the world wide Bata industrial enterprises, last night told the Rotary Club there is a need for a "heart to heart" understanding between citizens of Canada and the United States and citizens of other countries.

He said that it was of vital importance to get as many people from other countries to visit Canada and be made aware of the basic interests of all peoples of the free world. He said that even if the time should come when these people would not be able to express their thoughts audibly, they would still retain their good will towards the two great democracies of the western hemisphere and that the spirit of freedom and free enterprise would eventually prevail.

Mr. Bata said that while some people might question the advisability of sharing knowledge of technological skills with people in many parts of the world, claiming that they might use it to flood Canadian markets with merchandise, the danger was outweighed by the rise in the standards of living and the over-all stability such knowledge created in these peoples or other lands.

He said that visitors to Canada are impressed by the friendliness and interest shown in their welfare. This impression is reviewed, the contribution of the people of North America made to the less fortunate nations would be credited with setting in motion forces working to improve standards of living in many parts of the world.

Mr. Bata was introduced to the club by Trenton's ex-Mayor, Kenneth Couch. Mr. Couch recalled that 21 years ago the first beginnings of the Bata company had been started and at what is now Batawa. He said that it was impossible to visualize the contribution of the industry to the Trenton area.

Mr. Bata was thanked by Fred Preston, immediate past-president of the Rotary Club.

Twenty-five managing directors of Bata plants in 17 countries arrived in Trenton Sunday. Many of the executives were guests at last night's dinner meeting, which took the form of a banquet in the Country Club.

At noon yesterday, members of the Rotary Club were guests of visits to U.S. and Canadian customs offices. Members were accorded a civic welcome by Councillor Vagn Lang, at luncheon.

Council to Expropriate Property Needed for Road

The county of Hastings will initiate expropriation proceedings to acquire the one remaining property needed to complete the right-of-way for the reconstruction of the Madoc-Foxboro county road.

A by-law authorizing the expropriation was given all three readings at today's opening session of county council. Tenders for the construction of the first four-and-a-half miles of the remaining 17 miles between Madoc and Foxboro will be called tomorrow by the Ontario Department of Highways. The road is to be rebuilt as a development road project.

County Warden Harleigh Hamilton told councillors that all property purchases needed for the right-of-way with the exception of one had now been agreed upon. He said one owner near the Crookston road turn was proving "difficult".

GENEROUS OFFER MADE

Reeve Earl Sager of Madoc said the county had made amicable settlements with more than forty owners and that "more than a generous price had been offered for the one remaining property".

Warden Hamilton told his councillors that the Spring session would be a busy one with installation of assessments and striking of the county mill-rate on the agenda.

Reference to agricultural prospects in the county Warden Hamilton said water shortage could be a problem this year. Last fall's freeze-up came without warning and ponds were filled with the normal amount of rain and the spring breakup failed to produce the expected amount of runoff.

The morning council session was more brief than usual with councillors breaking off early in order to attend the noon Kiwanis luncheon, where they had been invited by the club. Guest speaker for the luncheon was C. D. Graham, deputy minister of agriculture.

JAILERS SEE RAISE

Council referred to its finance committee a request from the county jailers for a $500 across the board salary increase.

The request, passed on to council by the jail governor, claimed jailers' salaries were not keeping pace with the rise in the cost of living and were not comparable with salaries received by city and provincial police.

Finance committee chairman Reeve Cecil Spence of Tweed village said the request should have come first to his committee, which could have studied the matter and passed its recommendation on to council.

And Trenton Memorial Hospital is still asking for a $60,000 grant toward construction costs for its new addition. Council at its last session agreed only to a $5,000 grant.

Trenton hospital officials feel they are entitled to further assistance from Hastings and they are still asking for the $60,000 grant," he said.

WILL HOLD NOMINATIONS

Correspondence from the hospital authorities shows that considerable patients at the hospital come from Sidney township and Hastings county.

Warden Hamilton called for a full discussion on the matter in order to arrive at a fair decision.

A letter was read from Hon. J. W. Spooner, Minister of the Department of Lands and Forests, in reply to a resolution passed at the last council session asking licensing of all hunting camps and setting up of hunting areas.

The resolution prepared by Reeve Verne McMurray claimed that hunters hunting from tents and trailers were taking advantage of dogs owned by guides on Crown Land camps.

The Lands and Forests minister in his reply said the resolution would be given full consideration by his department, but implied it would be impossible to regulate setting up hunting areas. Neither would it be possible to restrict hunting from tents or trailers as long as use of tents and trailers did not contravene existing laws.

Vaudeville Gets Green Light On Sundays

TORONTO (CP) — Theatrical performances and concerts on Sundays as well as movies and lectures was supported by Toronto city council Monday night in a 11-to-7 vote.

The original bylaw to permit Sunday movies alone, drafted by board of control, was rejected. Council called for a new one to cover other Sunday entertainment, including burlesque and vaudeville.

Controller Phillip Givens said council should not try to act as censor of what the public could see, since, he said, the recent Academy Awards were given to actors and actresses portraying characters involved in "rascality and sex."

"Whom are you trying to protect from whom?" he asked. "Are you trying to save the men from Cupcakes Cassidy?

made threats that if the Common Market was not a common external tariff on imports, "we might even refuse to continue to participate in the renewal of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade."

Challenged by Solicitor-General Browne for his authority for such assertion, Mr. Diefenbaker answered:

"I hope the minister reads as many newspapers as I. I believe it is no secret that Canada is most concerned at the meetings of GATT which are currently taking place and is insisting that the Inner Six have no right to establish a common tariff barrier on imports."

The CCF member added:

"I am afraid we are not going to get very far with the attitude. This is not in the interests of the free world."

Referring to Canada's membership in the new Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, Mr. Chevrier said Canada is most anxious in the meetings of GATT which are currently taking place and is insisting that the Inner Six have no right to establish a common tariff barrier on imports."

The CCF member added:

Russian vs. Chinese Views

It is generally considered by commentators on international affairs that Communist China is a more implacable foe of the West than Soviet Russia. This view is not based on any difference between the final objective of the two big Communist powers—both desire eventual Communist world domination—but rather on the different methods they favor in seeking this end. Soviet Russia, for example, urges peaceful co-existence, convinced that a Communist victory will eventually result from what the Russians regard as the superiority of their economic system. Since the West is convinced that its economic system is superior, the Russian challenge, while demanding some sacrifices and constant caution, is not so frightening as the more belligerent attitude of the Chinese.

Paradoxically enough, though, there is one result of the more subtle and flexible Russian policies which is likely to provide the West with its greatest problems.

One of the main differences between the Russian and Chinese Communist camps, we are told, lies in their attitude towards nationalistic revolts, which are certain to make the headlines for many years, and possibly for many decades. Not only in Africa, but also in Latin America as well as in scattered spots on other continents, there is a rising tide of nationalism linked, in most cases, with discontent with existing economic conditions.

China thinks that it is a waste of time for Communists to support these revolutionary movements, because, in the beginning at least, they will be opposed by bourgeois-led, Russia, on the other hand, thinks that Communists support should be given to all rebels against the status quo, except, of course, right-wing revolts.

For the time being, this means that China will not be as likely as Russia to intervene in countries in Africa and Latin America, where unrest is rampant. If recent events in some instances conflict with this conclusion — i.e. Chinese Communist support of the Algerian rebels and Chinese declarations with respect to Cuba - - - one can only conclude that in these countries the Chinese believe that it is possible for Communists to take charge of a revolutionary situation and to turn it into a real revolution of the extreme left.

In the final analysis, of course, Russian intervention will be designed to achieve precisely the same result. But if the Russians are prepared to support revolts and independence movements which are not primarily, nor even extensively, radical in the initial scope and aim, then the West is going to be faced with a constant necessity to act with extreme caution. Otherwise it may continually in the future, as it has on more than one occasion in the past, find itself in the position of supporting a tyrannical regime, for no better reason than that by so doing in its opposing Russian-supported elements. We can think of no faster way to lose friends and to reduce Western influence to impotency in much of the world.

Pendulum Swings Too Far

The Afro-Asian block in the United Nations has been displaying a heartening spirit of independence of late. We say heartening because the usefulness of the UN as an arbitrator in international disputes depends upon nations judging issues on their merits, and not on the basis of any pre-conceived bloc.

A recent example of the Afro-Asian lands at work was their action which resulted in the deletion of special reference to the Organization of American States from a resolution dealing with the Cuban situation. It is absurd to suggest that this situation concerns only those nations in this hemisphere and by their action of Afro-Asian nations were able to assert the UN's proper role as the organization which should have primary responsibility for seeking a solution in this land other, international disputes, regardless of the part of the world in which they occur.

For too long the Afro-Asian lands have been deprived of their rightful share of influence in world affairs. But the pendulum can swing too far, and unless action is taken to revise the UN voting system this will become increasingly plain. Field Marshal Montgomery, in his recent book "The Path to Leadership" says: "Only about seven per cent of the world's population is black. But in a few years, if all independent states are admitted (to the UN), this black seven per cent of the world will have about 28 per cent of the votes in the Assembly. Against this the Chinese total 25 per cent of the population of the world and have no votes—not even being a member of the UNO."

Letter To The Editor

Complains Gravel Swept off Streets

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

Now I think I've seen just about a blue ribbon exhibit of spending taxpayers money.

A jeep with a sweeper comes along, brushes crushed rock from the sides up to centre, then a truck and several men with shovels come along, gathers it up throw it in the truck and drive on. When I saw it spending taxpayers funds at a truck load. Why wasn't it thrown in pot holes along the side? Pay for rock being put on and again pay to have it away. The road would have been much better with the rock in the holes.

Bystander.

Editor's Note: The crushed stone has to be mixed with a binding material before refilling holes.

Cockroach Is Germ Factory

Brantford Expositor

For years puzzled researchers have been trying to trace the origins of poliomyelitis, or what used to be accurately to be called infantile paralysis. They have also been seeking carriers.

Right on the suspect list, in this respect at least, has been lately the common housefly. This pest may be a guilty partner — but is only not by the only one. In fact it has never been established that the fly conveys polio, through it is definitely established that it is a dangerous carrier of germs.

An equally or even more likely-looking culprit is one most of us have never thought of in this connection — the cockroach.

This is a night-going (it can go like greased lightning, too) insect which eats almost anything and whose preferred habitat appears to be kitchens or ships.

Our favorite cockroach is that charming, fuzzy little character, archy (he could run two words together, you may need to bit the capital letters) created by Don Marquis, Gravely mortified at archy's somewhat loose-living friend, Mehitabel, the cat. Then we might mention the racing cockroaches known to Mister Gloucester, the pet spider of the Inchcliffe Castle, and the mate of the same ship, that Clementine, the Glenmacnass (considerate him) mas, Mr. Montgomery.

But with that, we are now told, we had better down the breed, if not like the plague at least like the probable bearer of microbes of the sort.

In a report published by the eminent Smithsonian Institution, Dr. Karl P. Schmidt and Mr. Edwin R. Willis warn that not only is the cockroach a nuisance, but that it may be a highly dangerous nuisance.

Here, according to the report sheet, is a list of its sins: it harbors four strains of poliomyelitis virus; it carries species of pathogenic bacteria (that sounds frightful); it eats filth; it gives free rides to the eggs of seven species of pathogenic (disease - making) worms, and acts as an intermediate host to a dozen other creatures.

In short, a cockroach appears to be a mobile germ factory. Perhaps the only other, bad) measure it acts as a conveyor of three kinds of Protozoa and two species of fungi. And even that's not all. It associates with about 40 other less harmful species of bacteria, 40 fungi, six yeast, 90 mild-mannred Protista (very primitive animals) and 46 body worms.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE PREACHER RAISES HIS VOICE

When London was being bombed Leslie Weatherhead, the famous preacher, was compelled at a morning service of worship to speak out loud in order to be heard above the blits of the firemen's hose and the crackling of flames in a nearby building burned.

On one side of the street, a ghastly scene symbolizing man's evil designs in their most devastating forms; on the other, a long prophet of God raising his voice in protest of all evil and in behalf of mercy and love. So the fire raged, and men in danger of their lives fought the fire and tried to put it out; and a preacher, with the Spirit of God in his heart, tried to persuade men that the way of life is not the way of strife but the way of love.

The same scene is enacted every day on opposite sides of the street. Some men and nations are busy fighting sin that the result is fire, destruction, and the ruin of all life's values. When they threaten the life of the city of the nation, we do something about it. We call firemen and soldiers. And all the while God's good men have to raise their voices to be heard above the clamor of evil.

It may seem like a losing fight, but it is not. The preacher still lives and preaches, the Church still exists. But the preacher must keep on raising his voice. The flames of evil are never extinguished, only arrested.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO
April 25th, 1941

Fire originating in the insulation of the curing room from a stove which had been lighted to take away dampness, completely gutted Sidney Town Hall Cheese Factory on Wallbridge. Only the concrete walls of what was the oldest cheese factory of the district remained standing today, with loss estimated as exceeding $5,000, partially covered by insurance. According to the cheesemaker at the factory, the fire originated in the ceiling of the curing room and apparently had been smouldering for a considerable time before being discovered.

With the anglers preparing for the opening of the trout season next month, it might be in order to tell a story overheard at a recent meeting of the Belleville Anglers Club. It seems that a member of the local club was enjoying a day's angling not too many miles north in here and had just landed a fine catch when an inquisitive woman chanced to be passing. "Oh," she exclaimed, "that poor innocent little fish. The local angler caught the tone of sarcasm and replied — "Well, madam, if he hadn't kept his mouth shut, he would not have gotten into trouble." Needless to say, there was no further conversation.

Mrs. E. Irvine of Grier St., has returned home after visiting relatives in Brockville, Neb., in Lincoln, Neb., and in Falls City, Neb.

Archdeacon the Ven. John Lyons has resigned as vicar of St. Thomas' church and has been appointed rector of St. John's Church in Prescott, succeeding the Rev. Canon Patterson - Smythe, who will retire on May 31st. The new rector of a church in Syracuse, N.Y. The departure of Archdeacon Lyons from Belleville and this city is much regretted by many friends.

Mr. H. F. Ketcheson, G.T.R. Trainmaster here, spent yesterday in Brockville.

The meeting of the Redneyville Women's Institute which was held at Redneyville Church was well attended. An excellent Easter reading was given by Mrs. Elwood Spencer. Interesting papers on "Saving Steps and Conservation of Energy" were read by Mrs. Ralph Shafford and Mrs. D. S. Stafford. A discussion followed the reading of the paper in which all present took part, and which proved to be most interesting and instructive.

Mr. T. A. Cory has resigned as a member of the Frankford Village Council and an election will be held shortly to fill the vacancy. The candidates are Messrs. J. M. Bell, E. E. Ketchecon and M. Searles.

Mr. John Ford has returned to his home in Cleveland Ohio, after visiting relatives here.

At a meeting of St. Andrew's Church Guild a debate took place in which considerable interest was manifested. The subject of the debate was "Resolved that local option would be in the best interests of the city." Mr. R. McCreary, and Mrs. W. J. Grant spoke in the affirmative, and Mr. J. Panter and Mr. Montgomery supported the negative. When a vote being taken, the affirmative won by a large majority.

At last the official announcement has been made that the C.P.R is coming to Belleville, and that the line is to be completed within two years. This is indeed good news.

Councillors Are Modest

Hamilton Spectator

Last week this newspaper reported that two city council members, unnamed, were like Sir Galahad to a motoring motorist in distress. This good deed, our story said, took about thirty minutes. It occurred to the aldermen earned the eternal gratitude of the lady who had been stranded with a flat tire (automotive, not human) on a dark city side street in midnight.

Why have these two elective benefactors not permitted the use of their names? Were they content to be accredited of listringing on the exclusive preserves of the Boy Scout Association by performing good deeds? But then, not even a councilman could do one good a side street at midnight, so it could not have been that.

Was it, then, a fantastic fear of being involved in some inverted confidence trick? Come, or of exposing themselves to charges of electioneering after dark? Probably neither was the reason; more likely it was sheer modesty, rare and attractive trait in city councillors — even in an off-election year.

New Tax Law Irks Doctors

Cape Breton Post

Italy's doctors — 75,000 of them altogether — went on a 24-hour strike Saturday in protest against proposed new tax rules which they say threaten professional secrecy. The like of it never happened before in the country's long history.

The Italian government is seeking parliamentary approval of a bill that would provide for members of certain professions to pay a business tax on the basis of bills for services.

The doctors claim that the proposed law would give tax collectible tax inspectors to see their records and thus violate the confidential relationship between doctor and patient. Many people owe more than they care to fathom, the doctors are more concerned about this than are their patients.

Tax inspectors are not as interested in the personal affairs of individual taxpayers as some people are prone to imagine. Nor are census takers. There's something about rows of figures that stimulates the personal quality, and that equates everybody in terms of statistics. But the fear of village-gossip tattle-tales persists.

Chess Cannot Be a Hobby, It's a Horror

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

In the biographical sketch of myself that our promotion department sends out to groups that have been kind enough to invite me to lecture, the game of chess is given as one of my "hobbies."

This is an error. Chess is not, and can never be, a hobby. It is either a disease or nothing. It is an obsession, an affliction, an addiction. But it is not a hobby.

"Every chess player," an ironic friend of mine said recently, "should have a label on him" that was a neat epigram. Because those who are serious about the game soon becomes as single-minded as alcoholics: wife, family, job and other interests all become submerged in the obsession.

I have largely given up playing the game because of its seductive powers. I used to be able to play it and then turn to other to take it up, but no longer. The peril is too great. Some serious chess players' lives, colquing alcoholics; but no serious chess player is married becoming chess nuts. What we need is a secret organization called "Chess Addicts Anonymous."

Not long ago, Cleveland Amory came to Chicago for a few days of the most strenuous activity. His book, "The Proper Bostonians" is high on the best-seller list; his anthology, "Vanity Fair," is crowding close behind.

During his brief visit here, Amory was interviewed by several literary luncheons, receptions, dinner, radio and TV interviews and a few uninteresting gabfests of modern publicity. Every hour of his time was rigidly scheduled.

Yet — owing to the evil machine-like official announcement has been made that the CPR is coming to Belleville, and that the line is to be completed within two years. This is indeed good news.

— owing to the evil machine-like official announcement has been made that the CPR is coming to Belleville, and that the line is to be completed within two years. This is indeed good news.

— Amory spent five hours at my house, devoting his most precious game of chess with me. He ignored phone calls — including one jealous call from his wife awaiting his return at their hotel — curses, threats, promises, and took almost half our other guests who were waiting to go out for dinner with us.

Like the lush who can't stop with the conventional two before a meal, he would have stayed all night playing the fatal combat over the chessboard. We finally had to lock him into the car and drive him down to the TV station for his 11 o'clock show, a panel show. He cried like a baby.

I am doing penance in this piece, for I know that I have urged the game of chess upon others in the past, and I still have a nostalgic fondness for it. But I rarely play it any more; the game calls for a strong will and a steady hand. It is not for weaklings like Amory and myself. And it is not a hobby, unless you look upon opium-smoking as a hobby, too. I don't think I had kicked the habit, until Amory pulled me back into the pit.

Had Courage To Say 'No'

Port Arthur News-Chronicle

This is a story involving Mayor James McIntyre, of Sault Ste. Marie, and the majority of the members of the city council. It is a story that will interest every taxpayer in the Lakehead.

Mayor McIntyre, backed by most members of council, refused to make a civic grant of $750 to pay the expenses of three youthful hockey teams making a "playoff" trip to New Liskeard.

Councils refusal to pay out $750 for the hockey players trip brought out all of the critics. The "sports" argued that $750 wouldn't make much of a dent and sought to create the impression the mayor and his supporting council members were cheap.

In his opposition the mayor pointed out that more than 60 boys were involved and if money was to be spent it should be for the benefit of a wider group. Ald. W. W. Hare said "it's all very well to get excited about hockey" but the money might be better used to help the unemployed in the city. Mayor McIntyre also took the attitude that there is enough people in the Soo interested in hockey to raise the money.

What happened? Soo businessmen and interested citizens raised more than $1,700.

There is a moral to this story involving hand-outs of taxpayers' money and municipal politics. While taxpayers cheer the Soo mayor and his council for their courage in saying "No" in a loud, clear voice, how many other municipal councils will get the message?

Bronchiectasis Frequently Results in Hemorrhages

By Joseph O. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What about bronchiectasis? My husband went to a specialist who said he should have the infected part removed. Our family physician said he did not think it was that serious and to wait. My husband works hard and long hours. He also smokes and drinks heavily. Would this have any effect on his not feeling good and having a continuous cold? — Mrs. R. K."

Bronchiectasis (bron-kee-ECK tuh sis) is a common lung disorder. Tuberculosis and lung cancer are the diseases that get all the attention in print, and if you started collaring people on the street, I suppose you'd find that just about everybody was thoroughly familiar with them. But only a few would recognize bronchiectasis, unless it was affecting some member of the family. Then, they'd know.

Bronchiectasis means a dilation of the bronchial tubes, especially the smaller branches. These areas become infected, and there is a pudding of mucus and pus.

The symptoms include coughing, frequently with blood; shortness of breath, fever, weakness. In fact, hemorrhage from this cause is more common than hemorrhage from tuberculosis.

Likewise this disease can occur among children as well as adults. In children it may be due to some defect in lung development, which is the most common cause in the young ones, or about 25 per cent of time, or it may follow pneumonia, whooping cough, or measles.

In adults, some lung or respiratory infection is the primary cause as a rule, and chronic sinusitis is frequently associated with it — a good reason, I should say, for not giving in to popular but mistaken belief that you can't do anything about sinus trouble, so why try. You can.

Another valuable bit of information to keep in mind is that chronic bronchiectasis is often attributed to "bronchitis." Well, to be technical, it is a form of bronchitis but not in the usual sense of the term as we customarily employ the word.

Bronchiectasis is annoying, stubborn and sometimes extremely dangerous, so it behooves us all to know the fundamentals concerning it. Tomorrow we'll talk a bit about how it is diagnosed, and treated, and answer a few other questions asked specifically in today's letter.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What can be done for migraine headaches? — Mrs. D. J. C."

This question is asked so often that I've included a detailed section, and discussion of how to mitigate and prevent migraine headaches in my booklet, "How To Tame Headaches." To receive a copy, write me in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Chicago, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 20 cents in coin to cover handling.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Could there be a benefit in taking mineral oil over a long period of time? — Mrs. E. S."

Yes, to the extent that it can interfere with the absorption of Vitamin A from your food. Occasional use is harmless though. There are more natural (and better) ways to prevent constipation: A correct diet including adequate bulk-type foods and drinking products and drinking adequate fluids.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

A Mr. Fiddledicker or Slizfleicker or some such name, according to my ladies, telephoned while I was out and left his number. I don't know any Mr. Fiddledicker, but I took the trouble to call his number.

Line busy. A few minutes later, I dialled again. Line busy. The heck with Mr. Slizfleicker, or.

The next day, Mr. What'sh-his-name called again and left the same number, with the request that I please call him at once, as I can in.

I dialled the number. Busy. I gave him five minutes and dialled again. Busy.

How much of my time would I waste dialling Mr. Fiddledicker? An hour, maybe? Making a free moment, I again dialled the number. Still busy.

I gave up Mr. Slizzleflicker.

Next day, he called again; trouble to call his number was over, he reproved my ladies hitherto. He said he had left his number at the telephone exchanges, and he would appreciate it if they would kindly give his number to me as soon as I returned.

I say, to heck with Mr. Fiddledicker.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE EDUCATED MAN

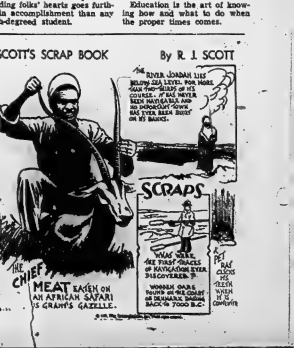
There is altogether too much stress placed upon education as an achievement. I think of it, rather, as a help to being useful.

Someone has said that no man is truly educated until he has under proper control every voluntary faculty of his mind—up. A man of strong self-control is always an educated man. He feels his power.

A vast knowledge of literature and science is not always vital to a thoroughly educated man. Too much book-learning can clog a man. It makes him slow and uneventful. Achievers think and act in simple terms. The great reformers of the world are almost always been those who went before the people with few ideas.

The man who is expert in reading folks' hearts goes further in accomplishment than any high-degreed student.

The most useful university of learning in the world is where we learn to know ourselves.



To be educated is to know how to use what is hard as well as to be kind and just and strong in the face of failure and success. One does not begin to live until one has experienced helping others to live.

I know a chap who left a fine business career to take up special work at a college. When he told them he only wanted to be select enough that he felt would best equip him for a man. It makes me feel he needed studying but two years, he was advised he could not enter for a "degree." The young man replied, that he was after useful knowledge, not degrees, will bank on this spirit any day in the week.

Education is the art of knowing how and what to do when the proper times comes.

Four R's of Work of Blind Outlined to Lions Club

The four R's of the work of the Canadian National Institute of the Blind — rehabilitation, recreation, residential care and research — were explained to members of the Belleville Lions Club at their regular dinner meeting held at the Shrine Club last week.

Guest speaker for the evening was Preston Timmins, field secretary for the CNIB and superintendent of the Quinte-St. Lawrence Hall residence in Kingston.

Mr. Timmins, himself a Lions Club member with over 18 years' perfect attendance, told his listeners the main purpose of CNIB work was to help the blind accept his handicap and integrate him with normal community life. Recreation was also important and here the speaker commended Belleville Lions for providing white Cane Club members with transportation to their social evenings.

Mr. Timmins said the recreational activities of the blind now taking up bowling and golf a far cry from a few years ago.

WILL OPEN CAMP

A ten-day camp will be opened soon at Lake Joseph in the Muskoka district.

The speaker said that residential care had grown remarkably during the past 15 years with the first residency, Linwell Hall, constructed at St. Catharines.

Other residences are now located in 18 cities from coast to coast. Residences in Ontario are operated under the Department of Health and Welfare and in 1960 this department provided a monthly allowance of $89.42 per month for each person in residence.

Most of the research carried on by the CNIB is in the field of improving vision and in the prevention of blindness. Mr. Timmins particularly stressed the importance of the Eye Bank of Canada set up by the Institute to provide corneal material from donors after death in cooperation with their next of kin. In this way, eyes no longer useful to one person help restore sight in another.

The speaker was introduced by George Stration and thanked by Stew Dixon. Club president Harvey Frid was in the chair.

Club elections will be held at the next meeting at which time nominations will be received from the floor. At last week's meeting vice-president Joe Burke presented the report of the nominating committee.

CONVICTED OF GAMBLING

TORONTO (CP) —Two Toronto bookmakers, who police said carried on a $2,500,000 a year operation, were given three - month jail sentences Monday and fined $3,000 each or an additional four months consecutive. Hugh O'Gara, 46, and Alexander Robinson, 35, were arrested after police raided a year ago and convicted last week of keeping a betting house.

Invasion Put Cuba Behind Castro Claim of Businessmen

NEW YORK (CP)—The people of Cuba rallied behind Premier Fidel Castro after last week's abortive invasion, two Canadian businessmen returning from Havana said Monday night.

"Before the invasion, 50 per cent of the people were for Castro," said Harry Dolansky of Montreal. "After the invasion, the country was unified behind him."

Dolansky and Henry Marvin, also of Montreal, arrived here aboard the first plane to enter the United States from Cuba since the invasion began a week ago Monday.

Dolansky and Marvin said they were treated well in Havana and even were able to get telephone calls to and from Montreal. They said they did not see any shooting in Havana.

The two agreed that the bombing of Havana had united Cubans behind Castro. Said Dolansky: "All those who were not with Castro were so angered that they are with him now."

Marvin told reporters that "those who did the bombing of a helpless city are not deserving of support."

Dolansky is president of the Allied Cigar Corporation and Marvin his vice-president. They were among 62 persons aboard a Cubana Airlines plane.

Others who arrived here and in Mexico City told of terrible jails overcrowded to the point that private homes were being used as prisons, and of a crackdown on Protestants and Roman Catholics alike.

"Estimates run from 50,000 to 1,600,000 prisoners arrested in the past few days," one man said. "Jails and penitentiaries are so crowded Castro-ites are taking over large homes to house them."

An arrival in New York said "There is nothing but an atmosphere of terror in Cuba."

Another Mexico City arrival said, however, he thought only the poor and lower classes support Castro.

liament Hill, two miles north, where the 600 demonstrated for more than two hours, chanting "We want jobs" and asking for the prime minister.

When two of the delegates, Dave Atwood of Hamilton and Antonio Dumble of Welland, said they were willing to take on any kind of work, Mr. Walker offered them jobs with picks and shovels.

These were available for anyone who wanted them, he said.

"We are not here to get anything for ourselves," Mr. Atwood said. "We want to get jobs for others."

Mrs. Thornley said the minister's offer was "positive action."

"All we have to do now is send the lists of names of the unemployed to Mr. Walker and he will get us all jobs."

He saw hope for early action on three of the lobby's most urgent requests: Extension of seasonal unemployment benefits beyond May 15; extension of winter works projects on a year-round basis; and guarantees that no retrogressive amendments would be made to the unemployment insurance act.

WOULD BE 'FOOLISH'

"We would certainly be foolish if we obscured our vision and did nothing about unemployment," said Mr. Starr. "In time we have to go back to the voters who elected us."

Both CCF Leader Argue and Paul Martin, Liberal member for Essex East, pledged their party's support and stressed that many of the recommended measures had long been advocated by them.

Before the unemployed delegation left Ottawa by train, members passed resolutions providing for encouragement of greater organization of the jobless persons and proposing a larger delegation in a few months if adequate action does not follow their demands.

The trip was financed by contributions from labor unions and from collections made at factory gates.

Medical Aspects of U.S. Civil War Subject of Talk

A special insight into the medical aspects of the American Civil War, which occurred between 1861 and 1865 inclusive, was given local Rotarians by Dr. Reg Anderson, medical director of the Mead Johnson firm, at their weekly dinner meeting. Dr. Anderson, a former resident of this community was speaking on his hobby, the history of the Civil War.

He described the conflict as falling between two great discoveries which form the basis of modern medical science, that of anesthesia in 1840 and that of bacteriology in the 1880s. During his address he showed how the casualties and deaths suffered in the Civil War emphasized the importance of these two medical advances to the control of disease and the basis for modern surgery.

Those who fought in the Civil War were in greater danger from disease than from injury by almost fivefold, the speaker said. In the Southern army three out of every five deaths were attributable to disease. There were various reasons for this terrific number of casualties the McGill graduate said.

Initially the men suffered from lack of physical fitness, few receiving any examination upon induction. Recruits varied between the ages of 12 and 78 and many suffered from chronic illnesses or physical infirmities. Coupled with this factor was the lack of immunity to bacteriological disease amongst many of the recruits, particularly those from the rural areas.

The conditions under which the war was fought and the means in which the troops lived furthered the spread of disease amongst the ranks. Dr. Anderson said. Long route marches, extended periods of fatigue in the Field in all kinds of weather and a lack of adequate protective clothing for the majority of the men, more especially amongst the Confederate forces, made the troops more susceptible to disease. Poor food stuff of inferior quality resulted in sickness amongst the ranks, the speaker noted.

JUST BREEDING GROUNDS

The troop camps were, in the words of the speaker, "just breeding grounds" for disease. Open latrines, piles of rotting garbage and refuse littered the streets and the lack of pure water supply were characteristic of camps which sometimes covered up to 70 acres and in which up to 70,000 troops were quartered, Dr. Anderson said. Swarms of pests — flies, mosquitoes and lice, were common to every soldier on both sides of the battle lines.

Aside from the poor living conditions there were abominable medical services. Very few of the surgeons serving in either the Confederate or the Union forces were adequately trained. No knowledge existed about bacteriology and often the most elementary surgical operation resulted in infection of the wound and possible death.

Supplies of both food and medical equipment were often non-existent due to extremely poor supply lines and transportation facilities. The Southern soldiers literally fought the war on empty stomachs, the speaker commented, since their railway system simply was incapable of handling the abundant supply of food which was available from the farms of the south.

Many examples of instances where wounded soldiers lay in fields in the open for days after a battle before receiving any medical attention were related by the speaker, who commented that although the wounds which a soldier usually received were quite fierce due to the weapons used the treatment he received afterwards was usually worse. Actually, he concluded, disease killed more of the Civil War soldiers than did the bullets, noting that this war was the most severe of any in which the United States has been engaged in, there being a casualty toll of 42 to 43 per cent of the total number of participants.

The speaker was thanked by Judge J. C. Anderson, having been introduced by an old friend and colleague, Dr. Jack in Walters. Club president Bill Hurst presided at the meeting.

W.C.T.U. Annual Convention Held at Holloway St. United

The Women's Christian Temperance Union of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington counties ended a day-long annual convention at Holloway Street United Church last night with renewed vigor in their attempts to prevent alcoholism.

Guest speaker, after a banquet in the church basement, was Mrs. Beth McKay of Toronto, secretary of "children's work of the WCTU in Canada. Mrs. McKay formerly had been Ontario field secretary for the WCTU.

The morning session began with prayer and the appointment of committees. Miss M. Bertram was appointed chairman of the resolutions committee; Mrs. L. Witter, plan of work; Mrs. B. F. Denison, finance; Mrs. Roy Hobson, courtesy; Mrs. G. R. Finlay, noontide prayer.

NOON BOX LUNCH

A noon lunch was served at noon and Mrs. R. G. Coulter welcomed the delegates.

During the afternoon session, following the reading of the minutes and various reports, officers for 1961-62 were elected.

SELECT PRESIDENT

Mrs. D. Welbanks of R.R. 3, Picton, was re-elected president; Mrs. G. R. Finlay, R.R. 7, Napanee, first vice-president; Mrs. R. G. Coulter, Belleville, second vice-president; Mrs. H. H. Langford, Napanee, third vice-president; Mrs. L. Wright, Picton, corresponding secretary; Mrs. M. Mitchell, Newburgh, recording secretary; Mrs. C. R. Dobbs, Belleville, treasurer; Mrs. B. F. Denison, Selby, Loyal Temperance League secretary; Mrs. A. T. Fleming, Brighton, Coescon camp manager; Mrs. F. C. McConkey, Trenton, camp treasurer. Mrs. Fleming is also the past president.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

A service in memory of WCTU members who died since last year's convention was conducted by Mrs. Witter.

Mrs. Welbanks said in the banquet, prepared by the WCTU of Belleville, included Brandhumphreys of the Salvation Army; the Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Coleman, the Rev. and Mrs. Morgan MacFarlane, and Admiral Walter Elliott, who brought greetings from the city.

HEAR SOLOS

Mrs. Welbanks was chairman of the banquet. Soloist was Miss Beth Robertson, who sang "Ave Maria", accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Elizabeth Robbins.

In her address to the 60 delegates, who were accompanied by a few friends, Mrs. McKay said there never was a better time than now to present the ideas of the WCTU to the public. She said the WCTU should take advantage of the many communications media to educate the public about preventing alcoholism. She believed prevention was more important than treatment or rehabilitation.

Small children are being brainwashed by catchy tunes played on the radio and TV by beer and cigarette manufacturers, she said, and it wasn't uncommon to hear children unconsciously humming or singing the ditties.

The WCTU must "get behind" efforts to remove salacious literature from the nation's news-stands.

INFLUENCE CRIME

"Many ministers and other people in the shaping mould are convinced that crimes are influenced by salacious literature," she said.

"Someone has said that these books and ditties are more dangerous than narcotics."

Mrs. McKay said a survey of a small group of school children around Toronto asked what comfort they said Josephine Kist, "pretty blonde from Winnipeg who recently returned from Pakistan.

42 Stenos in Trade Service Branch Never Stay at Home

By Elizabeth Motherwell
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—There are no stay-at-homes stenographers in Canada's trade commissioner service.

The 42 women in this branch of the federal government work in a climate range from Switzerland to Singapore. They serve in 21 countries among the 49 where Canadian trade offices are busy promoting Canadian exports.

"We start getting excited the minute we find out where we are going next," said Josephine Kist, "pretty blonde from Winnipeg who recently returned from Pakistan.

Harriet Hornsby of Ottawa found endless fascination in Singapore, and was never lonely although she knew only one other Canadian woman, a medical social worker.

H. M. Mackie, assistant director of the service, is proud of the record of Canadian women on duty far from home.

He cites Kathleen Gribner of Preston, Ont., a former captain in the Canadian Women's Army Corps, First woman sent abroad after the war, she helped open trade offices in Lagos, Nigeria, where she now is stationed, and in Madrid. She has also served in Colombia, Mexico, Burma and Singapore during the last 15 years.

The work has variety. Where the trade commissioner is Canada's only representative at detached posts, there are duties that normally are the work of the department of external affairs. In Pakistan, Miss Kist's work included stenographic duties for projects such as the Warsak dam that are Canada's contribution to the Colombo plan.

Many of these women, having left jobs on main streets across Canada to satisfy a wanderlust, now experience modes of living where once undreamed of luxuries become necessities.

Miss Kist had a bearer in Pakistan to bring meals to her hotel room; Miss Morel's housekeeping was cared for in Paris by a cook.

"You haven't the energy to scrub a floor after a day's work in a hot climate," she said.

It was agreed to accept the invitation to join Canadian on May 4 to hear the missionaries from Ecuador, the Rev. and Mrs. Orville Kerr.

Mrs. B. Harder had charges of the devotional and opened with a poem on "Easter." Scripture, Matthew 27:1-24 was read by Mrs. B. May and Thelma read the explanation and prayer about the Cross.

Mrs. Percy Sutherland sang and a solo, "The Old Rugged Cross" and Mrs. Harder closed the devotional with prayer.

Mrs. H. Hancock was called on to introduce the guest speaker for the evening," Mrs. Cecil Smith, who was formerly Eunice Veley. She showed slides and explained her work in Ecuador, which she must support herself.

Mrs. G. Sills thanked Mrs. Smith and presented her with a gift.

Refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

Accessories Can Enhance Many Different Costumes

By PEGGY MARSIN

PARIS (Reuters)—Brilliantly-colored accessories go with the new fashions in the Paris spring collections.

Handbags, gloves, shoes, and costume trimmings mix riotous shades, outmoding monochromatic and subtly-contrasted effects. It has become a fashion "faux pas" to wear accessories exactly matching or toning with the costume.

Paris designers use color in bold, dramatic strokes. They delve to combine such violent contrasts as turquoise and lime green, mustard and orange, or screaming pinks and emerald greens. It takes greater courage to mix these to match; to wear a red hat with a pink dress; or to pin a giant bunch of shock purple grapes to the lapel of a sky blue suit.

But little ingenuity and imagination put big fashion dividends this spring. One or two bright accessories can enhance several different costumes. Last year's ensemble looks beautiful again when with a few new supporting "props."

BELTS ARE BIG

Paris has revived belts. Contrasting colors and low-slung effects highlight the waistline of new collection. Supple sashes made of soft glove leather circle the hipline, or wide cummerbunds disappear under folds of draping. At Pierre Cardin, Jacques Griffe features wide patent leather belts slotted through the buckle of wide jackets.

The trend towards short-waisted coats and one-piece dresses automatically commands long gloves. Eighteen-button length gloves peep from the dress circle at the opera into the realm of casual street wear. Cardin likes brilliant, contrasting colors. Dior favors gloves in the same tone but one shade deeper than the costume.

Numberless little trimming ideas in the Paris collections can easily be adapted to the basic wardrobe. Couturiers favor massive carved or bejewelled buttons, braiding and piped trims, and fanciful bows.

Important novelty buttons are those slung on the shoulder or hipline to draw attention to side-wraps. At Nina Ricci, they are in the form of miniature copper, sometimes copply half-hidden under a panel of velvet. Other buttons are made of horn, polished wood, or bamboo, or are fashioned out of passementerie or clustered stones.

Women's Activities

IVANHOE W. M. S.

The meeting of Ivanhoe W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Emma Roe with 13 answering the roll call.

Mrs. Bert Reid gave a chapter from the study book. The Scripture was read by Mrs. Emma Roe from John 14.

Easter readings were given by: Mrs. Eymer Hollins, "Meaning of the Cross," "When They Had Prayed," by Mrs. Lawson; "Easter" by Mrs. D. McFadden; "Human Beings Cannot Love Without God" by Mrs. P. Cooney; "Central Message of Easter," by Mrs. K. Bray; "What Easter Means to You," by Mrs. Twiddy; a duet, "Oh Ye is the Saviour for Me," by Mrs. K. Bray and Mrs. G. Wood; "God Sent His Son on Earth to Dwell," by Mrs. J. Wickens; and "The Grave Could Not Hold Him," by Mrs. D. Reid.

The readings all encouraged Resurrection, faith and right standing with God.

The hostess, Mrs. M. MacMillan, explained the parables of Jesus and closed the meeting with a hymn and prayer.

A social half hour was enjoyed by all, over a cup of coffee and cake.

Women in Navy to Stay Declare WREN Officers

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—Women are in the navy to stay, Canada's top leading WREN officers said.

It's because they are needed for work they can do better than men and to release men for sea duty, they said.

The comments were made by Lt. - Cmdr. Jean Crawford-Smith, WREN commander, and Lieut. L. Frances Tait, reserve unit head, on an inspection visit here from Ottawa.

A product of the Second World War in Canada, the WREN reserve force will quintuplicate by 1951 and the permanent force in 1955.

Some openings for recruits exist in both branches. Candidates must be aged 18 to 31, have a minimum grade X education and be medically fit and single. They may marry but leave the service when they start a family.

All recruits receive their initial training at the Cornwallis base in Nova Scotia, where trade courses are taken in classes with men. The officers consider this training competition a stimulus to both groups. "No man wants to see a woman at the head of the class, but the girls try hard to outdo the men and occasionally do."

Reserves train one night weekly, and two weeks in summer on full pay. The latter—no vacation from civilian jobs—means hard work but the girls must like it. Many re - enlist after their three years' service.

"We have reserve girls who have showed up for summer training as regularly as nine consecutive years," said Lt.-Cmdr. Crawford-Smith.

The smart uniform may have a small part in attracting young women to the service but the officers believe they like the disciplined life better.

"Perhaps there is less discipline in homes and schools now. They seem glad to have things to do at definite times and orders to carry out."

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mr. B. P. — My son misses no chance to hurt me.

Everett P. — He doesn't want a son, he wants a puppet.

Mr. B. P. — Want to know where I stand, Dave. I'm a son, or not? If so, let Everett treat me as a good father should be treated. If not, let him reject me honestly, instead of accepting my monthly cheque and insulting and slighting me.

He's 28 and a graduate student at university. It's humiliating for me to learn of his scholastic achievements through his friends. He tells me zero. The latest stab came when he addressed me as "Dad," and then asked sarcastically, "I use the term loosely."

He's more human to his mother. While she and I don't get along very well, I'm not blaming his meanness to me on her. If he needs psychiatry, I'll pay for it. All I know is he makes me sick. I've given all the gripes. If he can't act like a son, let's call it quits.

Everett P. — My father's only hold over me now is with his cheque book. And if he thinks his money entitles him to my blood, or obsequious homage, he's mistaken. I can always wash dishes, tutor, or find gainful employment to keep myself in funds.

I'm a fugitive from a man who hoped his life would be my life all over again through me. As a youngster, I'd blush to hear him brag of my marks, and pass around my report card to anyone who looked. Later he'd push me to play my accordion for whomever he dragged home. He's say things like, "I never studied music, I never went to school, I never got to Europe, but I'll see that you do."

The truth is I never wanted most of those things. Now I want a chance to see what I, Everett, want. All my life he manipulated me. Now, he can't.

The Council in rejecting his father, Everett rejects himself to some extent. And, since self-rejection is a first rule for mental health, Everett must be helped to see clearly what he is doing to himself in his efforts to "disaffiliate."

The Family might straighten out this sad snarl, but so much time and experience...Mr. P. must take his vitamins, wear his rubbers, and hope to live long enough to ride out his son's confusions.

Everett is suffering from the squeeze typically described as called "ambulacnce." He feels the two-way tug, one towards his father, the other away. But the pull-away has grown into an urge toward severance, because the pull in the other direction, from Mr. P., was too strong. This son is the victhros of acute rebellion, long postponed, hence more virulent than in younger offspring. Despite his arguments to the contrary, he still wants to be defied by his father, even when he is most unlovable.

To Mr. P. we say, this isn't blackmail. That's too strong a word. Call it a breakdown. Stop pushing in your eagerness for a showdown. Your obvious hurt shows Everett he's hitting target. You can end the "fun" by withdrawing from battle, changing the subject, play dumb, and stop sticking your neck out.

Everett might clarify his relationship with his father, to himself, to picturing Dad as one of those sentimental, perhaps long men who feels keen ache at the birth of a son! His possessiveness was not prompted by malice, but by hope, and enthusiasm, ill-advised and unskilled though they were. He acted as he though best for his son. The latter, trance-like and paralyzed, concerned until this recent Awakening.

Everett P. — Dad, is a cure. If imperfect, parent. And that monthly cheque is more than his "hold." A man doesn't hand out steak to a dog that continually bites him. Still, a father is sustained by faith that a son, being human and humane, will channel his hurt toward nonstructive action instead of sniping and yipping at a shadow.

ACTIVE IN POLITICS—Mrs. Paul Sauve (centre) is carrying on the political tradition of her late husband, the former Quebec Nationale premier. At 56 she is president of the Federal Progressive Conservative Association of Quebec. She is shown in her St. Eustache, Que., home with two of her three children, Lucie-Paule, 16, and Pierre, 24. The other is daughter Ginette, 22, a science student. (CP Photo).

Mme. Luce Sauve Equally Adept Fishing or Partying

By GERRY McNEIL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ST. EUSTACHE, Que. (CP)—Mme. Luce Sauve has come a long way from St. Emilie de l'Energie, the Joliette County hamlet where she was born.

She was recently chosen president of the Federal Progressive Conservative Association of Quebec. She also edits and publishes a weekly newspaper in this bright residential community 25 miles northwest of Montreal.

The widow of the Quebec premier packs much younger than her 56 years. She has a healthy outdoors tan and a lithe figure—both results of her love of golf, fishing and hunting.

Charming and accomplished, she is equally adept at planning a dinner party or catching a marlin, making a speech or winning a friend.

Photographs don't do her justice. Neither does the telephone, which catches a harsh ring in her voice. At close range her earthy and appealing personality comes across strongly.

DOUBTS DISPERSED

There was some doubt among Conservatives about the wisdom of electing a woman president in Quebec but it was wiped out by the reception she was given at a party convention.

Two other candidates promptly withdrew when they heard the ovation given Mme. Sauve.

Though she married into a political family — the Sauves held two Mountains riding almost continuously from 1908 to 1960 — she was not raised in one.

Born Lucre Pelland in 1905, she was the 15th of 18 children. Besides one of the largest families in Joliette County, her father had one of the largest farms. Little attention was paid to politics.

"My father voted for the best man," she recalled in an interview. "That was that."

She was naive enough in 1939 to apply for her first job without a county political reference. She presented her school record and a letter from the priest.

GAVE RIGHT ANSWER

When asked which Joliette politician had recommended her, she didn't know what to say. She remembered the name of the deputy in office however and that he was friendly with her family.

That was the right answer and she was hired as secretary to the four circuit court judges of the Montreal district.

In Montreal, Luce studied English and took part in the social whirl of the 1920's. Popular and pretty, she moved in gay and active circles.

In 1928, she met brilliant and handsome young Paul Sauve through a mutual acquaintance while visiting Toronto—"of all places." Eight years later they were married.

They returned from a brief honeymoon to a tough election campaign in which Maurice Duplessis and his reform-bent Union Nationale upset the long-established Liberal government of Alexandre Taschereau.

LEARNED QUICKLY

"I didn't know much about politics but I contributed what I could—my undivided interest," she recalls of that period, the start of her tumble into the burly-burly of Quebec politics.

The demanding affairs of the province didn't interfere with family life. The Sauves had three children—Pierre, 24, now a lawyer; Ginette, 22, a science student; and Luce Paule, 16.

They were raised in the historic white clapboard home bought by Luce's father, Arthur Sauve, cabinet member in R. B. Bennett's federal government in 1935.

The twin-spired church near the Sauve home still bears the cannon scars of a brief rebellion led by Sir Eustache Gilliere in 1837 and quelled by 2,000 English volunteers.

In 1944, Mme. Sauve made her first active venture into politics and received one when she retained the riding for her husband who was in Europe as commander of a fusiliers Mont Royal regiment.

CAMPAIGNED ACTIVELY

Through she campaigned up and down the small county, addressing farmers at St. Benoit and businessmen at Ste. Agathe, the monks of Oka—where the famed cheese is made—and the nuns of the village convents.

After her husband died suddenly Jan. 2, 1950, closing a promising beginning as premier, she was asked to represent Two Mountains but refused.

"I was not feeling well then."

The seat was lost to a Liberal.

By last autumn, her characteristic energy was looking for an outlet. The weekly newspaper Le Victoire, printed in both French and English with a combined circulation of about 8,000, caught her eye.

"Paul established it in 1948 for the people," she said. "It looked at it and saw improvements could be made so I decided to make them."

"Already I've put a woman's page in the English edition."

Some newspapers have related her by referring to Le Victoire as a Progressive Conservative organ.

"It hasn't even got an editorial page," she says.

She hopes to see more Quebec women interest themselves in politics and has made this an objective of her presidency.

She believes women must keep informed on public affairs and fill their role as citizens.

3 pounds sauerkraut, 3 pounds spare ribs or pork hocks (legs), salt to taste, on top of sauerkraut, 2 tablespoons onion, 4 tablespoons brown sugar, water.

Wash spare ribs, cut if necessary, salt and place in deep pyrex casserole, cover with sauerkraut, spread with brown sugar. Cut bacon slices, add the finely chopped onion and lightly brown this in a frying pan. When done, pour it over the sauerkraut. Add enough water to cover it, then cover with a lid and cook in oven for 2 hours at 325 deg. Fahn. Once in a while take a spoon and press the kraut down firmly so it will stay moist and the top will not burn. This will make 4 to 6 servings.

Missionaries' Children Rank High in Music

Mrs. Andrew Sharpe was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Bill Spinks of Russell, Ontario last week. While there, she attended the three-day Music Festival, conducted for the area surrounding Ottawa.

Mrs. Sharpe is pleased to report that in the girls' nine year solo class, Evangeline Spinks was the winner in the Russell Public School with only one mark less than the winner in the entire area.

In the six year boys' solo class Timmy Spinks received 81 per cent which was but five marks less than the winner in the area.

Danny Spinks was happy to be one of the group which won the laurels in chorus singing. The number was "Freedom." Denny's thoughts and prayers were with his Cuban companions who were suffering for the cause of which they sang.

The adjudicator remarked that the clear, wording in the solo work is surprising since these Spinks children have had less than one year conversing in English.

Editor's Note: Mr. and Mrs. Bill Spinks were missionaries in Cuba for a number of years. Their children received their early schooling there.

MODERN MANNERS

Carolyn Wagner Shaw

COURTESY OR PROTOCOL?

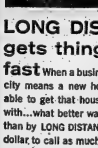
The following letter interested me very much, chiefly because I have received so many others from those who are in doubt about the same subject. I quote:

"I have made some inquiry concerning correct manners, regarding the President of the United States, but have received no reply. Now I appeal to you and hope you will answer my question as soon as possible. It is a question very much under discussion among the people that I know.

"During the Inauguration proceedings, and since then, in almost every instance when The President and Mrs. Kennedy are together, he precedes her by several steps. Even going up and down stairs, he is ahead of her. Also, during the snow, when the walks were icy, she walked alone. He seemed completely oblivious of the fact that she might fall.

"It seems to us that he should show her more courtesy and attention. Am I old-fashioned, or is there a reason for his actions? Is he supposed to show his superiority on account of his official capacity?

"I know that in countries of monarchic forms of government, the ruler always precedes the wife, or husband, but, in a republic I thought we were all equal. However if such is the case in the U.S., and by virtue of his office he should be exalted above his wife, should he follow the same procedure during the campaign days?



"To put it briefly, is there a rule that the President should precede the wife at all times?"

There is no such rule in the U.S. As you mentioned, the U.S. has republican, not a monarchic, government. Your criticism is one that I have heard many times in the past few months. Usually, a President either holds his wife's arm or extends her up and down steps, or he walks beside her. President Kennedy is a very energetic young man, and frankly, I think that this habit of preceding his wife is done unconsciously. Perhaps he will realize some day in the near future that this is amusing comment.

Lipson's STORES LIMITED (1958)

Season Opens Saturday

Low, Clear Water, Some Ice Will Greet Trout Seekers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ontario's trout season opens Saturday and fishermen will be heading forth in droves. They'll find generally low, clear water in the streams and perhaps ice on many lakes.

Is this good or bad? Well, get 10 fishermen together and you'll get 10 opinions but the consensus tends as always toward optimism.

Trout — speckleds, rainbows and browns are found in varying locations across the province — are the first major game fish to launch the summer season and usually produce the biggest waterside traffic jams. There's another two weeks to wait for pickerel and a couple of months before bass and muskies are legal in most areas.

Field reports coming into the department of lands and forests in Toronto indicate water levels range from normal to below normal everywhere. It is particularly low in the Trent and Lindsay districts and the southern part of Pembroke district.

LAKES STILL FROZEN

It also laid a thick layer of hard ice on the lakes and they are still frozen solid north of the French and Mattawa rivers. The ice, in fact, extends south through Muskoka, Haliburton, Lake Simcoe and Tweed districts although there are signs of a breakup on the southerly fringes.

As to what things will be like Saturday, officials wouldn't guess except that northern lakes probably won't start to break up for another week unless there is heavy, warm rain.

In these areas anglers will have to look to the streams, many of which already are open.

Conservation officer Bob Zilak of Owen Sound predicts a fine opening weekend, given some co - operation from the weather.

Streams, lakes and rivers of southern Georgian Bay are down to levels expected in June. The water is so clear, in fact, that some anglers fear the trout will be shy.

Rainbows are the big game in this district. They are the only trout species to spawn in the spring and the run up such Georgian Bay rivers as the Sydenham, Pottawatami and Leith is under way. There also is good trolling off the river mouths and a 10½ - pounder was taken in Owen Sound harbor on opening day last year.

Many eyes will be on the Rosseau pond near Pinkerton, where the water level was lowered 13 feet this spring to protect a deteriorating hydro dam.

Conservation officer Ed Meadows of Bespeler said the pond's surface is down to less than 400 acres compared with its normal 1,600 acres. This will concentrate the speckled trout and could mean easier fishing, but Meadows fears there may have been a die - off because of congestion and lack of food.

FREFER WARMER WATER

Good browns are common in such rivers as the Saugeen and Sauguen in the Georgian Bay-Lake Huron area but prefer warmer water than the speckleds and usually do not become active until late May or June.

Rainbows are running in the Lake Erie tributaries and 45,000 fingerling and yearling speckled and rainbow trout are being stocked this week in Norfolk, Essex and Haldimand counties.

Southwestern Ontario anglers feel the low water might be helpful since insects and other types of food haven't been washed into the streams in their customary spring game numbers and the trout should be hungry.

Lakehead fishermen predict a good opening along the south shore of Lake Superior where peak flood levels have passed on many streams. Inland lakes are expected to be ice-covered

The season remains open until Sept. 15 except for rainbows in some designated Great Lakes tributaries where it is extended to Nov. 30.

The minimum size limit of seven inches for speckled was dropped last year. The creel limit is one plus an additional 14 provided the 14 don't total more than 10 pounds in weight. An exception is in Elgin, Middlesex and Norfolk counties where it's one plus an additional nine weighing not more than five pounds.

Johnson Wins Over Von Clay

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Harold Johnson, fresh from a successful defence of his light-heavyweight boxing championship, is in the same old rut—waiting for Archie Moore.

He scored a second - round technical knockout over Von Clay, a fellow Philadelphia, Monday night, it was a case of a man fighting a boy.

Clay, a 31 - year - old with a 13-3-2 record before the scheduled 15 - rounder, never had a chance. Johnson, 33 and a veteran of 16 years in the ring, knocked him down once in the first round and three times in the second. Referee Dave Ballo stopped the match at 2:26.

Johnson is recognized as world king by the National Boxing Association. He wants a crack at Moore, regarded as champion by the States of Massachusetts and New York and in Europe.

Johnson, a great counter-puncher, weight 175 pounds, the limit for the division. Clay went 174.

The crowd of 6,738 paid $39,293 to see the battle. Johnson earned $13,188, Clay $6,594.

Johnson must wait to see whether Moore can make the weight for a title defence June 10 against Guilio Rinaldi of Italy. If Moore doesn't get down to 175 Johnson might substitute for him.

Takes Up Farming

Basilio Hangs Up Gear

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—Carmen Basilio, his battle-marked face showing the effects of almost 13 years of boxing, started a new life as a gentleman farmer today.

The 34-year-old former world welterweight and middleweight champion announced Monday night that he was finished with the ring for good.

"Right now I'm going to rest for about a week, think things over and take care of my apple trees."

Basilio started out as an onion farmer and barely made a living before he turned to fighting. Now he has about eight acres of apple trees on his suburban Chittenango farm.

GETTING RICH

"I'm moving slowly and getting help from experts," Basilio said. "You might say I know my onions, but I still don't know my apples."

Carmen took a bad beating from Paul Pender of Brookline, Mass., last Saturday in Boston. Pender, defending his New York - Massachusetts - European version of the world middleweight crown, not only won a decisive decision but Basilio off his feet for the first time in his career.

While he wouldn't say so, that undoubtedly helped Basilio make up his mind.

"I've had a couple of good title offers," Carmen said. "But I don't want to talk about them until I make up my mind which one I'll take, I'm in no hurry."

Basilio had 79 bouts, 11 for world titles. He won the welterweight crown when he knocked out Tony DeMarco June 10, 1955. He knocked out DeMarco in a return, then lost the crown to Johnny Saxton on a controversial decision. He made up for that by knocking out Saxton twice, Sept. 17, 1956, and Feb. 27, 1957.

Then, on Sept. 23, 1957, he moved into the middleweight class and dethroned Sugar Ray Robinson. Sugar Ray won the title back on a decision March 25, 1958, and later was tripped of the championship by the National Boxing Association for refusing to defend.

Basilio and Gene Fullmer were matched for the vacant title. That started Carmen's downfall. Fullmer won on a 10th round technical knockout, administering a fearful beating to Basilio Aug. 28, 1959. He stopped Basilio again in 12 rounds last June 28.

By, then, Basilio was considering quitting. But as he put it at the time: "Where can I make $30,000 a year?"

His thinking has changed.

Uxbridge Wins Over Wellington

The Uxbridge Black Hawks jumped into a one-game lead in their OHA Intermediate "C" finals with Wellington by downing the Finns 6-3 at Picton last night.

The next two games of the best-of-seven series are scheduled for Uxbridge on Wednesday and Saturday nights. The fourth game in Picton will be played next Monday.

Goalies for both teams played outstanding hockey last night as Uxbridge took a 2-1 lead in the first period and made it 3-1 in the middle beat.

Wellington battled back early in the third and cut the lead to 4-3 before removing their goalie in favor of an extra attacker. The Black Hawks scored their fifth goal with a minute to go, into the open net and, seconds later, after the Wellington goalie had been removed again, upped the score to 6-3.

Why is this tire different from all other brands?

This is the tire selected by most manufacturers for their new cars. It is the Goodyear Custom Super-Cushion. Why is it different? Because Goodyear engineers know that to build a better tire they have to make a fresh start with improved design, materials and production methods.

These are some of the differences between this Goodyear and other brands in the same price range.

1. Performance is Different. This new tire, precision built with electronic equipment, puts more rubber on the road to increase mileage. Road tests proved this Goodyear gave 15% more mileage than one other major competitive brand; 14% more mileage than another.

2. Design is Different. New continuous zig-zag pattern prevents squirming, improves steering control and, most important, decreases wear to increase mileage.

3. Traction is Different. 9,184 gripping edges give superior traction when starting, increased road holding stability and safer stops on wet and dry pavement.

4. Carcass is Different. Goodyear's exclusive 3-T process triple-toughens tire cord for greater carcass strength and superior resistance to impacts.

Think about these facts when choosing new tires.

The chances are you will agree with the majority of Canadian drivers. And most car manufacturers, too. Goodyear tires offer better value than any other kind.

There is a difference in tires. Visit your Goodyear dealer soon.

You Can't Keep a Good Man Down

On the morning of September 19th, 1960, the crew of a Navy helicopter spotted a lone swimmer in the Atlantic Ocean, about 2½ miles off lower Matecumbe Key, Florida. The wind was still blowing with subsiding hurricane force, around 75 or 80 miles per hour, much too strong to attempt any rescue. The shore crew was alerted, some two hours later, two of the Navy men were able to wade out and drag to shore a badly battered swimmer. This is the story.

On December 17th, 1900, Park Alan Grundy was born in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Even as a child, Park Alan was an aggressive youngster. You can't keep, or calling that sort of a guy "Park Alan." Thus, at a fairly early age his friends christened him "Buck." Today that is the name he uses both socially and businesswise.

Buck was and is a natural athlete. He attended prep school — Blair Academy and Worcester Academy and Perkiomen Seminary, all of these he played football. Then he went to Princeton University, Class of 1932. There, too, he played football until he sustained a permanent injury to one leg in the Penn State game, his senior year. Today Buck walks with a decided limp. That year he received honorable mention for Walter Camp's All - American football team.

INJURY BARRED FOOTBALL

That injury, of course, put Buck out of football for good. The bad leg made the contact sports impossible. Was he discouraged? Not Buck. The year 1934 found him swimming for the U.S. Olympic Swimming Team. From there he went on to become three-time winner of the Metropolitan Professional Swimming Championships. Read these swimming championships in mind; they came in handy later on.

After college Buck held various jobs — Sales Manager of Maurer Steel Barrel CO., 2nd Vice President of the Chelsea Bank and Trust Co., New York City, (closed in the 1929 crash) First President of the New York Beverage Dealers Association, eventually to come to the Florida Keys to own and operate Buck Grundy Realty, Inc., of Islamorada.

In 1944 Buck was getting his old fire competitive athletics so he "took up" fishing. Now remember, up to that time he had done little or no fishing. It wasn't long before he was giving us help me, fit-casting exhibitions. He joined the Tarpon Reel Club of Miami Beach, a group of skillful and dedicated anglers. Each year they conduct a tournament to determine the club champion. Buck won that one, handy down with a score of 4,245 points, exceeding the score of the top former champion by 2,115 points.

Buck doesn't do things half way. He had made considerable money in 1943 so he simply knocked off work and went fishing in 1944. He fished all day and all night. In that one year his guide fees, tackle, etc. cost him a little in excess of $10,000.

Having reduced the Red Reel Club to also-rans, Buck next turned his attention to the Metropolitan Miami Fishing Tournament. Now remember — each year more than 200,000 anglers compete in that tournament. In 1945 he held three 17 tournament leads in the plug casting, fly rod and general divisions, eight of these being new tournament records. Nobody has equalled that one, before or since. Then he got into a wrangle with the Tournament Board, about some petty dispute or other, shrugged his shoulders, and quit fishing. Since then he has fished only a few times.

TURNED TO REAL ESTATE

A dynamic personality and indefatigable exgergy makes a good combination for a real estate man. Inevitably Buck made money. Meanwhile he has married. His wife, Emily, was a beautiful girl, at one time a standin for movie actress Carole Lombard. Buck had done well in business so in 1959 he built a new house ($34,000) on the lower end of Upper Matecumbe Key. The house was built on a sand spit extending out into the Atlantic Ocean and 1000 feet from U.S. Highway No. 1.

When hurricane Donna approached the Keys, warnings were broadcast repeatedly. But until the last minute the center or "eye" of Donna had been charted for a point some 100 miles to the south of Buck's home. Buck and Emily had been through plenty of hurricans so they decided to sit this one out. At the last minute, when they found that the course of the hurricane had shifted, they found themselves shut off from shore by the rising water Nothing for it but to stay where they were.

When the water in their living room reached the height of five feet, they managed to escape through a high window. Their next refuge, a Cadillac in Buck's garage, soon was under water. Buck attempted to carry Emily, who couldn't swim, to the dubious shelter of some high trees. The force of wind and waves tore her from his grasp and that was that. Buck found himself being washed out to sea. That was about 10 p.m. on September 9th, 1960.

At the time Buck was wearing Bermuda shorts, that's all. All night long he swam. Half the time he was under water, being rolled and tossed by huge waves. Now and again he would catch a piece of driftwood, only to have it torn form his grasp by the force of the wind. Constantly his face, head, and body were being battered by floating objects — driftwood, dead fish, what have you. Within the space of an hour or so his eyes were swollen completely shut.

SWIMMING NINE HOURS

When morning came, Buck sensed that there was some sight so he pried open one eye and saw a row of power poles in the far distance. He started to swim in that direction. Some two hours later two Navy men dragged him to shore. That is all he remembers. He had been in the water for nine hours. As stated earlier, Buck was born in 1900. Imagine, if you can, a 59-year-old man swimming for nine hours during a hurricane the worst in history.

They took Buck to the Key West Hospital. The doctors counted 114 cuts on his body, and half a dozen broken bones. Seventeen of these cuts were termed "stitch jobs," to quote Buck. How he managed to survive is nothing short of a miracle, but he did. Evidently it takes a lot to kill Buck.

About a week before this was written I had a long talk with Buck. He was living in a second-hand trailer, taking care of what business there was, but he was driving a new Cadillac. He had lost his wife, his new home, three cars, $6,000 worth of furniture, and his entire office. He said that there was no business — after all, who wants Keys property after what Donna did to it?

Yesterday, I saw he again. Things were getting better, he said. He had a new office. The man who owned his old home didn't want it so Buck took that over. "And," he added, "I'm doing some business." "How much business?" I asked. "Sold a property for $160,000," he replied. Evidently he saw my eyebrows go up. "You don't believe me?" Out came his wallet. "There's the checque." And sure, enough, there it was. Some day, maybe, I'll learn not to doubt Buck when he tells me something.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

(H. J. R.—Joe Louis knocked out Tony Galento in the fourth round in Yankee Stadium on June 38, 1939. Hope you win your bet.)

A New York sportswriter dubbed him the "Primeval Pugilist." And Tony Galento was just that, a chunky barrel-chested chap who trained on beer, whisky and cigars, but was good enough to lick a bear, a kangaroo, an octopus and the best heavyweight of his day.

Mr. Galento is now 51 and a part-time actor who is thinking of returning to the saloon business he made famous. Tony was a "dirty" fighter. His wife calls him a "really good-hearted slob." Max Baer said Galento is the only fighter he ever hated.

He could give the old Dodgers aces and spades in wackiness. He had 112 fights in his boxing career, won 81 of them, lost 25 and drew in six. He almost rewrote boxing history 21 years ago when he sent heavyweight champion Joe Louis crashing to the canvas. Tony was just nine seconds away from boxing immortality.

The records state that once somebody bet Tony ten dollars he could not eat 50 hot dogs before he entered the ring to fight Arthur deKuh. "Tony knew he could do it," said his manager. "He rolls. Loves the dogs. He ate 53 and swelled up so much they had to slit the waist of his boxing trunks."

One night he was so "stoned" he could see two opponents in front of him, and persisted in hitting the wrong one. He could eat six chickens with a hogshead bowl of spaghetti as a side dish washed down with a half gallon of wine or beer.

Galento loved publicity and that's partly the reason he came to wrestle an octopus. It happened in Seattle where the promoters built a large tank.

The story goes: "They had newsreels there, cameramen, sportswriters and whatnot. The octopus was all slimy, but Galento didn't care. He's pushing it around and suddenly the octopus spits and ink comes out. Galento come out of the tank yelling 'What the hell is that!' He said it was poison but later went back into the tank and posed for pictures. Two days later the octopus died."

Galento and his manager came across two Germans who had no boxing gear. This animal boxed. Most bears wrestle.

The bear weighed 550 pounds and Tony fought it in an aluminum cage. They boxed three two-minute rounds, but Tony was careful. If he belted the bear too hard it was liable to turn on him with its teeth.

Tony's people came from near Naples, Italy, where his father was a quarry worker. It seems nobody remembered Tony's age. He did not know the exact number of years until he was 32 when he checked the birth records. He also found out his "entire" name was Dominick Anthony Galento.

Galento never got beyond the fifth or sixth grade in school. He said he had to quit "after I hit a guy with a pick handle. He was a bad fellow. One day he hit a Chinaman. I hid behind a cement wall at school and hit him with the pick handle. I busted his head and shoulder."

There was another "guy" Tony did not like, a fellow named Moe. Tony showed his hatred by picking up a house brick and breaking three of Moe's ribs.

There were other reasons why Tony had to leave school, propelled by official power. He said he put tacks and chewing gum on seats. He would soak a blotter in ink and throw it down pupils' backs. The kids used to call him to lick other kids. If he couldn't do it with his fists, he used a club.

He said his father had a bad temper, too. "I used to get two beatings a day, one in the morning, the other at night. Where we lived the ballroom was crowded. About nine o'clock before I'd go to bed I'd say 'have to go to the toilet.' Then I'd go out. Twelve o'clock I'd come home and get my licking."

Twenty-two years ago this September Tony and Lou Nova engaged in what may have been the bloodiest battle since the days of bare-knuckle bruising. He bested the kangaroo in Atlantic City and was kicked out of the ring. In Pennsylvania he was arrested for belting a wrestling promoter. In New Jersey they pinned an assault charge on him for taking the nightstick away from a police officer.

Tribe Takes Orioles 5-1

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cookie Lavagetto knows all about Yogi Berra, Sherm Lollar and Gus Triandos but as far as the Minnesota Twins' manager is concerned, the best catcher in the American League is his own Earl Battey.

"Battey can beat you several ways," Lavagetto explained during a spring training interview. "He can hit, he can throw, he is an expert handler of pitchers and he can run, something unusual for a catcher. During the last half of the 1960 season, Battey was the best catcher in the American League. I think this year he will be even better."

So far, the six-foot, 220-pound Californian has made his manager look like a genius. In the team's first 10 games, Battey, 26, is batting .333 on 12 hits in 36 times at the plate. Monday night he gave his best performance of the season, cracking three hits including a three-run double in the 10th that led the Twins to a 10-6 triumph over Kansas City Athletics.

The victory kept the second place Twins within one half game of Detroit Tigers, who retained first place with a 4-3 victory over New York Yankees. Cleveland White Sox and defeated Baltimore Orioles 5-1. Rain prevented the game between Chicago White Sox and Los Angeles Angels and Boston Red Sox and Washington Senators weren't scheduled.

PULLED OUT OF FIRE

Minnesota rallied for three runs in the top of the ninth to overcome a 6-3 Kansas City lead furnished by Marv Throneberry's three-run homer in the bottom if the eighth. Battey's leadoff single ignited the tying rally. Two Athletics errors and Bob Allison's single filled the bases in the 10th against loser Bud Daley and set the stage for Battey's game - winning blow. Ray Moore won in relief.

The Tigers extended their winning streak to eight straight as Frank Lary continued his mastery over the Yankees. The stocky little righthander hurled a seven-hitter to lift his lifetime mark against the Yankees to 24 victories and only eight defeats.

Rookie Steve Boros and first baseman Norm Cash led a 10-hit attack against loser Bob Turley and two relievers. Boros clouted three hits and drove in two runs. Cash put his team in front with a fourth-inning home run.

Bubba Phillips hit his first grand-slam home run in eight years in the majors to spark the Indians. The blow came in the sixth with the score tied 1-1. The victim was Milt Pappas, who failed to finish for the second straight time. Jim Perry won with eighth - inning help from Frank Funk when the Orioles loaded the bases.

Johnny Temple, league-leading hitter, extended his hitting streak through all 10 Cleveland games. Cleveland's Tito Francona had a pair of singles to stretch his hitting streak to eight.

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—Carmen Basilio, former welterweight and middleweight boxing champion, announced his retirement from the ring Monday.

The 34-year-old fighter, involved in 11 title scraps in 79 bouts, made his decision following his loss to Paul Pender in their 15-round battle for Pender's share of the middleweight title last Saturday in Boston. Basilio didn't divulge his future plans.

Fluke Goal Is Winner

Terriers Have Paw-Hold On Cup

GALT (CP) — A fluke shot that wasn't even aimed at the goal Monday night put Galt Terriers within a single game of the Canadian senior hockey championship and the Allan Cup.

"I was just trying to throw it in front," a happy Bill Wylie laughed in the dressing room.

But his attempted pass, with less than a minute and a half remaining in the game, deflected off Winnipeg Maroons defenceman Sheldon Bloomer and past astonished goaltender Gord Dibley.

It gave the Terriers the winning goal in a 4-3 victory over the westerners and a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series. Defenceman Harry Neale's long shot from other team.

Coach Brayshaw said Kings will start the series with the same players they started the season for Edmonton. But the Edmonton team is available for later games, defenceman Butch Barber of Lethbridge Native Son defenceman Ken Stephanson of Winnipeg Braves and forward Bryan Hextall of Brandon Wheat Kings.

The Toronto team will be without forward Stan (Sonny) Osborne until Saturday. Osborne is Toronto entering university examinations. Also willing exams is forward Pete Nozkes, who will play in any games for St. Michael's.

foster to the empty net after Dibley was removed for an extra attacker was only icing on the cake.

Wylie's lucky shot climaxed the best game of the series to date, witnessed by only 2,301 fans. Up to then the clubs had split pairs of goals in each of the second and third periods.

Galt coach Lloyd Roubell felt his boys had given their best performance of the round but said: "I still think we can play better. We should have had more goals."

BOTH PLAYED WELL

"Couldn't ask for a better game," agreed Winnipeg coach Gord Simpson. "Both teams played well. We just didn't get the breaks. We have to win one here Wednesday, otherwise we won't be going to Kitchener."

That was a reference to a Canadian Amateur Hockey Association decision Monday to move Friday's scheduled sixth game to Kitchener along with the seventh next Sunday. It followed Winnipeg complaints that Galt ice surface was rough, although both teams expressed satisfaction with it Monday morning.

Galt captain Butch Martin and defenceman Ted Maki accounted for the Terriers' earlier goals, the third of the series for each. Lou Joyal and Reg Abbott tallied for Winnipeg.

There was some terrific goaltending as both sides pounced on Dibley had 30 stops compared with 24 for Boat Hoyer. The 11 minor penalties, six to Winnipeg, did not figure in the scoring.

With his back to the wall, Simpson said he might have Maroons captain Fred Dunsmore down in for Wednesday night's crucial game. Dunsmore has missed the series to date because of commitments at home.

Following a torrid but scoreless first period in which each goalie was fired on eight times, Joyal shot Winnipeg ahead at 3:47 of the second with a 15-foot blast.

SQUARES IT UP

After missing one shot and hitting Dibley with another, Martin squared it up at 6:16 when he flipped Wylie's corner pass behind Dibley. Maki rolled a dangerous three-man Winnipeg break before the period ended.

Only 57 seconds had gone by in the third period when Maki cut loose with a sizzler from the left point that Dibley juggled and lost. Abbott tied it 2:3 at 5:09 after a neat pattern play.

Bob McKnight set up the winning tally. He carried down the right side, picked up his own rebound and broke away from the defence before getting the puck to Wylie behind the net. Dibley had no chance on the bounce off Bloomer's leg.

There were 760 seconds left when Winnipeg goalie went to the bench but Neale grabbed the loose puck after a faceoff in the Galt zone and fired it almost the length of the ice. It just squeezed inside the goalpost.

Memorial Cup Toss-Up

By LORE BRUCE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP) — Hockey gamblers are said to be steering clear of the Memorial Cup senior series opening tonight between Toronto St. Michael's College Majors and Edmonton Oil Kings.

The reason is that they, like everybody else, are undecided on the comparative merits of the eastern and western junior champions.

St. Michael's, winners of the Ontario Hockey Association junior A series, have just got to be good.

Oil Kings, winners in the west over Regina Pats and Winnipeg Rangers, have been described as the best - coached junior team ever to come out of Edmonton.

Coach Russell (Bigger) Brayshaw piloted the Edmonton team to third place in the tough Central Alberta Intermediate League where Oil Kings played all winter.

Rev. Durrell Bauer, coach of the Toronto team, said on arrival in Edmonton he doesn't know anything about Edmonton Kings but if Majors played as they have in the past, the college outfit should give Edmonton all they can handle.

"WE'LL SEE"

Brayshaw said any two teams that have reached the Canadian final have to be tough and added: "We'll win it though."

Two Montreal officials, Russ King and Charlie Knox, will handle the best-of-seven series, which continues with the second game Thursday night, and the third game Saturday night. A capacity crowd of 7,000 is expected to fill Edmonton Garfans.

Father Bauer's two chief worries are the big ice surface and the final Saturday night game. The ice surface, 85 by 210 feet, is larger than that of Maple Leaf Gardens, St. Mike's home ice and possibly the biggest in Canada.

Father Bauer said he heard Sexsmith is good.

It will be the fifth Memorial Cup final for Edmonton and for St. Michael's but that's as far as the similarity goes.

Edmonton never has won the cup and the only time it came to Alberta was in 1926 when Calgary Canadians won.

St. Michael's won the title in 1934, 1945 and 1947. Majors lost in 1946 to Winnipeg Monarchs. It is the distinction of being the only team to win the title three times in the west.

CAN SET PRECEDENT

This time St. Michael's have the opportunity of being the only team to win the cup four times. Majors were share with Toronto Marlboros, Oshawa Generals and Monarchs the honor of having won the championship three times.

The last time a wide margin over the West's representatives were no match for the Ontario wizards resulted in a ruling allowing the West, but not the East, to add strength

National Clubs Staging Hot Race

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Staff Writer

At the start of the 1961 season, National League managers predicted a five - team race with a sixth club, Cincinnati Redlegs, having an outside chance. The league standings today ending the pilots look like guesses.

Only one game separates the first four teams after two weeks of play. Another separates the seventh place Milwaukee Braves from the first place Los Angeles Dodgers. San Francisco, St. Louis and Pittsburgh, the other three in the top rated five, are tied for second place.

In the only game played Monday, Pittsburgh edged Milwaukee 7-6 to drop the Braves one game out of the cellar To further illustrate the closeness of the National League race, the Braves won Monday night, they would have bobbed into second place.

RACE CLOSE

Every National League club can change its position today as San Francisco would take over first place by beating Los Angeles. The Giants were slated to pit Jack Sanford against Don Drysdale. St. Louis could share the top spot provided its defeats Milwaukee and the Dodgers loss. The Cards Ace Curt Simmons primed to pitch against Don Nottebart.

Pittsburgh by beating Philadelphia tonight also could stake a first place claim, if the Giants beat the Dodgers. Vinegar Bend Mizell was the Pirate pitching choice against Dallas Green. The other game pits Chicago against Cincinnati, currently tied for fifth place. Glen Hobbie of the Cubs was scheduled to pitch against Jim O'Toole.

Bob Friend won his third without a defeat for the Pirates Monday night but he needed ninth inning help from Clem Labine. The veteran right-hander allowed only five hits through eight innings and went into the final frame leading 7-4.

LABINE SUMMONED

Wes Covington's single, an error and a sacrifice produced two Milwaukee runs. Friend got John Demerit to fly out for out No. 3 but when Johnny Logan singled in a run, manager Danny Murtaugh summoned Labine from the bullpen. The sinker ball specialist got Roy McMillan on a grounder to end the game.

The Pirates collected 13 hits off four Milwaukee pitchers. Mo Drabowsky, in relief, was charged with the defeat. Pittsburgh scored four runs in the fourth, defeating starter Bob Buhl, but what proved to be the winning run was scored in the eighth—in an unusual manner. With two out, Gino Cimoli singled and Dick Groat followed with another single. Cimoli slipped rounding third. In the rundown that followed, he managed to elude the tag and slid safely across the plate. Cimoli had three hits, including a double.

Commercial League Has Six Teams

The Belleville Commercial Softball league completed most of its pre-season business at a meeting last night and predicted a vastly improved brand of ball for the 1961 season.

Election of officers headed the agenda and named to the executive for the year were: President, Don Smith; vice-president, Leo Culhane and secretary - treasurer, Bob Bland. Smith and Culhane are new to their jobs while Bland is back in office for the third year.

Last night was the entry deadline and six teams officially joined the loop. They are Point Anne, Trudeau Motors, (last year's Bells Cleaners team), Lightfoot Construction, Doug's Catering, Hollioe Construction and Bishop Seeds.

Bland said this morning that while the entries were down to six, from seven last year, all teams were expected to be stronger and more evenly balanced, thus providing a better brand of ball.

The league is attempting to secure the Alemite Field as a home diamond for all five Belleville teams, but Point Anne team will play its home games at the Point and if the Alemite plan goes through, only the two fields will be used.

An agreement was reached with the Bay of Quinte Umpires' Association to handle the Commercial loop games. The umpires will receive $3.50 per man, an increase of 50c over last year.

The league will open on Tuesday, May 23, with Trudeau Motors playing host to Point Anne. The Point Anne team is expected to be strictly a village team with a number of names familiar to the Belleville and District League fans from a few years back forming the backbone of the club.

Harry Craft Is Next Cub Coach

The 46-year-old former Kansas City Athletics manager who joined the Cubs a year ago was named head coach, succeeding Vedie Himsl.

His term as chief in the club's revolutionary plan of rotating coaches instead of having a manager, was not announced. It probably will be for at least two weeks and then another on the staff of nine coaches will be chosen as the head guy.

Himsl, 44, had served as baseball's first head coach in history since the start of the season. He got the Cubs off to a 3-6 start, and the fact that they were blanked twice in Philadelphia Sunday had nothing to do with him being replaced.

FAVORS LONGER PENALTY

CALGARY (CP)—Doug Harvey of Montreal Canadiens said Monday he favors the introduction of a three-minute penalty in the National Hockey League. The Habs' star defenseman told a Calgary Rooster Club luncheon that a player can easily be cut by a stick or skate on a minor infraction and boosting the penalty from two to five minutes for drawing blood "is not warranted."

Sport Snapshots

By PETER FRASER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada has the track and field potential to finish third in the 1962 British Empire Games, says Jim Daly, the new national track chairman for the Amateur Athletic Union.

"But before we can consistently produce winning track teams of an international level we must have 100,000 kids competing at home."

With that thought in mind, the former Manitoba half-mile champion, a Dromedary a professor for more year-round competition on the local level leading to interprovincial meets and winding up with a national final.

"With 30 meets a year in every province you are bound to find half a dozen Harry Heroines," says the strapping 35-year-old six-footer from Winnipeg who is using Manitoba as the basis of a pattern he hopes to see in operation across Canada within a few years.

Jerome, the Oregon University sprinter from North Vancouver, is a co-holder of the world 100-metre record of 10 seconds.

CO-ORDINATION NEEDED

"Communications are loose in Canada with each region holding separate competitions at varying times of the year which never are aimed at national championships," Daly said. "I intend to correct this."

He admits that money is needed to carry out his program. But "the sport can ultimately carry itself — indoor meets have proven this by coming out in the black here."

Nearly 14,000 fans watched two meets in Winnipeg during the winter when Toronto's 17-year-old Bruce Kidd was billed as the main attraction.

As events chairman for the Royal Canadian Legion here, Daly was behind the launching of the International Meet of Champions in January, held for the second time this year, and Canadian indoor track championships in March, also started in 1960.

The 600 students who competed in the high school division of the indoor championships this year were bolled down from Manitoba boys and girls who ran in four elimination competitions during the winter.

WOULD BE MULTIPLIED

"Put an indoor track in every province, multiply 1,200 by 10 and you'll have 12,000 kids competing across the nation."

If the program continued to expand, Canada would soon have enough athletes to turn out a topnotch international track and field team.

Daly said a Maritime conference similar to the Prairie Track Conference will be in operation by the summer of 1962. The Prairie conference designed to run outdoor meets will start May 28 this year in Edmonton followed by competitions in Fargo, N.D., June 17, Regina, July 8 and winding up in Winnipeg Aug. 12.

In 1962, Daly said, he would like to have similar competitions in every Canadian region with a national meet in late August, the winner's to meet a U.S. team.

"We may be clobbered but valuable experience would be gained."

Of his own program, Daly points to the fact that at least 15 of his proteges have been picked up by U.S. universities for athletic scholarships. Within three years he plans to have them all back in Manitoba alone. The province has only six per cent of the population and is entitled to a proportionate share of a population basis elsewhere, it would mean 60,000 track and field hopefuls in all Canada.

Racing Over 'Ome

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — The first of Britain's 1961 racing classics will be run at Newmarket Wednesday, and an unusual betting situation has arisen.

For the top — heavy favorite is a big bay colt with creaky legs, a mis - spelled name and hardly any race-course experience.

In fact Sir Victor Sassoon's Pinturicchio — by Derby winner Pinza out of an Italian-bred mare — has run only once race in his life. He won it all right, but none of the bookies who beat had ever started before.

Yet Pinturicchio, largely on the strength of confident reports from those who watch the morning workouts, will go to the post generally as even money favorite to win the two Thousand Guineas, first of the season's classic races.

The Guineas will draw a field of more than 30 three-year-olds from Ireland, France and England.

It is rare for a novice to monopolize so much of the serious betting.

But Pinturicchio looks and acts like a champion in the making, and history is on Sir Victor has the Midas touch. He has won the Derby four times in the last nine years and hopes to make it five with Pinturicchio, already the favorite for the Epsom classic too.

However, the bookmaker critics are a little worried about his joints. Some say they won't stand up to hard racing.

Jersey Gets Wet Assist

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rain and the Jersey City Jerseys apparently have become bosom buddies during this spring in the International League baseball season.

Twice in the last three games, the rains came just in time to save the Jerseys from defeat at the hands of Toronto's Maple Leafs. Toronto held commanding advantages on both occasions.

Monday night the Leafs erupted for five runs in the top of the 10th inning. Rain promptly stepped in and washed out the five tallies, leaving the teams tied at 2-2. The umpires called the action off after waiting 49 minutes.

Saturday night Toronto held a 4-1 lead in the fourth frame when a rainstorm came to Jersey City's rescue and forced postponement of the game.

After spotting the Jerseys a 2-0 advantage in Monday night's only International game up with single runs in the eighth and ninth to tie the score at 2-2 after nine.

All eight clubs are scheduled for action tonight.

Americans Beat Russ Hoopsters

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States men's basketball team unbeaten but thoroughly tested in its first two games with the Russian national team, left for Kiev today on the second leg of an exhibition tour of the Soviet Union.

The flashy team, led by all-America Jerry Lucas of Ohio State, overcame a determined Russian aggregation Monday for an 84-81 overtime victory before 16,000 fans. Lucas scored 20 points including the clinching basket.

The American women's team was not in the same class with a Russian women's squad, bowing 55-45 for its second loss in two games.

Olmstead Retires for Third Time

CALGARY (CP) — Retirement from the National Hockey League may still be a long way off for Bert Olmstead, the Toronto Maple Leaf left - winger blasted Monday night.

Olmstead said in Calgary Saturday he was definitely going to quit this year and take up farming at Scepire, Sask. It was his third such announcement in three years.

Sunday night his attorney was "almost certainly" during an appearance on a local television show.

But it's a sportsman's dictum Monday night he put it this way:

"As of now it sticks, but you never tell when September comes around."

Dubbed team mate Red Kelly, another head table guest said at 35 about 11½ years older than Olmstead.

"If you don't come back I'd better think about retiring too."

Hot Tigers Stumping The Experts

DETROIT (AP)—Detroit Tigers are stumping the experts again, this time with their longest winning streak in 12 American League seasons.

Not in first place, this team everyone picked to finish sixth in the 1961 campaign. Their pitchers are yielding about two earned runs a game and the team is batting around 2.70.

Their latest triumph, a 4-3 decision Monday over New York Yankees, kept them in second place, just behind Baltimore. The latest team win eight games in a row. Last year the Tigers put together a 10 - game streak.

"Man, this is terrific," outfielder Al Kaline said Monday night. "I think this club is acquiring real confidence, real poise. You know, Baltimore came through last year with a bunch of kids and made a real run for the pennant. Why couldn't we do the same thing this year?"

Manager Bob Scheffing was pressed for the answer to Kaline's question.

"I haven't talked pennant yet and I'm not about to start," Scheffing said. "We're playing good baseball. We're not making stupid mistakes."

Perhaps the experts have predicted great things for the Tigers. But the club seldom has done as well as expected. The 1961 season is young, but things are looking up.

Shirley Jones' Film Career Dragging Until New Role

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Burt Lancaster wants to talk to you about a movie," said Shirley Jones' manager. "I don't know what the role is, but it might be a shady lady. So dress sexy and look old."

From just such beginnings are Oscars won. That's the way it started for the winsome Miss Jones, whose film career was dragging until she played the racy Lulu Baines in Elmer Gantry.

"When I went to talk about doing the part," she recalls, "I wore a dress that was cut down to here and fit tight around the hips. I also wore my hair up, so I wouldn't look so young.

"Burt and the producer, Bernie Smith, were for me from the start. . . . I got the part without making a test, although I would have been willing to make one."

It was one of the notable switch-castings of recent times, her turning from musical comedy heroine to a fallen woman.

The musicals almost did Shirley in, as far as films. She won immediate fame by being chosen by Rodgers and Hammerstein as their film Laurie in Oklahoma!

"It was a wonderful break," she says. "I was lucky to be chosen because they didn't need a star for the part — Rodgers and Hammerstein were their own stars."

When she finished Carousel, her studio, 20th Century - Fox, told her it had no films for her — because we aren't planning any musicals." She protested that she "could do musicals, but to no avail.

Science Program On CBC Radio

CBC radio's award winning program Science Review returns to the Trans-Canada network (CBL) April 27 for a 13-week series.

The program, heard Thursdays at 8 p.m., will once again have Lister Sinclair as editor and host and will present biochemists, botanists, ornithologists and paleontologists freely discussing their work.

Science Review, back for its fifth series, has in the past two years won special citations from the Edison foundation, an American organization interested in the publicizing of science information.

Subjects to be discussed include the reproduction of mushrooms and other fungi, explosives, universal measurements of sweetness and radiation.

Broadcast of May 25 will be a study of nature of man and his world. Is man merely a chunk of complex equipment reacting predictably to signals fed into it? Is there more to man than the known workings of his body and mind? These are sample questions which B. F. Crowther, associate professor of biochemistry at the University of Toronto and J. R. Seeley, professor of sociology at York University will try to answer.

On June 22 program Dr. Linus Pauling, whose statements on disarmament and the dangers of nuclear war have kept his name in the news recently, will discuss with Donald Ivey, professor of physics at University of Toronto, Dr. Pauling's role in the history of chemistry.

In this program he explains his interpretation of the bond between atoms which won him the Nobel Prize.

Also under discussion will be the structure and properties of water, the problem of lamprey in the Great Lakes, a systematic method of naming animals and plants, and the measurement of time.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER
Wednesday, April 26, 1961

General Tendencies: This is a day to make sure that you spend your time getting every single detail in it, right place and for being very down-to-earth in contacting those who can help you to make the repairs that you need and the cleaning, health treatments, itemized statements, and reports as well as discussing co-operative plans sensibly.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) You are able to tackle all of that work, whether at home or place of business, sensibly and with vision, so be sure you get an early start, especially with the written or oral affairs. Impress others favorably, particularly fellow workers.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20)—Get out early and seek out those individuals who are worthwhile and with whom you want to spend several happy hours. But be sure to call first on the telephone, set a definite time for meeting, then enjoy the cultural pleasure, you desire.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) An experienced individual will now point out to you and close ties how to make your home more operative and harmonious by installing the right appliances. Follow through with ideas. Save time and energy. P.M. fine for sociability and confiding in good friends who can also assist you.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — You can certainly make a fine impression upon higher-up now by being more exact in your work and showing that you have an accurate picture of the most salient factors concerned instead of dwelling on the petty and the personal.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Endeavor to get out to some charming spot with a new and interesting friend in order to co-ordinate your efforts for some future venture. Come to a real understanding. Study thoroughly all details connected with enterprise.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Follow that fine hunch that will lead you to a better system of operating and it would be well to confer with senior members of your family for excellent suggestions that will also be very helpful in the future. Become closer knit, too.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Fine day to work together harmoniously with associates, friends or even competition at whatever may be of pitch and moment, or has to do with the public in general. First clear up any misunderstanding quickly. P.M. fine for fun.

If your child is born today—there will be a tremendous ability for analysis and dissection in this nature, and the practical sense is paramount, so do not expect any imaginative daydreamer in your home and give the finest academic education you can. Also, understand and encourage your fine youngster who will ever be building on a solid foundation—success will come quite early in life here.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this inexpensive substance right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissues all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Join with congenials now at the work or play that you enjoy. Fine day for making sales or purchases, collections, getting rid of the obsolete, straightening out errors, etc. P.M. be off together to the amusements you like.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Be sure you impress others with your practical sense, particularly highers and who have it in their power to make life easier for you and your associates. Then you can start an upswing in your affairs that will bring in far greater revenue.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) Now you are highly inspired how to make your life more successful and happy, but it requires that you step out and see the persons who will give you the co-operation and support you need. State ambitions honestly. P.M. be sociable.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) — Should much of the day and evening at affairs that need to be handling in private. Also, be sure you listen carefully to any authorities who have wonderful ideas to exchange. Profit through them.

Scorpio (Oct. 22 to Nov. 21) Spend some time this morning thinking what your true goals are, and once you are sure, you have already travelled part of the way in reaching them. P.M.

NEW ROUND

any strike action until after May 15.

The government will introduce special railway legislation in Parliament soon, stemming from the recommendations of the MacPherson royal commission on transportation.

ANNOUNCES PLANS

Prime Minister Diefenbaker told the Commons Monday that legislation can be anticipated "arising out of, if not directly connected with, certain portions of the report."

The six-man commission proposed three specific subsidies for the railways, two of them aimed directly at helping the railways streamline their business to fit the new era of transport competition.

There has been informed speculation lately that the cabinet has accepted the general proposition of passenger and branch line subsidies, but has rejected, at present, the plan for losses on Western export grain.

Meanwhile, the government will move this week to continue the "roll-back" subsidy on certain freight shipments, a $20,000,000-a-year form of assistance, set up on a temporary basis 21 months ago, but due to expire next Sunday.

When it was introduced, the "roll - back" subsidy was designed to offset the full impact of a 17-per-cent freight rate increase authorized in December, 1958. This rate increase was granted so that the railways could get the money to meet the last wage settlement with their "non-op" workers.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Monday that Parliament will be asked to extend the Freight Rate Reduction Act, under which the subsidy is paid. He did not say for how long it would be continued.

NAZI NIGHTMARE

It was against this harassment, involving his own statements, that Herzhel Grynszpan, then a boy of 17, decided to protest by a public demonstration.

He waited on the steps of the German Embassy in Paris, hoping to kill Ambassador Count Johannes Von Welczeck, but instead he was met by Von Rath, the 3rd secretary.

Eichmann has said he met Grynszpan during the war to interrogate him about the background of the case but that the interrogation was inconclusive. At a recent trial in Germany, testimony was offered that Grynszpan was killed after his father testified today that he perished in a Nazi death camp.

Earlier in today's session the court accepted in evidence a statement by former SS Major Dieter Wisliceny describing Eichmann's role in the Nazi anti-Jewish campaign.

The court specified that a second affidavit, supplied by Wisliceny's American interrogator at the Nuremberg trials, would be accepted only in part for the corroboration of Wisliceny's signature.

Wisliceny was hanged in Czechoslovakia in 1946. He had been interrogated late in 1945.

Wisliceny at Nuremberg Wisliceny quoted Eichmann as saying he would jump laughing into his grave because of the feeling that 5,000,000 Jews had met their death before him.

Eichmann, in transcripts released last week, had called Wisliceny a "liar" and a "swine."

Eichmann's son, Mordechai, followed his father on the stand. Mordechai said he saw his brother Herbert for the last time in 1935 and the last letter he received from him came from a prison in Paris in August, 1939.

"I have been looking for my brother up to this very day," Mordechai said.

The first witness in the trial who knew Eichmann personally was he was in charge of the Gestapo's infamous Jewish affairs section then took the stand.

The witness, Dr. Benno Cohn, was a member of the Berlin Jewish community during the rise of the Nazis in the 1930s. He now is a Tel Aviv lawyer. Cohn met Eichmann twice before the Second World War and once after the former Gestapo leader was brought to Israel last year.

Cohn, last head of the pre-war German Zionist organization, recalled how the Nazi pressure on the Jews gradually built up in the 1930s.

"Most German Jews did not want to believe what actually happened to them in the nation considered as one of the most civilized in the world," he recalled.

Cohn then launched into a description of principles of Nazi statutes against the Jews.

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 26th, 1941

Officials of the Department of Labor have expressed their complete satisfaction with trainees turned out from the classes of the Dominion-Provincial Youth Training Course being held at the Belleville Collegiate Institute. It was learned this morning from Mr. George Ferguson, the chief instructor of the course. Over forty machinists and welders, graduates of classes closing during Easter, have been placed in industry.

The Girl Guides of the city who are planning a doughnut sale to raise funds for their needs, have pledged themselves to contribute half of the money realized to the Red Cross. The Guides have been keen supporters of Red Cross and patriotic efforts in the city and hope to be able to make a substantial donation through the Doughnut Sale.

When it pulled up in front of a city hotel this morning there was nothing exceptional about a handsome automobile except perhaps its individual beauty, and the fact that a Union Jack fluttered atop the radio aerial. But a close observer would have noted the fact that the flying of the flag was another gesture of good neighborliness on the part of the people south of the border, for the car bore Missouri licence plates.

Pupils of St. Michael's Academy attended Mass celebrated in honor of St. George, at seven-thirty yesterday morning in St. Michael's Church by Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, M.C., V.G. During the day patriotic exercises were held in the schools in which the significance of the life of the patron saint of England was stressed.

coming, we will have our struggle for the day — and for every day."

This is sound Christian doctrine. This is the comfort which Jesus Christ came to bring to the hearts of men and women. Ninety per cent of the circumstances which touch our lives are by their very nature beyond our control. We are in the hands of our forebearers, as claimed by fortalling realization is that we are also in the hands of God.

Let us change everything in our lives and in the world which needs to be changed and which we can change, but let us leave that great mass of things be-yong our power in the hands of Him who made all things and now sustains all things. We can walk only in the light which God gives us.

Measure Distances In Attitudes

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

With the arrival of the jet-flight age, it is plain to see that what we can measure best is not a psychological matter that a geographical one. "Near" and "far" are relative to our states of mind.

Looking at an airline map en route to Dallas last month, I found it hard to believe that it is farther from Chicago to New York than from Chicago to Dallas.

Living in Chicago, I am "far-east" New York, as it were; psychologically, New York is part of my horizon, while Texas seems miles as far away. And I am sure that the people in Dallas find it hard to believe that Chicago is closer to them than Mexico City.

These "farness" Mexico; in a sense, even though Chicago is several hundred miles closer to Dallas than Mexico City is the frame of reference, and Chicago is the principal one. Mexico is "north"; Mexico City is "just across the border."

The psychological "set" accounts, in large part, for the astonishingly large, lamentable lack of foreign tongues. On the Continent, young students learn languages easily, and know that they "face" other countries, only a few months' discipline is higher, but the psychic conditions are more favorable as well.

It is interesting that, of all European countries, England is the least linguistically inclined; only 50 miles of channel separate Britain from the Continent, this narrow body of water divides the English from learning foreign tongues.

An island nation rarely bothers its intern groups to learn a tongue; and what is the United States but a large island, separated from the rest of the world from its parent culture? Even Canada has an "abroad" or an insular. You may recollect the famous deadpan headline in the London Times, after the historic "Storm Rocks Channel; Continent Isolated."

Perhaps the most important revolution of our mild-century is the revolution in the concept of distance. We have, in a few years, learned to expand distance in terms of "miles," and think now in terms of hours or minutes.

The original 13 American colonies grew much farther apart than the entire world is today; it took ten times as long to get from Rhode Island to Virginia as it now does to get from England to Moscow. But psychologically we have not yet felt this shrinking; our frame of reference remains local rather than global — except when we permit ourselves unusually thoughts of war.

Space and time, Einstein taught, are relative concepts. That lesson may turn out to be more crucial for our survival than anything in the history books.

Compensate Innocent

Vancouver Sun

If the Crown seizes private property in the public interest, the law requires that the owner to be compensated fairly.

But the Crown can seize the days of a man's life in the public interest without compensating him. He can be kept in jail without any trial and then believed to be an important witness in a criminal case.

The system seems particularly unjust when the witness comes forward, after he has been abused, because he believes he can aid investigation.

Persons acquitted of serious charges or where charges are dropped, seem to suffer fundamental injustice as well. Except in cases of private prosecution, they cannot recover costs of defending themselves, or for loss time in their lives. Yet in the law's eyes, they are innocent.

Britain should have enlightenment in these matters. Judges and magistrates have wide power to order compensation or witnesses which would appear to cover extraordinary compensation where justified.

The courts in each case where defence costs where charges are dropped or acquitted occurs.

If the court decides the charges should never have been laid on the evidence available, it may assess defence costs against police and prosecutor.

If the evidence was sufficient to lay charges, defence costs may be ordered paid out of local public funds.

Only weeks ago in Britain, the Crown withdrew prosecution, after presenting its evidence in court, against four men jointly charged with murder. The judge decided that the charge should have been laid. But he acceded to the request of counsel for the four men and allowed them costs of their defence out of the local fund.

To Your Good Health

Irritants Can Cause Heart To Skip or Have Extra Beats

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What causes heart beats to skip: Is there any cure? Will it damage the heart? Is it considered organic? — Mrs. U. H."

Ordinarily we are so used to the beating of the heart that we don't notice or have an awareness of it. Maybe because of excitement, or heavy exercise, we notice the difference — a pounding of the heart. Or lying with ear pressed against a pillow you can hear, or at any rate, sense the pulse sometimes.

However, under some conditions the customary smooth rhythm of the heart can be disrupted. Then we notice it: An extra impulse, or beat, is thrown in, followed by a pause very brief, of course. This is what we sense as a "skip" although it really isn't. It's just a variation in the usually regular timing.

The commonest cases are some irritant to the heart muscle. Coffee, tea and tobacco are the principal ones. Moderate amounts as a rule won't have any such effect, but excessive ones can. Irritants be included are excessive amounts of "cola drinks", because of the caffein.

When I say "excessive," I can't be specific. Lots of coffee and intensive smoking will not affect some hearts, but only a few smokes or a few cups will irritate others. People are different.

As for organic causes, hyperthyroidism, or overactivity of the thyroid gland, is a familiar offender. It usually increases the heart rate and the heart muscle can become irritated as a result. Then it is susceptible to these extra beats, or "skipping."

Patients who have had heart attacks are especially prone to these extra beats, so for them tobacco and caffein should be avoided if used to a degree that produces heart irritability.

Curing these "skips" or extra beats? First determine whether any organic heart disease exists. After that, check habits as to use to tobacco, tea, coffee or other caffein drinks. Simply reducing such irritation helps. Then, if need be, check for hyperthyroidism or "skipping" from this usually occurs when you are at rest, and activity eliminates it.

Ordinarily the extra beats are harmless if there is no underlying heart disease. With a heart that has had real trouble, the extra beats may throw enough added strain onto the already injured organ to be of significance.

(ADVT.)

"Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about coffee and its effect, if any, on the kidneys. Is it preferable to drink tea? — Mrs. C. U."

Both coffee and tea contain caffein, and caffein is a stimulant to brain, heart, kidneys. Stimulants in moderation aren't harmful, of course.

The amount of caffein in this beverage depends on the source of the plant bean, and on the amount of steeping of the tea. It would be possible, therefore, to make tea that is weaker in caffein than coffee, or vice versa.

The choice is one of taste and convenience. Excessive use of either may in some people cause nervousness, wakefulness, irregularities of heart rhythm, and frequent urination.

I decline to take sides between tea and coffee. Either is fine is used within the amounts that suit your physiology.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I am a diabetic and take medication for it. Is there anything I can take to gain a little weight? I am in my early 60s, five feet two, and did weight 145 about five years ago. Now I weigh 119. — Mrs. R. C."

With diabetes, you are better off at the lower weight. Come to think of it, you're doubtless better off even without diabetes. That's a very good weight for your age and height.

FACE IT

Too many people, when things get dark and all seems lost, are tempted to go wrong. This is not the time to give up, or to walk away, or to get away from your props. It is the time to prove your mettle. Never mind what others may say!

We must not forget that life is a pilgrimage and we must make our journey with as much courage and goodwill as are possible.

Command a hearing for any trouble that may appear on your horizon. No matter what, be a fighter and a finisher. By completing what you should do today you create opportunities for the untried tomorrow. Form a partnership with your Will and become aggressive.

We can each face the day with high heart. No matter what the problem, we can face it with no sorrows, no problems, no disappointments, or failures the world be no test of character, no chance to build a land on enduring structure.

We owe our great free country to the fact that from bit pioneering days it has endured hardships and endless discouragements.

There is always that Other Self near by, and what he whispers into our ears is this — You can never do it. The world the world has gone forward. People have faced their opportunities and failures with courage and taken no backward steps. They may have stumbled — but they have gotten up and gone on — right on! This is the inspiration behind all achievement.

It is inspiring to follow a leader who has been bred in the college of experience.

Nothing good is ever totally lost.

South Africa Well Treated

Peterborough Examiner

A recent announcement that Britain and the United States have assured South Africa's uranium industry of markets until 1970 bears out the confusion and clarification. According to a statement by the South African Minister of Mines, Senator the Dr. Klerk, published by the government's publication, South African Scope, (later reprinted in London) Britain's new agreements between the South Africa and the American and British Atomic Energy Commissions, guarantee a market for South Africa's uranium for the next decade. The statement indicates that the contract supersedes a former agreement which was due to run until the end of 1966. Under the old contract, South Africa was to supply the Combined (U.S. and U.K.) Development Agency with 28,350 tons of uranium oxide at an average of 4,735 tons a year.

Senator De Klerk's statement continues: "The current agreement provides for the same total supply but stipulates that only 3,723 tons shall be delivered annually for the next six years. For the last four years of the agreement (1967 through 1970) the amount will be stepped up to 5,933 tons annually." Simple multiplication will show that far from the new agreements calling for the South African delivery of 28,350 tons called for under the old contract, as claimed by Senator De Klerk, the new agreement calls for almost twice that amount—47,410 tons.

Thus Canada, a Commonwealth member in good standing and one of the United States best customers, is refused additional contracts while South Africa, according to Senator gets preferential treatment. A how! by the Canadian Government is called for.

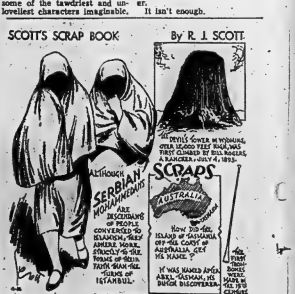
TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

In the bad old days before democracy came to these us, we were preyed upon largely by our betters. I was the noble lord who owned the iron foundry where you worked. It was the marquis who owned the stuffs in which we dwelt. There was some little satisfaction in feeling we were in servitude to people of quality and birth.

But now that "democracy is here, and the rich are being taxed as well as the poor, we are being preyed upon by goodness knows who. Those who are making their millions off us are the sons of the bawdiest and unlovellest characters imaginable.

types we wouldn't dream of associating with.



We long to see are being preyed upon. How else do all these ligerant, arrogant, unmannerly fellows with drivers get grow, like vegetables, it doesn't multiply, like wheat. It has to be earned and made, dollar by dollar, by somebody. And those who manage to collect large quantities of it have obviously taken it off large numbers of those who made it, dollar by dollar.

The only way they are our betters is that they are smarter.

It isn't enough.

ain toward closer trade ties with Europe when it rejected outright a 1957 proposal for free trade with the United Kingdom.

It was an opportunity to explore the possibilities of free trade. Britain's closer ties with continental Europe might have developed into a North Atlantic economic community.

Mr. Fleming said British refill is a long way from pooling her trade with that of Europe, since France will not agree to amendment of the Rome treaty by which the "Inner Six" Common Market is tied together.

Britain has promised, he said to keep Canada and other Commonwealth countries informed of any developments affecting the 1932 Empire preferences.

DENIES CHARGES

He denied Liberal charges that he had interfered in the installate if Canadian markets in Britain and Europe were affected. However, he had warned that if Canadians are closed out of certain markets, this country will have to negotiate new favorable terms for entry into other countries.

Mr. Fleming said the Labor-als, identified as free traders in cluded Mr. Gaitskell, have turned a cold shoulder to multilateral trade which was advocated while in power. He said Mr. Pearson now is lukewarm in support of the trade agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), which had done about all it could do.

Canada's need was to press for expansion of trade throughout the world. This country had been a stickler for observing the letter and the spirit of GATT, he said. Mr. R. C. (Dick) Willman) said Canadian consumers should not be expected to pay higher prices to maintain protection for inefficient producers in Canada. Tariff protection invited retaliation and the keeping out products from one country, Canada might lose a big market for wheat in that country.

Supersonic jet aircraft will be used by the world's major airlines by 1970 or 1975, Assistant Chief Navigator Don Willis of Trans-Canada Airlines told the Quinte District Foremen's Club.

And at just about the same time the usefulness of airline navigators will end.

Mr. Willis, former Second World War RAF navigator, said supersonic airliners already are in the experimental stage. The British are designing aircraft that will fly most economically at speeds of up to 1,700 miles an hour, but the Americans favor aircraft of the 2,100-mile-an-hour class. Each aircraft will probably cost about $22 million.

"By 1970 or 1975," he said, "we will be able to fly from Toronto to the United Kingdom in slightly over one hour, and we'll be doing it a great deal cheaper than today."

RAISES TEMPERATURE

He said one of the drawbacks of designing aircraft to fly at such speeds is the heat that at that speed air friction in flight will raise the temperature of the stainless steel fuselage to about 600 degrees.

"It will be possible to design aircraft that will fly so fast that they will get ahead of their flight schedule but they will fly right off into space," he said.

Mr. Willis cautioned young men not to train as navigators to become pilots instead of navigators. Advances in electronics have made the navigator aboard aircraft are making the pilot redundant. He figured that when the current family of jet aircraft, such as the DC-8 and Boeing 707, are succeeded by supersonic aircraft, airline navigators still in their service will have to look around for different work. But if any young man is set upon the idea of becoming a navigator, he should join the RCAF for his training.

STILL SOME NEED

He said that though TCA decided a few years ago to replace its piston-engined aircraft, the company's navigators then thought they saw the handwriting on the wall and volunteered to look for other employment because economical hardene on the airline. But TCA still had a need for navigators and conducted by on the overseas runs. R ove-r has it.

Mr. Willis regarded the Douglas DC-8, the four-engined jet airliner now used by TCA on its overseas runs, as the best aircraft ever used by TCA.

The interval of the jet age has been long enough to learn from the passenger's standpoint, how many manufacturers and airlines have learned financial disaster. "Cost of research and development of a successful jet airliner now said Mr. Willis, "is astronomical."

"The money pours out with the great expectation that it will be recovered," he said.

The cost of some ground handling equipment used today is so great that not too many years ago the same amount of money might have purchased the airline now using it.

The modern jet airline depreciates at the rate of $90 to $100 an hour, day or night, whether it is used or not. But TCA figures it can write off the cost of a new aircraft in seven to 10 years.

TCA expects the DC-8 will be

Mr. Fleming said the Liberals, identified as free traders in classical theory, have returned a cold shoulder to multilateral trade which they advocated while in power. He said Mr. Pearson now is lukewarm in support of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), feeling it had done about all it could do.

Canada's need was to press for expanded markets throughout the world. This country had been a sticker for observing the letter and spirit of GATT.

Historical Society Program for 1961

At last week's meeting of the Hastings County Historical Society, the program for the balance of 1961 was announced by Mr. F. Dane Martin, program committee chairman.

The annual meeting in May is to be addressed by Miss Ruth Brimhall of Carnoc, who will give an illustrated talk on "Historic Sites of the Quinte District."

In June or July, a tour is planned to the Lonsdale area of south Hastings, with Mr. Martin in charge.

Three meetings are planned for the fall. First, Mr. Max Woolley of Quinte Secondary School, will give an illustrated talk on the geography of the county. Then, Mr. Fred Bradley of BCIVS, will speak on the "Rebellion of 1837 and the Belleville Area," and finally, Miss Beryl Campbell of the Quinte Secondary School will give a sympathetic treatment of "The Fenians," those Irish-Americans whose invasions of Canada in the 1860's threatened the peace and security of our country and our district.

Also this year, the society will be opening an historical museum in the old Registry Office building on Church St. The date for the official opening has not yet been set.

All in all, it promises to be a busy and rewarding year for the membership of the society.

SECOND SUB ARRIVES

HOLLY LOCH Scotland (AP) A second Polaris-firing atomic submarine of the U.S. fleet, the George Washington, sailed into Holy Loch Tuesday night. Two men and two girls in two canoes attempted an anti-nuclear demonstration but were warded off by Scottish sea police who arrested them.

Supersonic jet aircraft will be used by the world's major airlines by 1970 or 1975, Assistant Chief Navigator Don Willis of Trans-Canada Airlines told a special night Quinte District Foremen's Club.

And at just about the same time the importance of airline navigators will end.

Willis, former Second World War RAF navigator, said supersonic airliners already are on the drafting boards. The British are designing aircraft that will fly most economically at speeds of up to 1,700 miles an hour, but the Americans favor aircraft of the 2,100-mile-an-hour class. Each aircraft will probably cost about $21 million.

"By 1970 or 1975," he said, "we will be able to fly from Toronto to the United Kingdom in slightly over one hour—and we'll be doing it a great deal cheaper than today."

RAISES TEMPERATURE

He said one of the drawbacks of designing aircraft to fly at 2,100 miles an hour is the heat that speed air friction in flight will raise the temperature of the stainless steel fuselage to about 600 degrees.

"It is now possible to design aircraft that will fly so fast that if they get ahead of their own flight speed they will fly right off into space," he said.

Mr. Willis cautioned young men making careers in aviation to become flexible instead of navigators. Advances in electronic navigational aids carried aboard aircraft are making the navigator obsolete. He figured that when the new generation of jet aircraft, such as the DC-8 and Boeing 707, are succeeded by supersonic aircraft, airline navigators still in the business will be left to look around for different work. But if any young man is keen with the idea of becoming a navigator, said, he would be a foolish young man because of the uncertain future in this field, he would be wise to join the RCAF for his training.

STILL SOME NEED

He said that when TCA decided a few years ago to re-equip with turbine-powered aircraft, the company's navigators then thought they were the hardworking on the way and volunteered to look for other jobs rather than become economical burdens on the airline. But TCA still had a need for navigators, particularly on the overseas runs. It now has 21.

Willis regarded the Douglas DC-8, the four-engined, 175-passenger, jet-age airliner now used by TCA on many of its routes, as the best commercial plane used by TCA.

The arrival of the jet age has been an unqualified success from the passenger's standpoint, but for many manufacturers and airlines it has proved financial disaster. "Cost of re-equipping, rationalizing and operating pure jet aircraft are phenomenal," he said.

"The money pours out with the great expectation that it will pour back in," he said.

The cost of some ground handling equipment used today for small DC-3's is too many years ago the same amount of money might have purchased the airline now using it.

A big modern jet airliner depreciates at the rate of $800 to $100 an hour, day or night, whether or not it is flying. TCA figures it can write off the cost of a new aircraft in seven to 10 years.

TCA expects the DC-8 will be able to do four times the work of its predecessors in passenger carrying and still be much more reliable.

"We're now operating with aircraft more reliable than ever before," said the veteran of 30 years as a navigator. "The DC-8 is, without a doubt, the finest aircraft TCA has ever used."

TCA a short while ago became the first airline in the world to operate entirely by turbine-powered aircraft. Its fleet consists of pure jet DC-8s, turboprop Viscounts and, more recently, turboprop Vanguards. Most airliners operate with a 70 per cent seat occupancy. If this could be increased by one per cent, operational economies would pay the entire maintenance bill of a fleet of aircraft the size of TCA's, he said. TCA's seat occupancy percentage is also slightly more than the average.

Mr. Willis said the cost of each engine in a DC-8 is $200,000. He told about a mechanic's first airliner operating with a and caused $80,000 damage.

SHORT DISTANCES

Mr. Willis said 90 per cent of all travel in Canada — not just by aircraft — is done over distances of less than 200 miles. This is causing airlines "a great deal of head-scratching" because no aircraft are available to provide adequate service over such short hauls. But he saw an answer in development of vertical takeoff and landing aircraft (VTOL). Helicopters and short takeoff and landing aircraft (STOL) are unsuitable because, what's the use of flying from here, say, to Montreal in no time at all and then spend a much longer time trying to get from the airport into the city?

VTOL aircraft could fly better, carry heavier loads and land closer to a city's centre. Purchase price of the aircraft and crew training costs would be less than for helicopters.

The VTOL aircraft "is still in the experimental stage, but already the airlines are clamoring for its development."

Mr. Willis was introduced by Charlie Morton and thanked by Ken Broadworth, Club president. Clarence Langbeer presided.

Canon A. S. McConnell of St. Thomas Anglican Church delivered a sermonette urging club members to attend church while away on vacation this summer.

tics. The lever is economic—Katanga's copper, tin, and other mineral riches represent most of the Congo's wealth.

Before the Belgians gave The Congo its independence last June 30, the revenues from Katanga accounted for more than half the national budget.

With this in mind, Tshombe proclaimed the secession of Katanga from The Congo, since then he has held out for a loose confederation of Congolese provinces that would allow him to preserve his authority.

Tshombe was one of the few Congolese allowed by the Belgians to have any political or economic responsibility in pre-independence days.

He became a wealthy business man. He also gained experience in tribal politics and became adept at political infighting before most other Congolese political leaders had a chance to test their wings.

He is 42.

He urged Canadian expansion in such fields as capital equipment, machinery and the more advanced processes of secondary industry.

Mr. Coyne reiterated his past advice that Canada must reduce its heavy deficit in international trade in goods and services.

Canada should increase its own production of some goods and services which would displace some imports—especially from the United States.

Canada also had to reduce the inflow of foreign capital. This inflow could not continue without a continued balance-of-payments deficit.

Vancouver Island Mayor Acts Like Exterminator Attacking Infested Home

FERRY MAYOR

A petition signed by more voters than put her into office has failed to oust Mayor Mabel Anderson of Alberni, B.C., a Vancouver Island city of 10,000 persons. Since her election in December, 1958, Mayor Anderson has been waging a running battle with six male aldermen and civic officials. Council members have refused to carry on civic business but she refuses to resign. (CP Photo).

ALBERNI, B.C. (CP) — By any rules of combat, a newspaper story said, Mayor Mabel Anderson should sue for peace.

A petition signed by more voters than put her into office has called for her resignation on grounds of incompetence.

Aldermanic candidates, a b s supported in the last civic election were beaten to the last man.

She's had only squatter's rights to the gavel since council decided to bypass her by voting her out of the chair.

And aldermen put her out of business for three weeks when they voted to suspend council business pending clarification of her threat to call a public inquiry into city affairs.

It all began in December, 1959, when this Vancouver Island city of 10,000 put Mrs. Mabel Anderson into the mayor's chair.

The running battle of the women has continued weekly since then, yet Mabel—nobody seems to call her Mrs. Anderson—appears as fresh as a typhoon after a winter sleep.

ALDERMEN SHOW STRAIN

The same cannot be said for the six aldermen — a former member of Parliament, a contractor, a grocer, a car salesman, a millworker, a barber and a boom man.

They may sense that the Monday night skirmishes in Alberni's funereal city hall—it's painted white, edged in black—go deeper than the parochial issues at hand, mail delivery, a relocated bridge, sewers, a dog pound.

Mabel's weapons are her interpretations of the Municipal Act and an arsenal of reference books on parliamentary procedure. Her fighting style has been compared to that of an exterminator moving through an infested house.

She has whistled in police, reprimanded aldermen, smashed council's glass table-top with her gavel and kicked out the gallery.

Among her sparring partners are the city clerks and the city solicitor, whom she will chal. lenge without qualm on points of law.

Her mouth is severe and compressed but not above a smile if an alderman slips on a procedural banana skin. She speaks with the flat, commanding voice of a veteran Prairie schoolteacher.

WATCHES FROM GALLERY

Townspeople say Mabel, a former schoolteacher and storekeeper, must be about 55 now. Her husband, Bill, a quiet, passive man, attends every meeting of council.

The Andersons live in a pleasant, rambling frame house behind their store. Mabel is a curler—skip, of course.

As Joan of Arc riding to save Alberni, Mabel Anderson chose the unlikely mount of civic sewage. She was against sewers, in favor of septic tanks. So was a fractional majority of the voters.

Out went Mayor Jack Luckhurst, a motel operator and harbor commissioner. In went Mabel.

"I still can't understand it," says Mr. Luckhurst. "After the polls it was my party everyone came to."

The fireworks started early. Mabel was soon clearing Andy Anderson spectators out of the chamber, refusing to sign minutes of previous meetings, declaring meetings out of order and stalking from the hall, demanding yes-or-no answers from city hall staff and shattering glass.

Aldermen and city staff took to going to Jack Lockhurst's place after council meetings for a medicinal shot and a cry on the former mayor's shoulder.

"We'll get the business done by challenging the chair on each issue," said Ald. Tom Hamilton. "But it will take longer."

"There are two ways of meeting an obstacle," said Ald. Charles Bladd. "Either you remove it or you go around it. We can't remove Mayor Anderson. But we can go around her."

"Procedural obstructions from the chair, based on rulings which never have been heard before, have been used to prevent the majority from transactions necessary to council business," said Ald. Tom Barnett, former CCF MP for Comox-Alberni.

It was on March 20 that council moved to suspend business until the mayor clarified her threat of a public inquiry into the way aldermen handled city business.

J. E. Brown, deputy minister of municipal affairs, in a letter to the mayor and city clerk James Sawyer, described the action as "tantamount to a sit-down strike of the bosses." But he tactfully left the mayor and aldermen to sort things out among themselves.

The dispute ended when the mayor issued a statement assuring councillors that none of her statements were meant to reflect on their personal integrity.

The voters get a chance to express their views next December when the mayor's $1,200-a-year two-year term ends.

If Mabel goes, aldermen can stop taking the Municipal Act to bed with them. There was only one copy of it in town before the look office.

Gammu Mu Sets Founder's Day Banquet

On April 18th a meeting of Gamma Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi was held at the home of the president, Mrs. Bruce Bishop, Victoria Avenue, in Belleville. It was announced that the Founder's Day banquet, planned for May with all Belleville chapters attending, would be held in the Club Rooms of the Hotel Quinte.

Rituals will be held in conjunction with this dinner that annually commemorates the founding of Beta Sigma Phi and that is celebrated by chapters not only in Canada and the United States, but in practically all other countries in the world. A letter from the Belleville Y.M.C.A. informed the chapter that a Speaker's Bureau has been set up and that such a person could be furnished to explain the new building program at any chapter meeting. Members who had signified their willingness to act on telephone committee for the Y.M.C.A. were informed that they would be receiving their instructions within a short time.

At Gammu Mu's next meeting planned for May 8th, the annual installation of officers is take place and members were reminded that on May 16th they would be asked to vote for the "Girl of the Year". This award is given to a Beta Sigma Phi, who has proved to be a most valuable member through, willingness, friendliness and contributions to chapter activities.

Following the business meeting, the cultural program was presented by Mrs. Douglas Bateman. Her topic was entitled "Tools for the Art of Life Thought", and Mrs. Bateman, M.A. Psychology, presented many interesting theories on the processes of thought.

Following a short lecture, she invited members to participate in a question and answer period, with particular emphasis on child psychology. A lively discussion ensued with Mrs. Bateman providing many interesting answers to queries from members.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Bishop assisted by Mrs. J. Jeffreys and Mrs. W. McCormick.

Feeding Guests Threatens Budget

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—My husband has left me but sends a small amount each month for the support of the family. Most of the money to support us I have to earn from my part-time job. My eldest son is 21 and ill, so he cannot work and, besides, is in the house alone most of the time.

My eldest daughter is married and lives nearby. She has two children. My two younger children are in high school.

They all (including the married daughter) bring their friends to our small home. While mealtime comes, they never think of leaving. I often have 10 or 12 mountainous appetites to satisfy.

I like to have them, particularly for my ill son's sake, but have hinted that I can't afford to feed so many on my small income. Once I even asked our "star boarder" to bring some groceries next time; and he stayed for weeks. I feel mean about this but something has to give.—BROKE.

DEAR BROKE.—First, I'd like to give you full marks for creating the kind of home atmosphere which draws 'em like flies.

Do your young people know what their father is contributing? Do they have any idea how grocery bills mount when there are extra mouths to feed?

Put your cards on the table. List income and outgo. Sit down with your children, including the married daughter, and make very sure they see the picture. Tell them that their friends are welcome, but that when they want a pal to stay for dinner, you need a contribution to the table. Otherwise the food—their food —will run out before next week's money comes in.

The married daughter might contribute one course—a main dish or dessert. Teenagers can earn some money and they will even enjoy helping to pay for their fun when they understand the need. You are not being mean but managing.

Doubtless you are already stretching the stew with dumplings and watering the soup. Inexpensive tricks with meal planning are to be found in Bulletin No. 470, "Your Money's Worth in Food." Write for it to the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

DEAR DORIS.—My engagement is broken (just two weeks before the wedding date) and I guess it is as much my fault as my boy friend's. Anyway, it's all over.

Trouble is, we have a lot of gifts. We were given a shower and I've got all those too. My mother says I have to give everything back to the people who gave them to us. I can't bear to do this and face them all. What is your advice?—BROKEN UP.

DEAR BROKEN UP.—It may seem like the end of the world to you but, believe me, more engagements are broken than you'll ever know. It happens in the best of families. This is one good reason for engagements—so that young people can have a time in which to get to know each other well before taking the fatal step.

You do have to return the gifts, and the most gracious way to do this is by calling on the givers personally. Tell them only that the wedding has been called off and express appreciation for their kindness. When the gift is from a friend of your ex-fiance, he is the one who should do the returning.

Your friends will take their cue from you. If you appear dignified and composed, they will honor you and accept the situation.

DEAR DORIS:—I will be married in September to a young fellow who has been raised by his aunt and uncle. His mother died when he was two years old but his father is living.

Could you tell me how to word the announcement of our engagement so it will include everyone, yet not hurt anyone's feelings?—FIANCEE.

DEAR FIANCEE.—The newspaper announcement might read:

"Mr. and Mrs. Jones of 92 Main Street announce the engagement of their daughter Mary Anne to Mr. John Smith, the son of Mr. R. Smith and nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Black. The wedding will take place in September."

(Doris Clark will be glad to help you with your problems. Write to her care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

The Experts Say

Ontario Camping Assoc. Ready for Children

By DEIRDRE MUNGOVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — With two months left before the annual deluge of campers heads for the woods, many camp directors say they are already booked up.

If early bird is one of those parents who have put off looking for a camp, the Ontario Camping Association has a few suggestions.

It will send you a bulletin listing its member camps, their length of season, personnel, location and fees. You can also get names of former campers who will gladly give you first-hand information.

There are camps suited to every budget and every child's requirements and physical capacity.

"In Canada there are 300 well-organized camps, 100 of them in Ontario and 80 in Alberta, which belong to our association," says Mrs. J. H. Ebbs, the OCA's public relations director. "Reports from all quarters indicate enrolment is better than last year and the season promises to be one of the heaviest ever.

"Because of the shortage of jobs in industry, we have been able to line up a good supply of camp counselors and we don't have the staff problem we've had to face in other years."

A camper can start at the age of three in day and residential nursery camps and continue until he is 16. A few camps are specifically designed for older teen - agers and couples and there are welfare camps for mother and child.

You can spend as much as $810 for an eight-week season at one camp but the average is about $50 a week, with the cost governed by the camp's location, personnel and facilities.

Some camps run by church groups charge $6.50 a day while day camps, where the young sters bring their own lunches, are priced at $7 a day. Welfare organizations run free camps for children whose parents cannot afford to give them a holiday.

Mrs. Ebbs suggests that it helps to meet the director and visit his camp to get an idea of what it has to offer.

"Some camps stress group activities, water sports, track and field and other competition while others concentrate on non-competitive activities like dramatics and crafts."

Check the site for physical hazards such as high land levels, deep water or swamps. Ask about safety precautions and responsible personnel. A mature counsellor should be in charge of not more than eight children.

An alert parent will check on kitchen and sanitary facilities, sleeping accommodations, water supply, medical care, variety of activities and the camp's reputation for developing a child mentally, physically and socially.

See your child has a thorough physical checkup from the family doctor before he leaves and don't pack more than the amount of clothing directed by the camp.

To avoid any possibility of his becoming homesick, abide by rules regarding food packages, money and visits and always write cheerful letters. The child will be happier if he is taught to consider this new life as a wonderful adventure.

V.O.N. Holds Monthly Meet, Plans Tea

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of the Victorian Order of Nurses was held in the YMCA with Mr. J. Lennox presiding. Mr. Fiske and Mr. Mellow from the Trenton VON Board were welcomed as visitors to the meeting.

Miss L. Burnside read her secretarial report, which was followed by the treasurer's report given by Mr. A. Gignac.

Mr. T. F. Franklin spoke about the by-laws which head office had returned to the V.O.N. After some discussion, it was unanimously approved that the recommendations of the constitution's committee be accepted by the board and passed on to Ottawa.

As convener of the annual "Spring Tea" to be held at St. Andrew's Church early in May, Mrs. R. Brain gave a progress report.

Mrs. J. Nelles, as the V.O.N. representative, attended the recent Belleville United Appeal publicity meeting. She noted the plans being made by the publicity committee for the coming year.

On May 5, Mr. Harold Parker will attend the annual Ontario Divisional meetings of the V.O.N. at the King Edward Hotel. Several members will be present at the 53rd annual meetings to be held at the Royal York Hotel, May 4, 5 and 6.

In her monthly report for March, the head nurse, Miss D. Connor, stated that "A total of 97 patients received care, and there were 443 home visits made by the nurses. Special activities occupied 36½ hours, consisting of two half-days at the clinic at the Kiwanis Centre, three half-days at Carnahan-Centreville School and three half-days at the Douglas Atkins School. Nine senior student nurses from the Belleville General Hospital spent a day with the V.O.N.

During the week of March 20, a two-day course on modern rehabilitation nursing was held at the Kingston General Hospital. Two of the nurses attended this course. It consisted of lectures and demonstrations, followed by a practice period, with two or three nurses working together during the period. There were nurses present from Trenton, Belleville, Napanee, Gananoque, Kingston, Brockville and Cornwall, also two nurses from the General Hospital in Kingston, Hotel Dieu and St. Mary's-of-the-Lake.

At present post-graduate student in Public Health Nursing from the University of Ottawa, Miss Marilyn Thompson, is doing her field work with the V.O.N.

fleeing the city in trucks.

An announcer broke in dramatically on the programs of the rebel-held Radio Algiers a said in a breathless voice: "There has been treason. Come to the Forum. All of you."

The right-wing supporters began rushing on foot and by car to the big square outside the main government building, shouting "Algeria French is Algeria is French)."

But just as suddenly the radio asked them to go home and they dispersed.

Agence France-Presse said Gen. Challe and Gen. Raoul Salan, two of the main leaders of the revolt, appeared briefly on the balcony of the government building to address a crowd of several hundred gathered below.

They tried to speak but the loudspeaker system had been cut and slowly they walked back to their offices.

By 2 a.m. the only men left in the government offices which had served as the rebel headquarters was Col. Yves Godard, another of the leaders of the uprising.

"The only thing left for me to do is to put a bullet in my head," he said, and left the building.

There were a few shots from the Forum and around the rebel-held radio station but by 2:15 a.m. the revolt had collapsed.

AFP reported that Challe, whose arrest was announced later, Salan, and Gen. Edmond Jouhaud left Algiers in an army truck as their uprising collapsed around them. The fourth general in the revolt, Andre Zeller, was reported to have left the rebel headquarters in civilian clothes half an hour before his fellow conspirators.

TO ARREST LEADERS

Warrants were issued today in Paris for the arrest of the four former generals plus Gen. Paul Ganty and three colonels —Godard, Antoine Argoud and Jean Lacheroy.

Proceedings already have been started against them on charges that could carry the death penalty.

AFP said that about 35 persons, dressed in civilian and military clothes, were seen leaving the rebel headquarters at the same time as Challe, Salan and Jouhaud.

A few minutes later, flames were seen through a window in the government delegation building, apparently the rebels burning documents.

CAPTIVES RELEASED

Jean Morin, the French Delegate General in Algeria, who was arrested following Saturday's coup, was released as the revolt collapsed. Also freed were Robert Buron, the French public works minister, and Gen. Fernand Gambiez, the commander-in-chief in Algeria.

The loyalist troops meanwhile started against them on charges that could carry the death penalty.

The months of plotting that went into the generals' uprising were wiped out in a matter of minutes as paratroopers and Foreign Legion troops backing them showed little willingness to fight the government forces. Unlike two previous right-wing revolts here, this one ran into a stiff, uncompromising determination by de Gaulle to crush it.

The issue was the same as during the uprising in May, 1958, that brought de Gaulle back to power—the right-wingers claimed the French government was "selling out" to the Moslems.

The 1958 revolt, in which Salan played a key part, brought about the collapse of the government and the return to power of de Gaulle.

It was followed last year by another uprising against de Gaulle's policy of self-determination for the Algerian people but the president survived the revolt and went on to win overwhelming approval of his program in a national referendum three months ago.

TOOK FIRM ACTION

De Gaulle made it clear this time that there was to be no compromise with the rebels. He gave the order to "liquidate" the rebellion.

Salan, a 63-year-old former commander-in-chief in Algeria, had flown from Madrid, where he was living in exile after several clashes with de Gaulle, to join the insurrection.

There were reports shortly after the collapse of the revolt that he had committed suicide but these were later denied.

In Paris, meanwhile, the lights went out at 2 a.m. in the Elysee Palace. The 70-year-old president of France had gone to bed, once more the victor in a situation that had threatened France with civil war.

Society leave for home.

The hotel management says none of 33 conventions scheduled for May has been cancelled.

A. R. Johnstone, Canadian vice-president of the union, predicted the strike will last a week to ten days. He said that he had committed suicide but these were later denied.

In Paris, meanwhile, the outcome.

"They are not the type of people the Royal York would normally employ," he said.

Among patrons who left the hotel after the strike began was Saskatchewan Premier T. C. Douglas. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, now playing in a theatrical production at a downtown theatre, said he plans to move because of the lack of room service.

The union, which originally sought a 15-cent hourly wage increase, on the eve of the strike reduced its demand to a 10-cent raise in three stages over a 33-month period. The hotel has offered 3½ cents.

Under the old contract, which expired Aug. 15 typical monthly earnings were: $183.43 for food waiters and $385.79 for room clerks.

Meat Loaves For Family And/Or Guests

By Mary Moore

The first meat loaf, that I am featuring, suits me to perfection. Of course the flavor had to be good and different to fill that condition but it is the streamlined method of preparing that fits my peculiar personality. If a real good dish can be made quickly it's for me, -

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

WEDNESDAY

Sauerkraut with Spareribs (see Tuesday — Mrs. Bert M.'s); Boiled Whole Parsleyed Potatoes; Crusty French Bread; Celery and Carrot Sticks; Orange Bavarian; Coffee.

VEAL LOAF:

Three - quarters pound ground shank or stewing veal, 1 egg, 4 slices smoked back bacon or the equivalent in left-over cooked ham, (about 1-3 cup when ground), 1-2 medium onion, 4 oz. (1-4 lb.) mushrooms (about 4 medium to large), 1 slice whole wheat bread, 1-2 teaspoon salt, shake of pepper, 2 slices side bacon cut in halves crosswise. Ask the butcher to grind the veal for you. Put through the grinder in this order the bacon or ham, onions, mushrooms and bread. Add to veal in mixing bowl. Add egg, salt and pepper and mix well. Shape into an oval loaf. Arrange 3 half slices of side bacon at centre of shallow baking dish. Place meat loaf on them. Cover top with remaining slices of side bacon. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 1 1-4 hours.

NOTE:

The juices that exude from this meat loaf into the pan are delicious. So I parboiled 4 potatoes, cut in halves crosswise, for 7 minutes. I drained them well and arranged them around the loaf turning them 2 or 3 times during the baking period. A delicious and economical dinner which serves 4 or 5. If you are having a company dinner for 8 or 9 double all of the quantities. I served old-fashioned creamed-asparagus with ours.

PARTY MEAT LOAF (serves 8 to 10):

Three cups (about 1 1-2 lbs.) ground lean beef 3 cups soft breadcrumbs, 2 eggs, well beaten, 1 tablespoon finely chopped onion, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 3-4 cup condensed tomato soup (undiluted), 1 1-2 cups gently sauteed sliced mushrooms, 4 strips of bacon. Combine all ingredients but soup, mushrooms and bacon. Gradually add enough soup to make a soft mixture. Place half the mixture in greased bread pan. Add layer of sauteed mushrooms. Cover with the remaining meat mixture. Press down lightly. Top with bacon. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 to 1 1-4 hours. Unmould on hot plate. Serve with bottled Mustard Sauce or make your own.

MUSTARD SAUCE:

Leftover tomato soup (4 oz.), 1-2 cup prepared mustard, 1-2 cup vinegar, 1-2 cup sugar, 1-4 cup butter or margarine, 3 egg yolks, well beaten. Stir all ingredients but egg yolks in top of double boiler over boiling water until well blended and slightly thickened (about 10 minutes). Gradually beat in egg yolks. Cook 5 minutes longer over hot, not boiling water, stirring constantly. This sauce will keep indefinitely if stored in a cool place in a covered jar.

1st Brownie Pack Holds Auction Sale

On Monday evening a most successful auction was held at the home of Brown Owl Eakins with Tawny Owl Irwin, Mrs. D. Green and Mrs. Caniff acting as co-hostesses.

The bidders and also donors, of the items to be sold, were the mothers of Belleville First Brownie Pack.

Auctioneer, Lorraine Fournis had a wide selection of goods to sell ranging from a can of beans to a man's suit; exotic perfume only to be excelled by fragrant soap; an incense burner made in India, to home baking, plus the more regular items such as children's clothing, toys, dishes, and jewellery, that would tempt a gypsy.

Treasurer, for the evening, Mrs. Caniff, reported the proceeds exceeded $35; all to be used for the coming mother and daughter banquet.

Mrs. Eakins told the ladies she would make arrangements for the banquet so it would be held either the last week of May or the first part of June.

A revolving exchange of Guide and Brownie uniforms was explained by Mrs. Fournis, to be effective in the fall.

In conclusion, a delicious lunch was served by the hostesses and every one departed happily with their "loot".

Belleville Collegiate Senior Art Students Hold Exhibition

The collection includes 28 pictures, depicting flowers, still life, colorful autumn scenes; winter scenes; water scenes; drawings of eastern architecture, as well as European, all showing careful and painstaking work.

One of the outstanding paintings was that of a pink geranium in full bloom, in a muted green pot. A few fallen petals added greatly to the realistic appearance. Another floral piece showed an orange-hued jug filled with yellow marigolds of graduating shades and depth.

STILL LIFE

The still life paintings were interesting in the various arrangements and variety of articles used. The drawing well done and the coloring eye-catching. A simple one was of Japanese Lanterns (type of orange-colored flowers) were shown to perfection in their green jug, with the contrasting small brown jug and ash tray, all backed by the dark background. Others in still life were those of a brown jug with German Stein and a few red and yellow apples, with a white bowl; a wicker woven container and tall necked bottle, apples and grapefruit, brown jug, and dark background; tall candlestick, a blue-handled vase fronted by three books, one blue and thin, one thick and red and a smaller book in black, placed one above the other in pleasing juxtaposition. A fine study in perspective.

LOVELY AUTUMN

The autumn scenes showed, one a dam with gently falling water from three points; highlighted by a reddening maple backed by tall evergreens, and the human interest part by the intended-coaxed fisherman who is just taking a 'catch' — a 'fighter' denoted by the white water about him. The other, might be called, "In The Maple Woods," had the power to lure the beholder to walk in fancy along the broad woodroad bordered by the lovely tinted maples and bear the rustling of the fallen leaves at one's feet. A most restful picture, denoting peaceful quiet.

WINTER SCENES

The winter scenes depicted silver birches backed by distant evergreens, with touches of sunset, and snowy foreground; another was of open water between snowy banks seen through leafless poplars whose slender boles cast dark shadows on the brown-fish rocks in the foreground. Still another might be designated, "After the Snowfall," as the snow which lay on the evergreens was soft to the touch; the slate-blue sky and the general appearance had the feel of a recent storm, while another depicted far-off mountains, open water, and evergreens and distant blue hills with a cluster of houses nestling at the base, two of which stood out, one white, and one red brick, and in the immediate foreground snow-covered logs. All were pleasing in composition, and nicely colored.

GREAT SHIPS

An interesting picture was that of great ships and a tug in a harbor, showing good observation, and substantiality. Nicely executed. "The Lighthouse" high on the rocky shore, with dashing waves, reminded of a lighthouse scene in Prince Edward Island. Here also was good composition and a sense of nature's moods. One showing perfect reflections had a curving walk beside the water bordered by cottages. Another might have been painted in Muskoka with its white summer cottage high on posts beside a rocky shore, nestling amid the evergreens. A good holiday place for ease and quiet dreams.

From here one was taken to Gaspe Peninsula, so similar was the scene shown. All that was lacking were the beautiful white gannets. "Testing By The River," proclaimed the approaching storm with its dark turbulent clouds, the canoeist hurrying with his provisions, bent under their weight, to the open tent beneath the trees.

The fishing schooners, were realistic and the fish house. The red coated men in attendance showed motion and activity. The wharf scene with the filled cabin boat in dry dock, and the sailing vessel being loaded were all well done.

A little gem was that of silver birches beside a quiet lake, the softly colored water and the yellowing green leaves denoted autumn's early touch.

Concluding a most interesting display were the European architecture somewhat resembling a Swiss scene with tall clock backed by snow-capped blue mountains, fronted by a high brick wall, and brick path; and that of the oriental narrow street, resembling somewhat that "Via Dolorosa" of Jerusalem which with its lonely dark figure with a cane, depicted loneliness, as did "The Bridge of Sighs" with the gondolier passing beneath, over the quiet water street. The water was especially well done, as were the storied houses along the course.

Women's Activities

W.A.

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Mrs. Casey Ketcheson opened her home on Tuesday afternoon for the April meeting of White's Woman's Association, with the president, Mrs. William Vateman, presiding.

The devotional service was conducted by Mrs. Charles Bream and was given by Mrs. W. A. Jeffery. The Scripture reading Matthew 11:28-30 was read by Mrs. Albert Jones. Mrs. Ernest Curtis read the story of the lesson, "Come Unto Me". Mrs. Jeffery closed with prayer.

Mrs. Casey Ketcheson gave the minutes of March meeting in the absence of the secretary. It was decided that each member make talent money this year and dispense with the May tea and bake sale.

The hostess served a dainty lunch and a social time was enjoyed.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Rosalie H. Nothing but nothing reduces me. I've tried everything.

Bess T. — She hasn't really tried. If I'm slimming, anyone can!

Rosalie H. — Now I know it's hopeless for me to ever lose weight. On my last diet, I almost went mad with hunger. After two days of it, I weighed the same, a jolly 162 pounds, which you can see makes my five-feet height look about five-feet wide, too.

Bess is trying to convince me to join her reducing club, but all the talk in the world isn't going to quiet the way my stomach talks when it's insisting on meat and potatoes, instead of pills and watercress.

No, I'm resigned to being fat. It has its good side. I see men, for example, in their true colors. There was one I gave a gift to, a Book-of-the-Month volume. We broke up over my weight. I had to buy four more books, but that was better than winding up with the wrong man.

Bess T. — Rosalie is full of excuses for her lack of will power and self control. She's my best friend and all through high school we were the mainstay of the corner sweet-shop, partners in crime when it came to loading up on banana splits and chocolate eclairs.

I married a much older man, very tolerant and easy going. While he didn't insist that I lose weight, he let me know he'd like to see how I'd look minus about 50 pounds. I called at my doctor's office, was examined and given a diet. But I got nowhere. The trouble was that my husband is frequently late for dinner, so I was eating twice, once alone and once with him.

But then I heard about this club where everyone keeps your courage up, sympathizes, but also bawls you out. Now I eat strictly on schedule. I'm sure this is the answer for Rosalie.

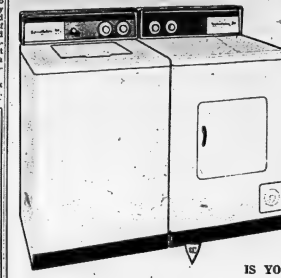
The Council — In giving up, Rosalie is saying, "You can like me or lump me." Meanwhile she's lumping herself and, we'll bet, not liking herself at all.

We cast our vote with Bess and the group she mentions. Today the ensemble approach to problems has been found widely effective, as with A.A. and group psychotherapy. Instead of fighting boy friends, Bess, and the world from inside her "fortress of fat," Rosalie can fight the fat itself, supported by a platoon of cheering fellow fighters.

The Council knows of the work of such organizations as T. O. [illegible] tions, from her physician. The club then takes her two steps further: it helps her stay with it, through menu ideas, recipes, and pep talks; and, it whets her appetite for new and worthwhile interests to take her mind off eating. Evidently, those didn't accomplish that.

Suppose Rosalie goes along with Bess's idea for, say, nine months. That's how long it takes to have a new baby, labor pains and all. Only this new baby will be you, Rosalie! Minus 45 pounds, you'll truly feel reborn.

F. S. (Take Off Pounds Safely, Fatties Anonymous, and other groups dedicated to mutual aid in controlling weight.



As Bess outlines, there's nothing like group approval, group pressure, and group dismay, to keep you on the straight and narrow. Rosalie won't feel so unique, or so lonely. Even a stalk of celery looks good when everybody else is eating one — as good, that is, as a bread-stick!

For safety's sake of course, Rosalie would have to get the green light to diet, plus direc-

Lakeside 81 O.E.S. Visited By D.D.G.M.

WELLINGTON—The Masonic Hall was filled for the regular meeting of Lakeside Chapter 81, O.E.S. held on the evening of April 19th.

The Worthy Matron, Mrs. Alice Watt, the Worthy Patron, Mr. Allan Anderson graciously welcomed Mrs. Cecelia Rawcliffe, D.D.G.M. on her official visit to Lakeside. She was presented with a pretty corsage of red carnations, which complemented her beautiful beige dress. Other distinguished guests were: Mrs. Helen Cross, Quinte; Mrs. Coral Adams, Trenton; Mrs. Ruby Fleming, Colborne; Mrs. Gladys McFaul, Lakeside; all P.D.D.G.M.'s.

The presiding matrons of Picton and Belleville 33, Mrs. Helen Graydon and Mrs. Brickman also from Cobourg were welcomed. Other guests were from Cobourg, Belleville, Trenton, Picton, Colborne and Quinte Chapters.

The D.D.G.M. in her address to the Chapter praised the Worthy Matron, Worthy Patron and officers on the proficiency of their work upholding the high tradition of Lakeside Chapter, especially the friendliness to visitors. Mrs. Jean Way Associate Matron, on behalf of the Chapter presented Mrs. Rawcliffe with a Devonspray Wedgewood dinner plate to match her set of dishes, which she appreciated so much. Another highlight of the evening was a letter read by the secretary, Mrs. Ida McFaul, from the Grand Chapter which announced that the Worthy Grand Matron, Mrs. Audrey Elliott, had appointed Mrs. Gladys McFaul P.D.D.M. to be the grand representative of the State of West Virginia.

Mrs. Isobel Davern, P.W.M. had the honor of presenting Mrs. McFaul with her pin and certificate. Mrs. Davern was pleased to be chosen to make this presentation, on behalf of the Chapter, as Mrs. McFaul was initiated into the Order during her year, 1934, as Worthy Matron. This is the first time a member of Lakeside has received this honor.

The refreshment committee assisted by the members served dainty refreshments. Everyone enjoyed the social hour renewing old friendships.

QUESTION BOX

Question — I am one of four young women all of whom have been very good friends since high school. Since we are all married now, but meet once a week for bridge. Recently one of our group celebrated an anniversary. The other three pooled a certain amount to obtain a nicer gift than we would have been able to purchase separately. However, I did not feel that the amount was enough and I sent a small gift on my own, in addition to going in on the larger gift. The other two girls are furious with me, and feel that I was very unfair to send a separate gift myself. They feel I made them look cheap. They said I should have not gone in with them at all on the other gift if I was going to go behind their backs and give her another one. I am terribly embarrassed and hurt that they feel this way. I meant no harm. What is your opinion? — Mrs. R. McK., New York, N. Y.

Answer — Frankly, I do not think you were very tactful when you presented the second gift to your friend. I can easily see why those who went in on the gift with you, to purchase a specially nice one, could feel hurt. You should have done one or the other, not both. Try to smooth things over by explaining that you are very sorry and did not mean to hurt them in any way, and you certainly won't do it again.

Question — Could you tell me if it is necessary to send thank-you notes or cards to those who have had a shower for you before your expected baby is born? Or, is just thanking them at the party enough? — Mrs. H. P. R., Chicago, Ill.

Answer — Personal, verbal thanks are enough in this case. However, a note of appreciation to your unusually thoughtful action to your hostess would be a gracious compliment.

Captured Son of Rebels' Leader Paraded Before Television Cameras in Cuba

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Fidel Castro's regime announced today it will halt the televised parade of captured invaders, who soon may march before the firing squads.

The last public interrogation was set for tonight after a session in which the son of an anti-Castro leader told his captors he was duped about chances of the April 17 invasion but that he was not his father who decieved him.

The son of Manuel Antonio de Varona conceded in a telecast monitored at Key West that he was deceived when told the Cuban people would rise against Castro.

He made no reply when asked whether he knew "your father has raised for the open intervention of the United States with its submarines, with its invading troops . . .?"

The elder de Varona is a member of the revolutionary council which co-ordinated the invasion.

Young de Varona argued with interrogators. He asked them if they felt so certain about a public's support of the Castro regime, why did they not hold an election.

While Cubans peppered the invasion captives with questions before TV cameras, the first airline passengers arriving in Florida since the conflict were very free in expressing themselves as thankful they were able to leave Cuba.

Most of 86 persons who got off a plane at Miami were Cuban nationalists. Some of them scurried away from reporters seeking interviews. Others refused to identify themselves when telling of life in Cuba under active war conditions.

An old man said "we come from hell."

An elderly man started to talk with reporters but a woman yanked his arm, shouting "No, no" and pulled him away.

The Havana TV quiz witness named Pablo who claimed he was forced to work for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, said an aide of CIA director Allen Dulles told him the United States would intervene directly in Cuba within 72 days if it became failed. He said also he was told by the CIA that Castro's regime had allowed Soviet rockets bases to be established in Cuba.

Yesterday night 14 witnesses brought to 42 the total of captives questioned since Friday over the Cuban national television and radio network. The government claimed more than 1,000 invaders have been captured.

Cuban Invasion, British Attack Said Quite Similar

By DAVID ROWNTREE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The ill-starred invasion of Cuba has a similarity to the equally misguided British-French attack on Suez in 1956.

President Kennedy became convinced that this was the time to challenge Fidel Castro just as, nearly five years ago, Sir Anthony Eden felt that he had taken enough from President Nasser and must teach the Egyptian a lesson.

The similarity is in the fact that nothing completely satisfactory could have been gained from either expedition, successful or not.

At Suez, defeat meant that Britain and France lost the last of their waning influence in the Middle East.

And even if the Suez adventure had turned out differently, the fruits of a victory might soon have turned sour. They have won and then be forced to retire — as in time they would might well have been as ignominous as defeat.

Similarly in the case of Cuba. With the invasion a failure, the United States has become something of a joke; if it had succeeded, it would certain the U.S. would have lost even more friends, and not only in Latin America.

Adlai Stevenson told the United Nations that the very failure of the exiles' invasion proved the U.S. had nothing to do with it in terms of American equipment.

No one doubts that the expedition would have been a success if Americans had been committed and in new circles President Kennedy is being criticized because he didn't give all-out support.

It seems that the U.S. was deceived both by its own intelligence system and the plausible urgings of the Cuban revolutionary council in New York

GE Executive Says He Engaged In Price-Fixing

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate investigators today received a figure of $127,000-a-year General Electric Company executive who said he engaged in price-fixing with competitors on orders from his superiors.

George E. Burens, former general manager of GE's switchgear and control division, is the highest ranking executive yet heard by the Senate anti-trust and monopoly subcommittee in its investigation of price fixing in the electrical equipment industry.

But immediately after the subcommittee wound up testimony Tuesday Ralph Cordiner, chairman of the board of GE, issued a statement saying he hoped he would be given a chance to testify.

Cordiner said it was "an outrage" to suggest that he in any way knew of or condoned violations of the anti-trust laws.

General Electric was among 29 companies that pleaded guilty or no contest in federal court in Philadelphia earlier this year to government charges of price-fixing.

The companies and 45 individuals were fined nearly $2,000,000, and seven officials were sentenced to 30 days in jail.

Burens, one of the seven who went to jail, took the witness chair Tuesday and said he had met with competitors to discuss prices because he was told to do so.

NAMES TWO MEN

He testified that instructions to meet with competitors were given to him late in 1954 by Henry Van Erben, a former GE vice-president who now is dead, and by Robert Paxton, who also was a top executive vice-president of the company at the time.

Paxton became president of General Electric in April, 1958, and retired in January of this year, giving ill health as the reason.

Faces 82 Charges

TORONTO (CP) — Ronald Spencer faced a Metropolitan Toronto record of 82 charges of making false claim for unemployment benefits.

Each charge represents a week during which a declaration for benefits was alleged to have been falsified, for a total of $1,300.

Spencer is due for trial May 9.

Progress on the Revision Of Divorce Procedure Said Blocked by Party Politics

OTTAWA (CP) — All hopes for a resolution this year in parliamentary divorce procedure now have been crushed.

Informants said Tuesday night that progress has been blocked by party politics — a headlancy even to talk about the divorce situation until after the next federal general election.

The main proposal for procedural reform was in a pre-Christmas bill by which the Commons waived on a sessional basis its right to pass Quebec and Newfoundland divorce bills already approved by the Senate.

Passed on the initiative of M. Douglas Morton PC — from Davenport, the bill would have left the entire divorce job to the senate. it was to be a way around the divorce-bill filibuster staged last session by the CCF group in the Commons.

But so far the Senate has withheld the approval needed for the bill to become law. No senator will sponsor the bill for second reading — approval in principle.

Ostensibly, the senators don't like the bill because they contend it rubs against the constitutional demand that all bills be passed by both houses of Parliament before being given royal assent.

But, informants said Tuesday night, this objection could be overcome if the simple delegation of power to the Senate, in dissolve the marriage by degree instead of by legislation in each case, as at present.

It is understood that this alternative proposal has been discussed and that no strong objections have been voiced on that score alone.

The real objection is a political one. Senators from Quebec where both the Roman Catholic Church and the civil code forbid divorce, regard the subject as so touchy politically that they fear a debate — no matter which way it turned out — would alienate voters.

Other senators have declined to sponsor the Morton bill because they do not want to embarrass their Quebec colleagues it was learned reliably.

The Morton bill came up for second reading Tuesday night.

Jean - Francois Pouliot Lac-Quebec said he would sponsor the bill if all senators could unite together beforehand to vote against it unanimously".

Laughter greeted his offer.

Then Senator Beech decided to shelve the bill for another three weeks.

Meanwhile, the corridor guessing game about divorce turned to this question: Will the CCF group, which agreed to waive its "discussion" of divorce bills until the Senate acted on the Morton bill, now resume its tactics?

Frank Howard CCF — Okanagan and Arnold Peters CCF — Timiskaming, partners in last year's filibuster, said several weeks ago that they would resume their "discussion" of divorce bills if the Morton bill continued to "languish" in the upper house.

Atlas Explosion Blow to U.S. Plans for Manned Orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The fiery explosion of an Atlas missile carrying an unmanned project Mercury capsule has dealt a damaging blow to the effort of the United States to orbit a man this year.

However, it is not expected to delay an attempt to send an astronaut into space on a brief up-and-down ride next week.

The Atlas exploded into a trail of fire 40 seconds after it lifted off the launching pad Tuesday to top part of the capsule took a single orbit around the earth.

A rocket escape system aimed to whisk the capsule and jerked the spacecraft free three seconds before the explosion. The capsule parachuted safely into the Atlantic about 350 miles off the cape. A helicopter retrieved the undamaged vehicle from the water.

If the escape system had failed, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration would have called off a plan to send an astronaut aloft on a suborbital space trip expected next Tuesday.

A smaller Redstone rocket will be used on this flight, which is to boost the manned capsule 115 miles into space and drop him 300 miles down range 16 minutes later.

"Project Mercury will continue on schedule," said Mercury director Robert Gilruth after the failure. "The successful operation of the escape system under true emergency conditions has given us confidence in the system. Ground tests have survived the flight."

Gilruth said the goal of orbiting a U.S. space man this year remains unchanged.

Other officials were less optimistic about the manned orbit — a feat achieved by the Russian's Yuri Gagarin April 12.

One official commented before the launching that any additional failure in the light Mercury-Atlas program would doom any effort to achieve manned orbital flight in 1961.

Nationalists Get Proof de Gaulle Can Keep Pledge

PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle's impressive victory over army mutineers in Algeria has solidly improved his chances for negotiating peace with the Moslem nationalist rebels.

Suppression of the four-day revolt led by a quartet of retired generals has left no doubt of the 70-year-old president's control of the army and his position of leadership in France and Algeria.

This new proof of his ability to dominate the bitter opposition of rightists in France and Algeria should prove a help in bringing peace with the rebel nationalists.

The Algerian rebel leadership has long wondered whether de Gaulle exerted enough control over European extremists in Algeria and the French army to impose a peace settlement upon them. This doubt has been a major factor in the rebels' hesitancy about sitting down at the peace table with the French.

In January, 1960, de Gaulle demonstrated that he could dominate the volatile European population in Algeria when he smashed a week-long civilian-directed uprising in Algiers.

But this victory left doubts about the army's loyalty to de Gaulle. Though no troops joined the rebels behind the barricades, the soldiers eventually had to be ordered by de Gaulle himself to clear the insurgents out. The troops who accepted his surrender of insurgent leader Pierre Lagaillarde saluted him.

The obvious desire of many army officers to keep Algeria French and to keep the hopes of the extremist settlers alive despite their January failure, the Europeans were fighting to preserve French dominance of a territory they had largely developed themselves. For career army officers who had been forced to retreat from Tunisia, Morocco and Indochina, Algeria represented the last chance for preservation of a remnant of the once mighty French empire.

Together the officers and their French allies in Algeria watched with alarm as de-Gaulle's manoeuvres brought closer the possibility for a negotiated peace and independence for Algeria.

When the rebellion came, many Europeans in Algiers, Oran and Constantine — the major Algerian cities — went wild with joy. What little news leaked out from Paris seemed to favor the insurgents. No army units moved to suppress them.

But the pattern of January, 1960, reasserted. De Gaulle in France again rallied behind de Gaulle. Once again de Gaulle swung his massive prestige into the battle, calling upon loyalists to put down the new threat to his government. And once again the weight of that prestige began to work.

Faced with solid opposition from France, active opposition in the air force and navy, an economic blockade that would eventually strangle them, many among the insurgents must have known their cause was lost. Their collapse was sudden and swift.

Given 10 Years For Jewel Theft

BRANTFORD (CP) — Daniel Bregant, 27, of Hamilton, was sentenced Tuesday to 10 years in penitentiary for a breakin at the J. H. Young and Sons jewelry store here which netted loot worth $23,000. The loot was recovered when Bregant was arrested soon after the break-in.

Bozidar Ursic, 27, of Hamilton, charged jointly with Bregant, was acquitted, with the admonition from Judge R. W. Revilie: "You should consider yourself very lucky."

1837? That's the year the lights went on in Montreal. The first gas lighting. And now we have that date as a basis for a Numbers Game.

Using all four figures each time, one of each and no other figures at all, figure out expressions for the successive numbers starting with an expression for unity.

Any regular arithmetical signs may be used, but not the summation or factorial symbol. The simple plus is of course allowed.

For example, 3(17 - 8) is a solution for 27.

The limit without a break is 112 this time, but I'll be interested to see any lists even if they fail to attain that difficult target. For the expert there's a special challenge regarding 1037; find three solutions for it!

Fear of Complete Control By the United States May Have Made a United Canada

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP)—Rising in the shadow of a giant, Canada is constantly plagued by fears she may fall under complete domination of her powerful neighbor, the United States.

From infancy to maturity, this fear has never left her though the state of apprehension has switched from a threat of physical invasion to one of more subtle economic control.

Apprehension, however, may have its good points. Many historians agree that partly because of it, Canada is a united country today. The American Civil War intensified that fear of invasion and hastened the day of Confederation.

Says historian Robin Winks: "In effect, the war had helped create not one but two nations."

Either as kidnap victims or volunteers, perhaps as many as 50,000 Canadians took part in that four-year human holocaust that brought death to some 600,000 Union and Confederate soldiers.

As are many other aspects of that 1861-65 conflict, this estimate is open to challenge. Some historians maintain there never were that many Canadians in the struggle; others say there were more.

The exact number probably never will be determined, though the Civil War Centennial Commission's grass offers the figure of 50,000 as the number in the ranks of the northern forces. Others also had joined the south.

ARMED UNION

Whatever the number, there is plenty of evidence that a great many Canadians crossed the border to fight on the side of those who pledged to set Negro slaves free.

Dollars also provided bait. Both the north and south offered bounties or special financial inducements to the foreign-born to swell their ranks or replace the sripplings and full-grown men felled in the devastating struggle.

Some Canadians made the Civil War a regular business. They would accept payment to replace some conscripted northern: get "lost" in battle; return to Canada and start the process all over again.

Others found themselves in uniform by force—victims with offers of special jobs or bottle set up gangs to drug, slug or roader their victims senseless with alcohol and then haul them across for enlistment.

Hitler Pressured Franco During Second War

LONDON (Reuters) — Hitler pressured Spanish head-of-state Generalissimo Franco into agreeing conditionally to enter the second World War in the early months on the side of Germany, captured Nazi documents showed Monday.

The German foreign ministry documents, covering the period from September, 1940, to January, 1941, showed Hitler wanted Franco's forces to attack Gibraltar during the winter of 1940-1941.

But Franco insisted that Hitler send enough grain to alleviate famine conditions in Spain before he would fix a date for a Spanish assault on the British colonial fortress at the mouth of the Mediterranean.

The documents, published here officially, were edited by a combined team of American, British and French diplomatic historians.

Another section of the documents dealt with first Russian suspicions of Hitler's plan to move against the Soviet Union. They also revealed secret moves by Nazi leader Rudolf Hess for a negotiated peace with Britain and experts fromal Soviet-German talks to carve up the British Empire.

Latins Reluctant to Back Kennedy on Cuban Issue

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP) — While major Latin - American countries publicly avow their opposition to communism, there is a marked reluctance by most to rally behind President Kennedy's appeal for a united front against Fidel Castro.

Well - informed Latin sources say Kennedy's support among many Latin countries is so uncertain of the Cuban issue that the U.S. state department hesitates to press for a showdown in the Organization of American States.

Meanwhile, quarelling and cosponsorship are slowly cracking the flimsy shell of Cuban rebel unity. The morale of Cuban exiles in Miami and New York is reported to have been dropping as the days pass.

Reports from Miami say Miro Jose Cardona may soon be ousted from his position as head of the Cuban revolutionary council which sought to unite a number of rebel Cuban factions.

In despair, the rebels look to Kennedy for acting against Castro. But those close to the president say he is most concerned now with finding out why U.S. intelligence so grossly underestimated Castro's support among the Cuban people and his military strength to withstand attack.

Interior Secretary Stewart Udall attempted to shift some of the blame from Kennedy to former president Eisenhower, but Kennedy made it clear Monday night he takes full responsibility for whatever part the U.S. played in the invasion.

The White House issued a statement saying:

"President Kennedy has stated from the beginning that as president he bears sole responsibility for the events of the past few days. He has stated it on all occasions and he restates it now so that it will be understood by all.

"The president is strongly opposed to anyone within or without the administration attempting to shift the responsibility."

There was no elaboration.

The statement came, however, after Senator Everett M. Dirksen (Rep., Ill.), Republican leader in the Senate, protested a remark by Udall that the invasion had been conceived during the Eisenhower administration.

The planning of the invasion did start when Eisenhower was in office but Kennedy could have blocked it by refusing sea transport and gasoline. He didn't.

The president has assigned three officers of the government — including his brother Robert, the attorney - general — to aid Gen. Maxwell Taylor, retired army chief of staff, in a two - month examination of U.S. ability to wage guerilla warfare and of intelligence apparatus that would be required.

LIKES A FIGHT—Works Minister David Walker, a one-time boxer, seldom backs away from a verbal battle in the House of Commons. A scrappy debater who has been involved in some memorable exchanges, he was first elected for Toronto Rosedale in 1957 and was appointed to Prime Minister Diefenbaker's cabinet in August, 1959. (CP Photo).

Works Minister D. Walker Better Off in the Commons Than He Was in the Ring

By JACK VAN DUSEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Works Minister David Walker, scrappiest member of the federal cabinet, comes by his 'mock-'em-down debating style naturally. He was once a boxer.

"I find it hard to control my bitter tongue in the House of Commons," he admits. "But I never hold a grudge."

His career as a boxer was brief and unremarkable. But his political woe-but record shows only one setback—in 1953 when he was unsuccessful in his first attempt to win a Commons seat in Toronto Rosedale.

Since then it has been an uninterrupted winning streak and he chuckles:

"Politics must be agreeing with me. I used to box at 160 pounds and now I weigh 190 stripped."

A fight can be expected almost any time the wiry minister takes the Commons floor. He doesn't back away from a verbal exchange and often it is his own words that initiate one.

NO QUARTER ASKED

For example, in a recent one with Liberal MP Alexis Caron of Hull, such epithets as "blabbermouth," "loud mouth" and "dirty mouth" were tossed back and forth.

He soon learned, after being appointed works minister Aug. 20, 1959, that he couldn't be a loose fighter in the ring of government.

"I thought I was going to be dead in six months," he said, recalling those early days of his ministry. "I used to get up nights and talk to myself. I was working from 7 a.m. to mid-night and then awakening in the night to thrash out problems."

The secret, he discovered, was to "get someone you can work with, make sure he is competent and then delegate part of the job."

Having done this, the 55-year-old Torontonian now even finds time to "attend the charwomen's ball"—his department embraces hundreds of women who clean government offices each night.

KEEP LONG HOURS

But he still works from early morning until well after 8 p.m. when the Commons isn't sitting, and much longer when it is.

Besides the works department with its 12,000 employees and millions of dollars in government contracts, Mr. Walker is responsible for Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the government's housing agency, and the National Capital Commission, the federal body charged with development of the capital area.

David James Walker always wanted to be a politician, but after he graduated in law from Osgoode Hall in Toronto in 1931 and was called to the Ontario bar he found he couldn't afford politics. He decided to "get independently well off" before tossing his hat in the ring.

But through the years he remained a staunch Conservative and a behind-the-scenes worker for the party, and became a close friend of Prime Minister Diefenbaker, whom he first met at a Winnipeg convention in 1927.

LED STUDENT TORIES

That was the year Mr. Walker founded the Macdonald-Cartier club the first Conservative club at the University of Toronto.

He had numerous associations with politicians. Sir John A. Macdonald, Canada's first prime minister, often stayed at the home of his grandfather, another David J. Walker and a Conservative campaign manager who became a magistrate at Kingston, Ont.

A top debater at the university, he was once pitted against the then Liberal prime minister Mackenzie King "and he gave me an awful going over."

George Howard Ferguson, Conservative premier of Ontario from 1923 to 1930 and a special personal friend, inspired Mr. Walker, an Anglican, to spend three summers in a Quebec village at the home of a Roman Catholic priest to learn French. He has since sent his daughters, Joyce and Diane, to Quebec to enjoy the same wonderful experience.

LEARNED FROM DEFEAT

Of his 1953 election defeat, Mr. Walker now says:

"That was the finest thing that ever happened to me. It taught me the uncertainty of politics."

In the same philosophical vein, he adds: "When my tour of duty is over, I'll be happy to go back to my law practice."

Like the battler he is, he wasn't deterred by setback.

He tried again four years later and won by 5,000 votes in Toronto Rosedale when the Conservatives, led by Mr. Diefenbaker, broke 22 years of Liberal rule, "it came in on his coat tails," he says candidly.

He sold his 14-room house in Rosedale, keeping only an apartment there, and bought a bungalow on the shore of the Rideau River here, in summer he sometimes paddles a canoe to his office, a short distance downstream, in winter, he family skis at a lodge at Blue Mountain, near Collingwood, Ont.

But he has given up golf. "It took me 15 years to realize I was rotten."

HOW YOUR LIVER BILE HELPS BREAK DOWN FATS

IN THE DIGESTIVE TRACT

Laboratory tests have now proved that liver bile emulsifies fats . . . actually breaks them down. It is an established fact that when liver bile is added to fatty solids, the fats are broken down and form a smooth, soapy-flowing mix.

In your digestive tract, liver bile helps break down fats the same way. Many of the foods you eat reach the digestive tract as undigested fatty solids. Your golden liver bile helps break down these fats . . . for easier and more complete digestion.

Carter's Little Liver Pills' exclusive formula of vegetable ingredients relieves irregularity gently and effectively. At the same time, it actually improves the flow of liver bile needed to break down fats in your digestive tract.

So when you feel sluggish, headachy, nervous and need a laxative, take Carter's Little Liver Pills.

Remember, Carter's not only relieves irregularity, but actually improves the flow of liver bile. Get Carter's Little Liver Pills today!

Hull-Ottawa Champions

HULL, Que. (CP) — Hull-Ottawa Canadiens became champions of the Eastern Professional Hockey League Monday night with a 5-1 win over Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds in the rubber match of their best-of-seven final series.

The clear-sided action gave the Habs the series 4-3 before a record crowd of 5,750 and the right to succeed Sudbury Wolves as champs of the two-year-old league.

The Vipon Foley Memorial Trophy, named in honor of the Ottawa radio-television sports announcer who died last year in a Toronto auto accident, was presented the first time by league president Ed Houston immediately after the game to Habs captain Al MacNeil.

The Habs had the game all the way, out-shooting and out-shooting the Thunderbirds.

Canadiens' scorers were Terry Gray, Keith McCreary, MacNeil, Bobby Rousseau and Bill Carter. Norm Guimond scored for the Birds.

SETS SERIES MARK

Rousseau set a record with his 11th goal of the series in the third period.

Gray started the scoring at 12:49 of the first period when he worked his way into close quarters and connected on a short drive into the net past Soo goalie Roy Edwards.

Edwards, outstanding player for the Birds in the series, had little chance as the Habs scored on deflections and power plays.

McCreary put Canadiens two up early in the second period when he deflected MacNeils blueline shot.

Rousseau and MacNeil ran the count to 4-1 in the third period before Guimond tallied the only Soo goal at 13:26 while his team had a one-man advantage.

Twenty-three seconds later Carter finished off the scoring for the game—and for the season.

Buffalo San Juan Bats Win

By The Associated Press

Buffalo and San Juan capitalized on one of baseball's most potent weapons — extra base hits — Tuesday night for victories that shook up the International League standings.

Buffalo's pitcher Babe Birrer lashed a two-out double in the ninth to drive in three runs that gave the Bisons a 6-3 triumph over Richmond Virginians.

Johnny Glenn, Ben Matasorkar, Fred Whitfield and Ed Olivares hammered home runs for San Juan in the Marlins' 8-3 conquest of the Rochester Red Wings.

Toronto's game at Columbus and Syracuse's tilt at Jersey City were postponed by rain.

Righthander Birrer registered his first victory of the campaign by scattering nine hits among the Virginians and smacking what proved to be his game-winning double even though he gave up home runs to Don Lock and Phil Linz. He struck out nine.

Richmond's rookie southpaw Frank Carpin spent the distance but got himself in trouble by walking Felix Torres to start the ninth. Bob Bowman promptly singled, and Jim Coker reached first when Carpin elected to try for a forceout at third after fielding the bunted ball. Carpin's throw was late, an the bases were loaded. Birrer then strode to the plate.

San Juan's four home runs and Arnie Gregory's seven-hit pitching were much too much for Rochester. The Marlins jumped on the combined offerings of starter-loser John Pape, Bill Gaffney and Arnie PortoCarrero for 12 hits.

Gregory's record is now 1-1. The licking was Pape's first since he returned to the minors by Baltimore.

Buffalo's victory over Richmond dropped the Virginians from a first-place tie with Toronto into third. Rochester's defeat left the Red Wings sharing the IL cellar with Syracuse.

PREMIER LOSES GROUND

SEOUL, Korea (AP)—South Korean Premier John M. Chang's ruling Democratic party suffered setbacks in by-elections for the lower house held Monday in four districts. The government party won in only one district, while independents took the other three.

"And After The Brawls Were Over"

NORTH BAY (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks coach Rudy Pilous hinted Tuesday night that his judgment may be swayed by the rigors of playoff action in the National Hockey League.

Pilous was NHL referee Frank Udvari for the first time since his Hawks won the Stanley Cup. Pilous was the speaker and Udvari a guest at a sportsmen's dinner.

Udvari, Pilous said, was a "courageous" referee, he admitted he'd had some less favorable words on Udvari's officiating during the finals — "but all that was in the heat of battle".

Yesterdays Stars

Pitching — Stu Miller, Giants, saved 3-1 victory over Dodgers with three perfect innings of relief.

Hitting — Haywood Sullivan, As, collected two triples, a double, a single and a walk for perfect 4-for-4 and drove in five runs in 20-3 romp over Twins.

WEEK ALL-STARS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations are under way to bring a top-flight soccer team from either Brazil or France to meet the B.C. All-Stars here in July. Frank Bain, secretary of the B.C. Soccer Association, said Tuesday definite answers are expected shortly to invitations extended to the Madureira team of Brazil and a French club from Rheims.

Smythe Gets Reminder From The Law

Bowmanville (CP) — A hockey coach's appearance in court Tuesday after grappling with a policeman on the playing bench brought comments from magistrate and Crown attorney on the authority of police in a hockey arena.

Ronald Reid, 31, coach of a Thorold juvenile hockey team, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance in Bowmanville earlier this month and was fined $25. He ripped a button from Constable Ronald Parker's tunic after the officer complied with the referee's signal to remove him from the bench.

Crown Attorney Harold Dayman, of Cobourg, said a policeman has authority in a hockey arena regardless of what Maple Leaf Gardens president Conn Smythe says.

Mr. Smythe criticized Toronto police for going on the ice to intervene in a melee among players during the National Hockey League game March 11.

Magistrate R. B. Baxter said a wall cannot be built around the law. There is no reason why officers of the law should be ignored in a skating rink or anywhere else.

PLAYER STILL TOPS

DUNEDIN, Fla. (CP)—Masters winner Gary Player, a South African transplanted in Pennsylvania, is still on top of the money heap in professional golf. Player has won $45,385.33 officially in 16 tournaments. He still tops last year's top money winner, Arnold Palmer, who has played in 12 tournaments and won $32,925.

No Team For Europe

Come, Come Mr Roxburgh

TORONTO (CP) — President Jack Roxburgh of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said Tuesday he will recommend that Canada not send a hockey team to Europe next winter because the proposed schedule includes games in Sweden.

Roxburgh, referring to Swedish newspaper charges of alleged brutality by Trail, B.C., players, said Canada's hockey relations with Sweden are rather strained at the moment and there's no point in risking a repetition of what happened last year.

He denied a report indicating that the CAHA had already decided to send its Allan Cup champions to the world title meet in Colorado Springs, Colo., while losers of the series between Galt Terriers and Winnipeg Maroons would play in Russia, Czechoslovakia and Sweden.

Roxburgh said the CAHA would decide at its annual meeting next month in Port Arthur. Terriers lead the best-of-seven series, 3-1, and could win it tonight at Galt.

TEAMS INVITED

"Several European teams will be coming through here en route to Colorado," he said, "and we have invited Swedes, Russia and the Czechs to play in Canada. The Swedes were interested, but after those incidents said they would not play any games in Canada. So I see no reason why we should send a team to Sweden."

Russia too, probably won't play in Canada, since they watch only two games in North America before the championships. The United States is expected to book both as the sponsoring country.

Roxburgh said Czechoslovakia, which deedlocked Trail 4-4, may play some games here but the invitation has not been accepted yet.

The Trots

MONTREAL (CP) — Music Man, a seven-year-old bay gelding, ran the mile in 2:03 3-5 Tuesday night to win the featured $3,000 Invitational Trot at Richelieu Raceway.

Music Man returned $19.50, $7.50 and $4.30.

Nathan Hanover, owned by H. R. Slack of Haggersville, Ont., came in second and paid $4.80 and $3.70.

DEMONSTRATE FOR CASTRO

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP)—three hundred pro-Castro students staged a noisy demonstration Monday night to the buildings of the anti-Castro newspaper El Heraldo. Prompt action by firemen and police prevented serious damage.

Big Newk Goes to Spokane

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Veteran pitcher Don Newcombe has signed a contract with the Los Angeles Dodgers organization and will report to the Spokane farm club in the Pacific Coast League if waivers are obtained.

Newcombe was the ace of the Dodgers' pitching staff several years ago when the National League club was in Brooklyn.

Newcombe, 34, was undecided to leave salary and obtained $18,000 for the season. He was a free agent, having been released by Cleveland Indians last year.

WAR PENSIONS

The Western German government this year will pay pensions to 1,400,000 disabled war veterans and 1,100,000 widows of war veterans.

Galt Eyes Allan Cup

GALT (CP)—Galt Terriers have a chance to grab the Allan Cup and the Canadian senior hockey crown against Winnipeg Maroons tonight, but the westerner's haven't given up.

"... they've been the toughest club we've played, but if the puck starts bouncing for us, we've got just as good chance," says Winnipeg coach Gord Simpson.

Terriers lead the best-of-seven final 3-1. North and south games if needed, will be played in Kitchener.

Maroons have only eight goals in four games, but they hope tonight to beat up their chances on taking the cup for the first time in five years with the addition of last winger Fred Dunsmore.

Dunsmore has been kept in Winnipeg by work commitments. Now Simpson says there is a strong possibility he will fly east.

Terriers, who have won 14 of 15 playoff starts, may also make a lineup change. Defenseman Alex Hatch Keeling suffered possible cracked ribs in the second period of the fourth game and may not be fit for tonight.

In another development, Jack Roxburgh, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said he will recommend that Canada not send a hockey team on an exhibition tour in Europe next winter because the proposed schedule includes games in Sweden.

He said Canada's hockey relations with Sweden are "rather strained" at the moment because of Swedish newspaper charges of alleged brutality by Trail Smoke Eaters of British Columbia. Smoke Eaters won the world title earlier this year and toured Sweden before the championships.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVEN, Sports Editor

Ron Saylor, Belleville, and Horace Ormshaw, Trenton, two-time "Mr. Bowling" winners, will be out for their "hat-tricks" at the Bowl-O-Dome on Friday and Saturday, May 5th and 6th.

. . . Bill Bateman, popular Bowl-O-Drome manager, says the tenth "Mr. Bowling" tournament will be the best yet. The winner will receive $100 plus a handsome wrist watch donated by Jerry O'Connor's Jewel Box.

There's a second prize of $50 in folding money, and ten cash prizes. There's a daily high single award of $10. The winner receives a miniature of Lloyd's Cleaners Trophy for his award den.

The tournament is a ten-game affair with a break between five-game blocks. The deadline for all entries is Saturday, April 29th.

A number of the city and district's topflight keglers will be questing the silverware and loot, and Mr. Bateman anticipates the closest competition in "Mr. Bowling" history.

. . . Ron Saylor won the glory and gold in 1952 with a ten-game average of 248.3 and again in 1953 with a 278.8, the highest in tournament history. Mr. Ormshaw won it in 1958 with a 260.8 average and again last year with a 258.7.

Other winners are: 1954, Art Lockwood, Kingston, 241.8; J. McKenzie, 1955, with a 269.6; Ken Peacock, 1956, with 258.3; Leo Lecoleia in 1957 with 252.5 and Bill Godby in 1959 with a 257.3.

SOFTBALL . . .

The Commercial Softball League has announced its entries, and will be a six-team circuit this season, the smallest in history. Quality rather than quantity seems to be the aim of the league and the calibre of this season's games should be the best since the loop's inception.

A well-known name in softball is back in the firing line and Ox Point will likely field some familiar faces when the Point Anners meet Trudeau Motors in the opener on May 3d.

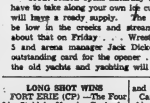
HOME-FOODS . . .

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Temple on the stork delivery of a lovely baby daughter, a beautiful little "Bobsitter" so to speak . . . The Bobcats have entered the Kingston Amateur Softball Association and will play home-and-home series with each of five clubs, points to count in the Kingston League . . . Moe Benoit and Floyd Crawford, we are informed, are moving to Omaha where employment possibilities are much brighter than here . . . Both had a fine season with the Knights last year . . . Peter, the son and heir, will join this newspaper's sports department in a summer reinforcement starting July 1st. . . . "Red" Townsend anticipates some keen competition in the Quinte Secondary School's Cross Country event scheduled for May 10.



There is talk of the Kenmore's baseball club entering a "farm" team in the South Hastings League. However, it is all in the "talk" stages . . . No sign of a "truce" yet between the District Softball League and Al Kelleher's Mask and Pad Department. The underground box it neither side will yield an inch or a pose . . . OHA annual convention gets under way at the waterlines Royal York on Friday and Saturday, and reports have it there will be an outstanding fireworks display during the confab . . . Films of the "Little Brown Jug" and the "Hambletonian" will be shown at the Riding Club's "Horsemen's" Ball at the Club Canara this Friday. Harness racing enthusiasts should not pass this up.

Trout season opens Saturday morning—and you won't have to take along your own lye hose. Most of the lakes will have a ready supply. The water levels are said to be low in the creeks and streams but we'll have more about that on Friday . . . Wrestling shifts here on May 5 and arena manager Jack Dickens expects to have an outstanding card for the opener . . . (B.T.S.) a story on the old yachts and yachting will be upcoming shortly.

Birds On Wing, Win Three Of Four

A's Smother Twins 20-2

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

It begins of appear the stumbling Baltimore Orioles finally may be on the move in the American League race. They now have won three of their last four decisions, after losing five of the first six in a repeat of last year's slow start before they finished a surprising second.

Steve Barber, who came out of nowhere and contributed 10 victories to their surge last season as a rookie, put away his second victory in a 5-3 decision over Cleveland Indians Tuesday night.

Kansas City Athletics rolled up their highest run total ever in a 20-3 romp over Minnesota Twins and Boston Red Sox whipped Washington Senators 6-1 in a day game. New York at Detroit and Los Angeles at Chicago were rained out.

Barber, 22, is left 3 and 0 after blanked the Indians without a hit until the sixth inning, when Johnny Temple extended his hitting streak to 11 games with a double. But he needed ninthinning relief help from Hoyt Wilhelm. The Tribe, winding up with five hits off Barber, had two men on base when Wilhelm struck out Jimmy Piersall on three pitches for the final out.

Jim Gentile drove in three Baltimore runs, two with a first-inning homer, and Jerry Adair brought in the other two with a double and single. Gary Bell, young Cleveland righthander, who had arm trouble last season, lost his third of the year and sixth in 10 starts since last July.

The A's rapped seven Minnesota pitchers for 16 hits—eight for extra bases — and also collected 10 walks. They scored all six runs in the third off loser Ted Sadowski and eight in the sixth, all charged to Paul Giel in one-third of an inning.

Righthander Gene Conley, pitching for a belated start after helping Boston Celtics win the National basketball title, won his first AL game with the Red Sox. The tall righthander, acquired in a trade with Philadelphia Phillies, shut out the Senators on five hits for eight frames, then needed relief by Mike Fornieles as the Nats scored for the first time in 21 innings. Pete Burnside, tagged for four runs in the second inning, lost.

Memorial Cup

St. Michaels Take Opener 4-0

By LORNE SHUCE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP)—Toronto St. Michael's Majors threw their deadly scoring line and dogged back-checkers at Edmonton Oil Kings to open the 1961 Memorial Cup final Tuesday night. They emerged with a 4-0 victory that left the westerners slightly bewildered.

The Eastern Canada champions, seeking their fourth cup and Canadian junior hockey crown in five attempts, tied up the Oil Kings in convincing style that it prompted Edmonton coach Buster Brayshaw to comment: "I have never seen such a good-checking junior hockey club."

The Oil Kings, staging the first Memorial Cup engagement ever held in Edmonton, were faced with a club that made few mistakes and a goalender who was superb when called on to make key stops.

The westerners had only 17 shots at netminder Jerry Cheevers, St. Catharines native, who recorded the first shutout in the championship series in the last 13 years.

The Oil Kings were expected to give Majors a tough battle and Brayshaw was annoyed that they didn't.

"They outplayed, outhustled and outchecked us," he said. "We have to be going our best to beat them. . . . We had a bad first period and never regained our form. . . . Whether the Majors are that good or our club that bad will be told in the next game or so."

The second game of the best-of-seven series is set for Thursday night and Brayshaw lost no time calling up reinforcements.

Buzzers Take Opener From Owen Sound

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto St. Michael's Buzzers came from behind Tuesday night to beat Owen Sound Greys 4-3 in the opening game of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior B best-of-seven final.

The second game will be played in Owen Sound Thursday night and the third here Saturday.

Greys took a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Bill and Dave McComb. But Gary Dineen made it 2-1 before the period ended and Emile Therien tied the score after two minutes of the second. Mike Corbett later fired the winner on a rebound. Dineen scored the fourth for St. Michael's goal into an open net with less than two minutes to go.

Asks Probe Of Ti-Cat History

HAMILTON (CP)—City council voted Tuesday night to ask the public trustee's office to investigate the history of Tiger Cat Football Club Incorporated, owners until last December of Hamilton's entry in the Big Four Football League.

The inquiry was called for by Alderman John Munro, who said sale of the club to private interests will cut off money that had gone to amateur sports in the city.

The club had been operated as a non-profit community organization, the owners diverting surpluses from the operation to amateur football.

Controller Victor Copps blamed pressure from the Big Four for the sale. He said the league was "telling us that we can't give the profits from our club to minor football."

Giants Three M's Halt The 'Bums'

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

San Francisco Giants no longer have the three Willies with, the bat, but they've moved into first place in the National League race with three M Jags — Miller, McCovey and Mays.

With Stu Miller's relief pitching breaking up a rally, Willie McCovey driving in two runs and Willie Mays cutting down a run at the plate with a double play peg, the Giants replaced Los Angeles in first by trimming the Dodgers 3-1 Tuesday night.

Milwaukee came from behind for a 4-3 victory over St. Louis in the only other game played in the NL. The Philadelphia at Pittsburgh and Cincinnati at Chicago games were rained out.

The Dodgers, after winning three in a row, ran into quick trouble against the Giants. Chuck Hiller opened with a single off Dodger ace Don Drysdale.

The Giants' first baseman, one of the Willies of past seasons along with, Mays and Willie Kirkland since traded to Cleveland, then tagged fourth-inning solo homer for the decisive run.

WON HIS FIRST.

Right hander Jack Sanford won his first and had the Dodgers on a string for six innings, allowing just two hits. But in the seventh, Junior Gilliam drew one of Sanford's six walks and scored on singles by Maury Wills and Charlie Neal. That's when Miller hustled in for a three-inning relief job.

Moon, the Dodger hero of the moment with a NL record tying total of eight home runs for April, was hitless for the first time in 14 games this season.

A single by Henry Aaron drove in the tying run for the Braves and an error by Red Schoendienst brought in the clincher as Milwaukee came from behind with three runs in the eighth against loser Curt Simmons 1-1 and reliever Lindy McDaniel. Lew Burdette won his first, on the third try, giving up six hits, one a ninth-inning home run by Stan Musial.

FARM CHIEF FIRED

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Hank Peters, dismissed as farm director of Kansas City Athletics, said Tuesday the move came as no surprise. General manager Frank Lane of the As said the firing of Peters "comes as a result of the anticipated reorganization when the new ownership took over." Other sources at the club office said it was brought to a head after Peters had given a $35,000 bonus to a young lefthanded pitcher without first obtaining the consent of Lane or the Athletics' owner, Charlie Finley.

medicines from the U.S.

Another anti-Castro operation by Cuban refugees —some authorities think such an action might still be the way out for the U.S. if the operation could be properly organized and supported on a large scale.

Kennedy is pleased with the success he has thus far achieved in rallying bipartisan political support for a tough and determined U.S. anti-Castro policy in the months ahead.

The latest evidence of this support came Tuesday from Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York, a staunch Republican party leader, who had just conferred with Kennedy. Leaving the White House he declared:

"I think it is time for all Americans to stand united behind the president in support of whatever action becomes necessary to defend freedom."

Indications are that Kennedy may be several weeks in coming to a decision on his next move.

THREE GENERALS

strike.Armored cars appeared at strategic spots. A jeep -mounted anti-aircraft gun.

BOTH OPEN FIRE

At the Hotel Aletti, the gendarmes ran into rebel paratroops. Both sides opened fire. The gendarmes pulled back with three wounded, carrying them into the hotel lobby.

The fate of the battle of the Aletti was only temporary. More gendarmes were swarming through the city.

An insurgent radio program was in full swing when the gendarmes burst into Radio Algiers. The surprised announcer looked up and shouted into the microphone: "Everyone to the Forum."

Answering his call—the last insurgent word over Radio Algiers — thousands of residents poured into the streets and to the Forum Square.

They came carrying rifles, sub-machine-guns, pistols and shotguns.

They milled in the square waiting for word from the insurgent generals.

MIKES WERE DEAD

Challe and Salan appeared on the balcony of the big modern Government - General Building. They couldn't even make a farewell address—the microphones were dead.

Meanwhile, Radio Algiers was telling the residents to go home, the insurrection was over. Mobile gendarmes made the point clear with barricades around the city. Still, shots rang out and clashes were reported about the city between the gendarmes and the civilians.

As the crowd began to dissolve, Gen. Zeller, in civilian clothes, slipped out of the Government-General Building and drove off.

Dressed in combat uniforms, Challe, Joubaud and Salan paced the ground-floor corridor of the building.With Salan was his wife. They were guarded by four youths in leather jackets and carrying sub-machine guns.

They paced there for an hour, in strange isolation amid the noisy chaos of the city. Finally a paratroop officer came up and they exchanged a few words mentioning a airplane.

Then, Challe, Joubaud and Salan walked out of the building. Each boarded a separate truck loaded with paratroops of the fanatic 1st regiment of the unit that led the insurrectional takeover Saturday.

The convoys then sped out of the centre of the city.

EICHMANN

mann, who was then in hiding, Hitler was made responsible for the wartime murder of 6,000,000 Jews, leaned back in his seat in the bullet - proof glass-enclosed dock. Tears welled in his eyes as statements were being read out. His mouth twisted in a quizzical grimace.

Eichmann suggested the plan to Nazi Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler and Hitler gave the order for the gas chamber executions personally, the statement said.

The court decided to admit Wisliceny's statements as evidence over the objections of Robert Servatius, Eichmann's chief defence counsel.

Servatius argued there was bad blood between Eichmann and Wisliceny and that Wisliceny's assessment of Eichmann was made "to save his own skin."

Bits and Pieces From Life Around Hollywood Scene

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Around the town in 85 days . . . Wonder what happened to all those English butlers who used to bustle in films . . . Nobody noticed Burt Lancaster wearing a toupee Oscar night. Nothing wrong with his hairline, just shaved it for a movie . . . Elmer Gantry may turn a good profit because of Lancaster's Oscar-winning performance. . . . It broke even first time around, hampered by the "not for those under 18" tag . . . Shirley Jones' family lifted its collective eyebrow when she played a fancy lady in Gantry, now heartily approves . . . Maria Wilson and Don Murray are splitting their longtime act except for rare dates. . . . Ken did some fine drama on Death Valley Days.

Just when we were recovering from Oscar, along comes Emmy. They're campaigning just as hard for TV's big give-away, May 16 . . . One-eyed Jacks is a nifty, despite Marlon Brando's cracks that it's a potboiler. . . . Should earn back Paramount's $5,000,000 and then some. . . . Jim Carver can chortle; Maverick founder-ed without him. . . .

MAY TOUR U.S.

Welshman Hugh Griffith hopes to tour the U.S. with King Lear . . . Could this be the start of a trend—Brigitte Bardot doing a film of her own life? What's next—The Tuesday Weld Story? . . . After paying off movies for years, Jackie Gleason is doing two a year. Films can use him, as in the W. C. Fields biography.

The town's happy that Gower Champion has a new Broadway hit. Carnival, to add, to his Bye Bye Birdie smash . . . Fred MacMurray may be the only star to do a TV series and two hit pictures in one year—The Apartment and The Absent-Minded Professor.

Services of Interpreter Would Have Been a Help

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — A TV laxed manner of performing is dandy. But Dean Martin is so relaxed, so lazy-mannered and sleepy-voiced that it sometimes is hard to understand him.

Tuesday night during Martin's NBC special, there were moments when the services of an interpreter would have helped.

Andy Griffith was one of Martin's guests. With Dean slurring his words and Andy using his deepest south dialect, it sometimes sounded as if they were speaking to each other in foreign languages.

The program had one bright sketch idea — a burlesque of those old movies about the dramatic struggles for success by Tin Pan Alley composers, complete with all the cliches, even the inevitable splitting of the successful team over a girl.

The most unusual aspect of the one hour show, however, was a notable omission: there was made any jokes about Martin and alcoholism — the beginning of a new era in Dean Martin's shows.

As situation comedy goes, The Ewell Show is one of the better ones. Tuesday night's show was typical. A script about a do-it-yourself project that misfired. Unfortunately the show will be one of the season's casualties.

Fans Will See Fights On Gridiron

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Television viewers will see more of the unscheduled action in National Football League games next fall.

League commissioner Pete Rozelle said Tuesday that while he agrees with his late predecessor, Bert Bell, that violence should not be featured on televised football games, he also believes fans should know what's happening on the field.

"Moving the cameras to show the flag and blue skies just doesn't make much sense," Rozelle said in an interview. When tempers flare in NFL games, TV cameras are elsewhere.

Bell was adamant that player brawls should not be shown on TV.

"I think Mr. Bell was absolutely correct," Rozelle said. "He felt, and I feel, that the countless youngsters who watch our games shouldn't be getting the wrong idea of the samples. But we should let people know what's happening without permitting the perspective to become distorted.

"I've talked to the network about this policy and told them to go ahead and exercise their judgment when these things occur. They really don't happen that often."

Rozelle is here for the NFL's annual meeting, set to open today.

Chief of Grain Commission Asks Fair Deal for Growers

By TOM WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP) — George Newton - McConnell greeted with the strong brown hands of a veteran farmer and spoke of his newest job as chief commissioner of the Board of Grain Commissioners.

"The big thing is to see that the producer gets a fair and equitable deal when he delivers his grain and to make sure the quality is maintained from the country elevators to the terminals to cargo boats."

Mr. McConnell, 6, was appointed to the $15,500-a - year post—described as one of the most important in the Canadian grain trade—early in April. He succeeded R. W. Milner of Winnipeg who retired last fall.

Before he became a commissioner on the three-man board in 1956, Mr. McConnell worked a 960-acre farm near McConnell, Man., a small farming community 40 miles northwest of Brandon that was named after his father, Andrew Delaney McConnell.

"I farmed that section-and-a-half from the time I graduated from Manitoba Agricultural College in 1912 until 1956.

"But being a member of this board is a full-time job and I don't get time to visit the farm much any more. My two sons, Keith and Elmer, operate it now."

The board, consisting of Mr. McConnell, A. V. Svoboda of Saskatoon and S. S. Lopteon of Brandenbury, Sask., is responsible for maintaining grain quality standards and supervising movement of grain from producer to domestic markets and export outlets.

It maintains a staff of 900 working at such tasks as grain inspection, tariff regulation, cereal research, statistical studies and elevator licensing.

Mr. McConnell brings to the job a background of 40 years of activity in farm organizations. From 1930 until his appointment to the board he was district director of Manitoba Pool Elevators and during the last 16 was a vice-president.

Under Mr. Milner's chairmanship, he said, prestige of the board and the confidence in its work by producers, grain dealers and foreign customers reached a high level.

"I hope to see that this is continued."

Mr. McConnell is a man of medium height and stocky build with blue eyes set in a square-jawed face under a healthy head of silvery hair that retains some of its former black. A ruddy, weatherbeaten complexion hints at his life on the land. He speaks in a straightforward manner in a deep, resonant voice.

The desk in his modest office on the second floor of the National Grain Exchange building is cluttered with all manner of reading material, ranging from scientific plant studies to annual reports, from statistical information to newspapers.

"I read everything I lay my hands on, fiction and non-fiction, grain books and news magazines. . . . I don't have any real hobbies—never was one for golf or things like that. My main exercise now is mowing the lawn. But I'm in pretty good shape. I smoke three cigars a day and take an occasional drink of scotch."

Mr. McConnell and his wife Anne now live in Winnipeg's well-to-do Wellington Crescent area. Besides two sons, they have a married daughter living in Cardale, Man.

The farm at McConnell includes the quarter-section that his father, a pioneer from St. Mary's, Ont., homesteaded in 1881. The community was named for the elder McConnell because of his efforts to bring CNR rail line through the area.

Recalling his youth, Mr. McConnell said the farm "is a wonderful place to be brought up."

"The trend away from the smaller, family farm is inevitable, I think, but I won't say it's good. There was real strength in the community life of a village with about 100 farm families living around it. It won't be the same if there are only 40 farms around the town."

The major changes in farming had resulted from technological advances but there were problems, such as the high cost of starting farm operations, and modern methods had affected the quality of crops.

"Ten to 15 years before the advent of the combine method of harvesting, most western crops were cut, bound and stooked. This provided the grain kernels with better protection from the elements and resulted in finer quality in appearance and maturity.

"The present method of swathing and combining sometimes leaves the grain lying in the fields for considerable time. While it requires much less labor, this method does lend itself to more immature kernels and greater weathering, making less attractive samples."

On the general question of grain quality, he said the baking quality of Canada's wheat has never been challenged in the past but certain other exporting countries such as the Soviet Union, Argentina and the United States were making headway in improving their wheat varieties.

"The task of keeping Canadian wheat in the forefront presents a challenge to the country's plant breeders."

CHIEF COMMISSIONER

George N. McConnell, 66, is chief commissioner of the 3-man board of grain commissioners which supervises Canadian grain quality standards and Prairie grain movements to markets. Mr. McConnell worked a 960-acre farm in Manitoba before being appointed to the board in 1956. His appointment as chief commissioner this April follows the retirement of R. W. Milner of Winnipeg. TOUGH PURGE IS LAUNCHED IN ALGERIA

Tottering Laos Govt. Is Seeking Quick Cease-Fire

Await Rebel Reaction To Friday Truce Call

VIENTIANE — The government today called for a cease-fire in Laos from Friday, but there was no indication the pro-Communist rebels will agree.

The call was broadcast by the government radio and was transmitted to the British Embassy for relay to the rebels by way of the Russians.

As the appeal was made public, concern rose about the ability of royal troops to stand up much longer against rebel attacks despite an increased airlift of U.S. arms.

Earlier, Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, strongman of the government and its military commander, proposed that peace talks between the warring factions begin Friday in Luang Prabang the royal capital.

Reliable sources said there were no reports of any major fighting since the fall Wednesday of Muong Sai, a trading centre 55 miles north of Luang Prabang.

But there was grave concern over the government's position as reported from Coquilhatville in a series of successful Communist attacks in recent weeks left the area open to the rebels to arrange a cease-fire.

The Communists can break through and this may place Leopoldville in grave danger, it was said in Coquilhatville, capital of Equateur province by central government forces. He was in the city for a meeting on a proposed Federation of Congolese provinces.

Katangan Interior Minister Godefroid Munongo said Wednesday he had received direct assurances from Coquilhatville by telephone that Tshombe would be released and would leave for Elisabethville today.

But informed sources said Coquilhatville airport has been closed, to all traffic, incoming and outgoing, since midnight Wednesday night. The DC-4 due to fly Tshombe out today was reported still on the ground at the airport this morning.

CABINET WORRIED

The news reported the Katangan ambassador had tried today but took no action, awaiting further word from Coquilhatville.

But the situation was regarded serious enough for one notably unarrivable source to comment: "I would say we are about to war now than over before unless-Sic."

LET POINT

Mutong Sisa was a key government defence garrison and the force there was estimated to number 1,000 men.

Two Canadian transports arrived in Vientiane Wednesday with ammunition and arms for the government troops.

In Washington, the state department said it hoped the cease-fire will continue to supply the government with military equipment. Any violence until a cease-fire is verified.

Katanga Gloomy Though Tshombe Arrest Denied

ELISABETHVILLE (Reuters) Officials in breakaway Katanga province of The Congo were gloomy today as no news was forthcoming on the whereabouts of President Moise Tshombe.

Tshombe and members of his party were arrested Wednesday in the Equator province capital of Coquilhatville by central government forces. He was in the city for a meeting on a proposed Federation of Congolese provinces.

Katangan Interior Minister Godefroid Munongo said Wednesday he had received direct assurances from Coquilhatville by telephone that Tshombe would be released and would leave for Elisabethville today.

MINISTER SEES CANADA FACING RESPONSIBILITIES

Must Meet Problems With Optimism

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Green said Wednesday that Canada holds huge responsibilities in world affairs. He called on his fellow citizens to face up to the problems confronting them with "optimism and idealism."

"This is no day for a pessimist in world affairs," he told the Canadian Club. "Anyone living to deal with world problems today or any day who is a pessimist is very likely to wind up in a mental asylum."

Mr. Green said "no country in April of 1961 has a greater responsibility—and let us stress the feature of responsibility in world affairs rather than opportunity."

The minister spoke in opening a two-day foreign affairs debate in the House. The debate continues today.

The only other speaker Wednesday was Paul Martin (Essex E.st). The opposition spokesman disagreed with Mr. Green on Canada's approach in the Congo, Cuba, disarmament, Laos, and membership in the Organization of American States.

Mr. Green's "sketchy" review of world affairs — it took nearly two hours — included a lengthy reference to the scheduled disarmament talks and Canada's efforts at bringing them about. He credited Canada with a major part in prompting a resumption of disarmament negotiations.

President's Father Reported Outlook of German Jews Bad

JERUSALEM — Joseph P. Kennedy, father of President Kennedy, reported in 1938 that the outlook for the Jews in Germany was "very bad," evidence introduced today in the trial of Adolf Eichmann showed.

Kennedy was the American ambassador to Britain at the time.

The court trying Eichmann received a photostatic copy of a report Kennedy cabled to the state department Dec. 8, 1938, Assistant Attorney-General Ya'akov Bar'or told the judges it was obtained from the National Archives in Alexandria, Va.

Kennedy relayed a report, received from the French foreign office, of a conversation between Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and French Ambassador Henri Bonnet.

"The results were very bad," Kennedy cabled Washington.

Kennedy's message also referred to "financial arrangements" and "our plans with the British."

Bar'or said Kennedy's cable was about "the refugees from Germany, ways of helping them and easing their situation.' Kennedy's message said in part:

"Ribbentrop, when pressed, told Bonnet that the Jews in Germany, with one exception, were pickpockets, murderers and thieves. The property they had taken or been acquired illegally. The German government therefore decided to assimilate them with criminal elements.

"The Kennedy report was one of several dozen entered in the record today by Bar'or.

Eichmann himself came to the prisoner's dock carrying an armload of files and documents. As the prosecution went on referring, in documents, to events and dates, Eichmann quickly opened his folders.

He made copious notes and marked certain passages.

Letters written by Eichmann, then climbing to power on the Hitlerian ladder, were put in evidence.

Eichmann was quoted as saying in a letter he wrote in 1937 that he had the leaders of the Jewish community in Vienna "on the run . . . they are working diligently. . . ."

"I have them completely under control. They do not dare to budge without previously asking for my permission."

Castro Argues With Rebels On Lengthy Television Show

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Fidel Castro today spoke for nearly four hours before about 1,000 captured rebel invaders in a dramatic Cuban television show interrupted once by an apparently accidental burst of gunfire.

The Cuban prime minister, in an oratorial performance ranging from soft-voiced persuasion to arm - waving shouting, appeared frequently frustrated when a guard's weapon discharged.

Then, he raised his arms over his head, urged the large Havana Sports Palace crowd to remain calm and said:

"Don't anybody move. Everybody stay where you are. Don't anyone put their weapons where they take care."

Minutes after the interruption, Castro continued his long political and economic lecture to a captive audience seated in ringside seats guarded by soldiers armed with automatic rifles.

"You all thought you were going to be assassinated, didn't you?" Castro asked.

"Yes," the prisoners shouted back.

"Instead," he said, "you have been treated politely." Most of them agreed.

After Castro spoke of the danger of American aggression

RAIL PRESIDENTS, UNION LEADER MEET ON ISSUE

Strike Solution Seen No Nearer

MONTREAL (CP) — Negotiators for Canada's two major railways and their 15 non-operating unions emerged from a two - hour private meeting Wednesday with no indication that a proposed nationwide rail strike was any closer to a solution.

The chief participants all declined comment when the meeting ended.

Donald Gordon president of Canadian National Railways, was expected.

"There will be a statement when we have finished our meetings, not before."

N. R. Crump, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and Frank Hall, chief negotiator for the railways, were equally noncommittal.

It was expected there would be another meeting today.

While the participants declined to discuss the details of a reported new approach to the problem, one of the biggest and trickiest issues in Canada, it was indicated this was likely. The recommendations contained in the controversial royal commission report on railway problems.

"At least things are on the move again," said a well-placed source. "You can be sure new proposals have been broached, otherwise the union committee would not have agreed to the series of meetings that began today."

The unions have pressed for acceptance of a 44-hour weekly wage boost recommended by a conciliation board headed by Mr. Justice J. V. H. Milvain of the Alberta Supreme Court last fall.

The railways have consistently rejected any pay boost on the grounds that the non - operating workers not actually involved in the movement of trains, are adequately paid in comparison to similar workers in other industries.

They also maintain they cannot afford any more unless rates present conditions.

The royal commission on transportation, in a report tabled in the Commons earlier this year, recommended a gradually declining series of federal subsidies to the railways. They would start at $37,300,000 this year and drop to about half that amount in five years, during which time the railways would be given opportunity to reduce or eliminate unprofitable services.

No legislation to implement the report has been introduced in Parliament.

Mr. Hall said earlier: "If the railways get the financial help recommended by the commission no longer have any excuse for not meeting our wage demands."

Force Civilians To Line Up To Surrender Arms

All Foreign Legion Recruiting Is Stopped

ALGIERS — Warships of the French Mediterranean Fleet anchored off Algiers today as government authorities launched a tough post-revolt purge in this North African territory.

Civilians ordered to line up today to surrender their arms to police.

There still was no news of what had happened to the three military leaders of the rebel generals' junta—Andre Zeller, Edmond Jouhaud and Raoul Salan.

The three fugitive retired generals, now stripped of rank, were believed to have split up in a desperate flight to avoid the fate of rebel boss former Gen. Maurice Challe, captured and jailed by French authorities to face treason charges.

Army units blocked the road leading to the Foreign Legion base at Zeralda, 20 miles west of Algiers, and hundreds of police surrounded the camp. Foreign Legion paratroopers flew into Algiers and boarded their trucks for the abortive four-day revolt.

Gen. Jean Crepin, Air Force Minister Pierre Messmer disclosed the future of the Foreign Legion in meeting with officers here. All recruiting for the legion in France was halted today.

Official sources here said the men of the First Regiment of the Foreign Legion paratroops based at Zeralda were being moved to Side - Bel - Abbes in western Algeria, the overall headquarters of the Foreign Legion.

NO SIGN OF MOVE

But there was no sign of any move at Zeralda today, German foreign legionnaires at the base said several men had not reported back to the base following the collapse of the revolt.

"But we have been told to say someone is here."

Official sources in Algiers said about 50 men were missing from the Zeralda base, and unofficial reports placing the number at about 400.

There were other reports that three paratroop regiments which took part in the revolt were headed for the Algerian mountains, with many to join the "Maquis" resistance group, but these were not confirmed.

Police armed with search warrants took off on orders to find about 400 civilians who played active roles in backing the junta ousted from Algiers by loyalist troops Tuesday night and early Wednesday.

Under instructions from Paris, authorities launched a similar purge in the French Army and Air force of Algeria.

A government spokesman said

Nobel Winner Gives New Theory On Formation of Solar System

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new theory on the formation of the solar system, including a novel surprise idea that a near miss of a moon came into being, was advanced Wednesday by Nobel Prize winner Harold C. Urey.

Dr. Urey, of the University of California, San Diego, theorized that it all started from a great formless glob of gas and dust.

His theory on which scientists have long agreed.

1. Some 4,500,000,000 years ago, the original gas nebula —produced by the explosion of a star — began to condense.

2. Some of these moon-sized objects touched one another rather gently, with two or more adhering together in different parts of the celestial sphere, forming the basis of at least nine of the objects which Odyssey crashed together violently, ripping them into many fragments and producing debris which later was picked up by the revolving planets, at least some of which gathered other moon-sized objects.

3. But the present moon was one of the objects which escaped collision, and also escaped being captured by some fledgling planet.

Urey, in a report to the National Academy of Sciences, amplified at a press conference, said the chances that the moon was thus formed about 100,000,000 years before the earth are "reasonably good." Eventually, he said, the moon was captured into a orbital path around the earth when it meandered close to the new planet.

Also, he figures the asteroids formed from perhaps 80 moonlike masses, including some that adhered together and some that were first broken, then absorbed as fragments.

Created as Haven for Freed Slaves, Sierra Leone Becomes Independent

FREETOWN (Reuters)—The 2,000,000 citizens of diamond-rich Sierra Leone today celebrated the independence of their colony after nearly 175 years as a British colony.

Independence came to the west African territory—created as a haven for freed slaves and the beginning of the last century in a dramatic midnight ceremony here today.

The colony was a haven for North American slaves who had fled to the Canadian Maritime provinces during the American War of Independence.

Some 15,000 persons jammed Freetown Sports Stadium and stood together to sing the hymn Lead Kindly Light, followed by the new Sierra Leone national anthem.

At midnight, lights were extinguished. Ten seconds later they flashed on again, focused on the new green, white and blue flag that had replaced the Union Jack on the staff in front of the royal pavilion.

A great cheer from the crowd greeted independence and more cheers roared through the city as fireworks festooned the sky.

Not joining in the celebrations were the members of the opposition All People's Congress party who have been jailed by the government, allegedly because they planned to disrupt independence celebrations. Prime Minister Sir Milton Margai has promised to free them as soon as the independence festivities are over.

Earlier, at the opening of the Sierra Leone Parliament, the 25-year-old Duke of Kent read a message from the Queen, his cousin.

He also handed to Margai the formal constitutional documents making Sierra Leone a sovereign, independent state.

Sir Maurice Dorman, the former colonial governor, was sworn in as governor-general.

PARIS (Reuters) — The French government cracked down on right-wing extremists today and cut off recruiting for the Foreign Legion in the wake of a four-day Algerian uprising against President de Gaulle.

Hundreds of known die-hard rightists were being held in custody amid warnings of possible new flareups by extremists trying to overthrow de Gaulle's policy of negotiating with Moslem rebels in Algeria.

A government order closed all recruiting offices in France for the Foreign Legion, which played a key role in the abortive revolt in Algeria.

TO DISSOLVE LEGION?

Paris newspaper, the mass-circulation France Soir, said the move indicated that the Legion, "or at least some of its units, might be dissolved."

Most of the Foreign Legion is a government secret, but unofficial reports have placed the number of legionnaires at about 30,000, many of them Germans. The French Legion is stationed in Algeria.

Meanwhile, three generals who aided in the revolt were dismissed from the army during their uprising were flown back here and six Gaullist cooks it known that the government planned to stamp out right-wing supporters of the revolution in France.

The president retained dictatorial powers despite the crushing of the revolt and Premier Michel Debre warned in a television broadcast Wednesday night that "Barrages and explosions are still possible."

Informed sources disclosed that several generals who have been detained in the last

County Council Holds Line On Taxation Setting Same Rate as Last Yr., 12.25 Mills

Hastings county has held the line on taxation for 1961 with council members yesterday striking a general rate of 12.25 mills, plus a debenture rate of four-tenths of a mill.

In both instances the rate is the same as for last year.

In addition, municipalities in the county roads system will pay a road rate of 7.5 mills, also the same as last year.

Estimates for the year approved at yesterday's session, saw expenditures listed at $1,321,121.

Big items on the expenditure list included $435,000 listed for roads and bridges with another $100,000 to go toward a railway underpass in Sidney township north of Trenton.

COSTS OUTLINED

Road charges will cost an estimated $51,000; children's welfare $105,000; indigent hospitalization $20,000 and the county home and farm. Administration salaries will cost $21,000. High schools will cost the county $103,032, but this is charged back against the municipalities.

Total revenue side of the ledger will see Belleville pay $44,000 to the county as its share of law enforcement and the city of Trenton will pay $18,500 as its share of the law enforcement.

Receipts at the county home and farm are listed at $14,000, provincial subsidy to the county home $42,000.

Provincial subsidy will amount to $253,646 with the county to receive $90,000 in grants toward the Trenton subway. The rural share of the Dominion government's cut in lieu of taxation will be $11,000.

The capital levy against those municipalities within the county roads system will raise $190,854 and the general levy of 12.25 mills assessed against the county property assessment will raise $365,925.

WILL GET SUBSIDY

A non-recurring expenditure this year is the cost of razing the old shire hall and part of the old courthouse, together with preparing ground which amounts to $17,000. This work is being carried on under the winter works program and the county expected to receive $3,000 back in government subsidy.

Hastings county finished 1960 with a surplus of $33,763, it was shown in auditor's report read at yesterday's morning session.

The surplus shown in report of $1,363,396 against expenditures of $1,227,632.

Commencing the year 1960 the county had an accumulated surplus of $100,000, but $100,000 of this was used toward paying construction costs of the new county building officially opened in January.

SOME IN RESERVE

Accumulated surplus at the end of last year was given as $43,702. In addition to the $35,763 surplus last year, Clerk Treasurer Earl S. Denyes said that $25,000 had been placed in reserve.

Taxes receivable at the year end totalled $92,285, this being the amount due from the local municipalities. At the corresponding date a year ago taxes receivable had amounted to $33,800.

There was little discussion on the auditor's report, the only matter under contention being an amount of $500 provided in last year's road budget to be paid to the county for clerical work done for the road committee by the county clerk's office staff.

The amount apparently had never been paid over and a notation has been made to this effect by the auditor.

County Clerk Denyes said there had been no actual motion in council directing that the amount be paid.

The feeling generally on the part of councillors was that the county could get too technical in making inter-department costs and approved a motion for the finance committee to give the matter further study.

One line of thought was that if the road committee was charged by the general office for clerical work done, the cost would be recovered in government subsidy. Later it was suggested no subsidy could be paid on any such charge.

Reg. Reeve Pat Fitzgerald said the auditors did not make their note without justification for some charge to be made against the road department.

He said he did not wish to make an issue of the matter but said the same note had been appearing in the auditor's report for several years.

ANOTHER GRANT MADE

Included in this year's estimates is a grant of $2,500 toward the Trenton Memorial Hospital. A grant of $5,000 had been given previously toward the new hospital wing.

Correspondence from Trenton showed that 21 per cent of the patients at Trenton hospital came from the county of Hastings.

Yesterday councillors also heard a formal request from the Bay Shore Community and Belleville General Hospital for a grant of $290,000 to assist in the construction of a new $900,000 hospital addition.

Spokesman for the hospital addition was Board Chairman J. N. Yanover with other delegation members being Werner Daechsel, hospital superintendent, Dr. Donald Scott, representing the medical association and Frank Domenico.

JOINTS OUT SURVEYS

Mr. Yanover said surveys showed many more than 60 additional beds would be needed at the hospital within five years but this was financially impossible at the present time.

He said 60 additional beds was the limit without adding to existing hospital services.

"Within a few years there would be need for a new hospital," he said.

He noted that approximately 65 per cent of the people of Hastings County requiring hospitalization came to Belleville hospital. The survey on this request was based on 39 per cent of all hospital patients coming from the county.

Madoc Reeve Earl Sager questioned the present policy of the taxpayer being called upon to pay hospital expansion costs. Since the introduction of Ontario Hospital Services, hospitals were being paid by grants.

"The people have got to get away from the thought that they are getting something for nothing," he said.

ADMITS STATEMENT

He said a full investigation of how overall hospital costs were to be met was necessary.

Since the 1958 grant, cases being a lot of people were going to hospital who would just as well be treated at less expensive institutions such as rest homes, nursing homes, he said.

Dr. Scott admitted that many persons now going into hospital were ambulatory patients. He pointed out, however, that many of these were getting active treatment which could not be provided in convalescent hospitals.

Also many patients were sent to hospital because they had no where else to go, or possibly had no one to look after them at home.

Warden Hamilton assured the hospital delegation that their grant request would be given every consideration on the part of council.

"With the number of grant requests we are receiving I don't know how we are going to meet up with them all, but your request will be given every consideration," he assured.

Eric K. Thompson, 18, of Trenton, today was sentenced to ten days in jail when he pleaded guilty in county magistrate's court to a charge of driving while intoxicated.

OPP constable Gordon Oliver testified that a car Thompson was driving on the night of April 22 had been involved in a minor head-on type of accident in Middleport Park shortly before it crossed a ditch and struck a clothes line pole at 53 Rivers Drive. Magistrate T. Y. Wills imposed the sentence of three days more than the minimum and commented that Thompson was "very fortunate" that the sentence was dated back to April 22.

County Assessment Shows Big Increase Over Last Year

Despite a reduction of $85,000 in assessment in the village of Deloro caused by the closing of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company, there was an increase of three-quarters of a million dollars in county assessment in 1961.

This was shown in the report of county assessor Cecil Geen, presented at the April session of county council.

The actual assessment on which the 1961 equalization will be based was $29,982,224. This was given as $29,982,224. The suggested equalization figure for 1961 of 29,982,300 was adopted by council.

Mr. Geen said the increase for 1960 over 1959 was $785,578. All municipalities with the exception of Deloro had higher assessments last year.

Mr. Geen said that enabling legislation set the adoption of county-wide assessing done by a committee of commissioners and four or five members have been passed by the Ontario Legislature.

MUST BE CONSENT

This, in effect, would do away with the municipal assessors.

Before the system is put into effect however there must be unanimous consent from all municipalities.

Mr. Geen said that 17 counties and county assessors had asked for the change.

There was a considerable discussion on the merits of the county wide assessment system with the majority of members apparently opposed to such a move.

"What's the matter with our present assessors?" asked Reeve John Horsepool of Faraday township.

Mr. Geen, as well as Reeve Reg. Spencer of Tweed and Reeve Carl Bateman of Stirling, felt the move would mean more uniformity of assessment.

Others, however felt the judgement of local assessors was just as good as that of possibly outside experts who were strangers to the area.

And several councillors also felt that pressure was better served when government was as close as possible to the people.

McNevin Inquest Will Be Held On May 25th

An inquest into the death of 10-year-old Tommy McNevin, who was found dead last month in a tree north of Belleville, will be held here May 25th.

At the same time the coroner's jury will hear evidence surrounding the death of Thomas Warren Williamson, 41, who, police said, died accidentally to death more than 24 hours after the McNevin boy disappeared.

Harry Deyman of Cobourg, has been appointed special Crown Attorney for the inquest. Coroner Dr. Louis Needham of Toronto will be in charge of the investigation.

The inquest will begin at 10 a.m. in the county court house. It is expected the inquiry will last at least a day.

Name of the presiding coroner has not been announced.

Six District Young People Are Graduates

Six Belleville district young people were included in the "Couriers" graduating class of the Eastern Pentecostal Bible College at the commencement exercises held in Massey Hall, in Toronto on Tuesday night.

Receiving their diplomas for successful completion of the three-year theological course were Thelma Shaw, Ronald Phillips, Jack Saunders and Boyne Wannemaker of Calvary Temple, Belleville; Phyllis Twigg of Bethel Temple, Brockville, and Connie Elliott of the Full Gospel Tabernacle, Frankford.

In his charge to the graduating class Principal Oswald Goer, the Reverend Dr. C. A. Ratz, stated that the tradition of the Couriers had been prompted by the vision of a crucified and risen Lord.

"You have heard His command, 'Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.' Couriers, your message is the greatest ever uttered by mortal tongue, the news of salvation to lost humanity. You are envoys of the highest rank commissioned, to spread redemption's story. The rugged steps of adversity shall not impede your progress. Go forward with courage and faith undaunted till the crowning day when your crown of rejoicing shall be the trophies of His grace to be placed as sheaves

Ottawa Man Given 3 Years On Fraud Counts

Georges Hardy, 44, of Ottawa today was sentenced in magistrate's court to three years in Kingston penitentiary on conviction on two counts of uttering worthless cheques and eight charges of fraud.

Hardy pleaded guilty to all ten charges before Magistrate T. Y. Wills a week ago and was remanded in custody until today for sentencing.

In passing sentence, Magistrate Wills said Hardy had been "most callous and casual about the whole thing" and that the offences were "all regular, planned fraud".

Magistrate Wills sentenced him to three years in penitentiary on the first charge of uttering and to three years concurrent on the second charge of uttering in addition to one year concurrent on each of the eight fraud counts.

Hardy's police became suspicious of Hardy when he was a patient in Belleville General Hospital March 24.

Subsequent investigations led to the rounding up of 10 charges against Hardy by police departments in Belleville, Trenton, Smith Falls and Ottawa.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP)—The U.S. dollar was at a discount of 1⅛ per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Montreal reported near noon today. Wednesday the noon rate was 96 25-32.

Remanded Week On Theft Charge

Leroy Claus, 37, of Deseronto, was remanded one week in custody to see if "his memory comes back" when he pleaded guilty in county magistrate's court today to a charge of theft.

OPP Constable Ken Williamson testified that Claus stole less than $50 in cash, from an acquaintance he was visiting last Sunday in Tyendinaga Township.

Const. Williamson said the money had not been found nor that he suspected it had been hidden.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills, asking Claus if he knew where the money was, said, "It just floated away, eh?"

"It must have," replied Claus, adding that he didn't remember what he'd done with it.

Const. Williamson said liquor was involved in the case.

Students to See Plowing Match At No Expense

Public school children in grades 7 and 8 and high school students in the Belleville and Hastings county area will be guests at the big International Plowing Match to be held north of Belleville next October.

Dr. J. Russell Scott, chairman of the 1961 International Plowing Match committee, told county council today that while that high school students would be admitted free to the match if they attended as an organized group, while public school pupils would be free at any time.

He said arrangements were being made to transport students by bus to the match.

"It will be their only opportunity of seeing the International Plowing match in the immediate future," he said.

Dr. Scott said plans for the match are coming along well with the grounds layout already laid out. He said he said a four-street plan had been completed for the area the three which has been customary at previous matches.

An attendance of well over 100,000 is expected for the match and Dr. Scott said the field was still wide open for caterers to help feed the big crowd.

"We will need all the caterers we can get," he said.

He indicated that church groups or Women's Institute groups interested in taking a booth may do so by applying to the International Plowing Match organization.

Considers Colonies a Burden

In the light of the current situation in Algeria, it is both interesting and informative to consider remarks made by General Charles de Gaulle at a news conference held ten days before the rebel generals seized power in Algeria.

It may well be that the final decision of the generals to revolt against the Republic resulted largely from views then expressed by President de Gaulle.

When de Gaulle first returned to power, in the 1958 crisis when it appeared that the Algeria-based units of the French Army might seize control from the French civilian government, it was obvious that the Frenchmen in Algeria, settlers and soldiers alike, expected him to espouse their cause and keep Algeria French. Though he rapidly turned his back on the extremists in Algeria, his first policies did, indeed, appear to be aimed at retaining Algeria as an integral part of Metropolitan France. But on April 11 he declared: "Since Brazzaville, I have not ceased to affirm that the populations dependent on us should have the right of self-determination." He went back to the early days of the Second Great War to support his assertion [illegible] and to the [illegible] dated states of Syria and Lebanon"—and continued by outlining other actions during his periods in power, in the immediate post-war period and again since resuming leadership in 195[illegible].

He [illegible] in this s[illegible] a forced [illegible] the best of bad [illegible] and it is fitting [illegible] to examine conditions, conditions which apply not only to France and her colonies but to all colonial powers.

"It must be recognized that in the great transformation which is taking place from one end of the universe to the other, the itching for independence of erstwhile dominated peoples and also the incitements proffered by all the demagogies of the world are not the only motivating forces. There is another which is not always very clearly perceived because of habits of mind, but which is nonetheless a very positive factor, one that is growing and tending to become the predominant one, especially in France I mean that the reason which once led certain civilized peoples to take under their direct control certain other peoples which were not (civilized)—these reasons are disappearing even from the minds of the ex-colonizers. It now seems to the most powerful nations that their future, their welfare and the potentialities of their world action depend on their own development and on the co-operation of the formerly colonized countries, much more than on domination imposed on allegiances passed."

De Gaulle contends that Algeria is a liability, not an asset, to France.

"In the world today and in the times in which we live, France has no interest whatsoever in maintaining under her jurisdiction and under her dependence an Algeria which would choose another destiny, and it would not be to France's interest to be responsible for the population of an Algeria which would have become the mistress of her own fate and would have nothing to offer in exchange for what she asks. The fact is, that, to say the least, Algeria costs us much more than she is worth to us. Whether in the matter of administrative expenses, economic investments, social welfare, cultural development or the many obligations with regard to the maintenance of law and order—what we furnished to her in effort, money and human ability has no counterpart that anywhere nearly approaches it. It must be in the same way considered that France's present responsibilities in Algeria constitute heavy military and diplomatic burdens for her. And that is why France would consider today with the greatest calm a solution whereby Algeria would cease to be a part of France—a solution which in former times might have seemed disastrous for us but which, I say it again, we consider with a perfectly calm mind.

"It would be quite different, of course, if the Algerian masses were bent on remaining part of the French people, for in that case it would be vain and any sacrifice to retain within the mother country a fraction of her children."

But for this privilege of remaining within the French Community, the Algerians would have to be prepared to give something in exchange, which holds true in "all the underdeveloped countries, beginning with those which yesterday were our dependencies and which today are our favored friends" and which are asking for aid and assistance. "This aid and this assistance—why should we extend them if it is not worth while, if there is no co-operation, if what we give finds no return? Yes, it is a matter of exchange, because of what is due to us, but also because of the dignity of those with whom we are dealing."

Letter To The Editor

Ontario Intelligencer Tops List of Papers For Public Service

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

The National and Ontario Boards of Directors of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society met in convention at the Royal York Hotel Recently.

The purpose of this communication is to convey a long overdue expression of the board's gratitude to The Ontario Intelligencer for outstanding public service in connection with the Society.

Mr. Enos David, Quinte Branch president, and I, attended the Annual Meeting held by the Ontario division of C.A.R.S. in conjunction with the convention.

During the convention we were present at a panel...meeting which [illegible] relations.

You can imagine how pleased we both were when in the MC's opening remarks he singled out The Ontario Intelligencer as being at the head of the class so far as public service was concerned. Although we were gathered in the luncheon hall of the Inn, having to do specifically with C.A.R.S., it was extremely interesting to be able to pass along the fact that The Ontario Intelligencer was considered from the point of view of all worthy causes.

You may be interested in learning that the panel was composed of Mr. Allan Platt, Stone of CHUM and other members were Mrs. Elizabeth Dingman, women's editor, Toronto Telegram; Mr. M. McKechnie, executive assistant to the [illegible]-chief, Toronto Telegram; Mr. Ralph Snelgrove, owner of radio station CKEY, Toronto; Mr. Robert Leitch, institutional promotions of the CBC; and Mr. 'Rusty' Fellows, display ad. vertising manager for the T. Eaton Store. Each meeting was specifically and particularly concerned with the problems of research, treatment and care of arthritic patients, it is noteworthy that The Ontario Intelligencer's contribution included all public media, not only C.A.R.S., in Ontario.

Each speaker in turn emphasized the tremendous contribution of the press, radio and television, and each pointed out that our simple "thank you" was all the media of communication could offer, yet so often never received.

The Belleville delegates to the C.A.R.S. convention wish to acknowledge publicly the above tribute and suggest that every cause locally can say "thank you" to The Ontario Intelligencer.

Jack Haig.

Editor's note: Thank you, Mr. Haig. The Quinte Branch of the C.A.R.S. is a constituent of the United Appeal of Belleville.

Scot Guilty Of Grave Sin

Winnipeg Free Press

In this country, except for the most serious of topers, there is nothing wrong with diluting whiskey with water, but in Scotland, where whiskey is spelled without the "e" it is considered a mortal sin. It is in this setting that we must understand the plight of the distillery employee who turned the wrong spigot and drained $28,000-worth of the purest unpolluted water in the valley of the River Bladnoch. The financial loss involved in so serious a mishap is bad enough—enough to make even a non-Scot's hair stand on end—but it is as nothing to the loss of face that the unfortunate perpetrator of the act must suffer for being the instrument of dilution on so large a scale.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

UNITY

A great deal has been written in recent years about the social gospel. This term indicates the application of the gospel of Christ to great social problems. This individual gospel, on the other hand, is an attempt by each individual seeking to enrich his own spiritual life and to achieve for it certain great spiritual ends.

Usually the social and individual gospel are thought of as being different. They are compared and contrasted. The truth is that they are both manifestations of a great central truth, here is but one gospel. God's provision for man's salvation is something that cannot be divided.

But this great reality has both the social and individual application. We apply the gospel to social, political, international problems with the confidence that such problems can be solved only through faith in God's willingness and power to forgive man's sins. We have seen despotisms topple, slaveries abolished from the earth, great evils exterminated because Christian men have had the faith to work to crush or cure these things. It is what we call the utilization of the social gospel. The individual gospel is the clutching to the heart of the individual believer of God's promises of forgiveness.

The gospel in its fullness is both an individual and a social matter. An attempt to make it one or the other is ruinous. There is one God, one gospel, one Saviour.

U.S. Violates Its Own Laws

The Christian Century

Many news reports indicate that Cuban counter-revolutionaries are being trained on U.S. soil, that U.S. bases supply arms for use in Cuba. If these reports can be accepted at face value, they reveal a startling attitude toward the enforcement of our own laws and treaties, which have the force of law. For example, Title 18, Section 956 of the U.S. Code Annotated (U.S.C.A.) says:

(a) Whoever, within the United States, enlists or engages himself, or hires or retains another to enlist or engage himself, or to go beyond the jurisdiction of the United States with intent to be enlisted or engaged in the service of any foreign prince, state, colony, district or people as a soldier or as a marine or seaman on board any vessel of war, letter of marque, or privateer, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

Title 18, Section 960 of the U.S.C.A. is also applicable:

Whoever, within the United States, knowingly begins or sets on foot or provides or prepares a means for or furnishes the money for, or takes part in, any military or naval expedition or enterprise to be carried on from thence against the territory or dominion of any foreign prince or state, or any colony, district or people with whom the United States is at peace, shall be fined not more than $3,000 or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

Our courts of the United States have upheld these laws in a number of cases. It is therefore a legally punishable offence to enlist in the armed services of a foreign power while living within the U.S., or to hire another to enlist, or to provide means for invasion of any country with which the U.S. is at peace.

Our agreement with other American states, with which we are associated in the Organization of American States, are also violated by actions now reported to be taking place. For example, in the Sixth International Conference of American States, Havana, 1928, we agreed that no American states shall prevent inhabitants of their territories, whether nationals or aliens, from participating in activities intended to initiate or promote civil strife in another contracting state, and that contracting states shall disarm refugees entering their territories and prohibit traffic in arms and munitions.

In 1940 this agreement was confirmed and strengthened by the foreign ministers of the Organization of American States. The U.S. Government is justified in resisting what seems to be taking place in Cuba; it is not justified in violating or permitting others to violate our own laws and treaty obligations. The attention of our president and the attorney-general is respectfully invited to this matter.

Strictly Personal

Sydney Says Reason Is Only An Investment

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices:

It is true that we should be guided by the rule of reason, but it is equally true that reason cannot teach us to reason — only emotional experiences can do that; for no man is more unreasonable than he who tries to live his life on the plane of logic.

Those who suspect the most are usually those who know the least; suspicion goes hand in hand with ignorance.

When we are young, we wish we had a crystal ball to enable us to look into the future; as we grow older, however, we recognize that foreknowledge of the future would be a cruelty gift, giving us not a moment's peace if we knew the date of our death or the times when catastrophes would overtake us.

Those who scorn the pomp of the world's business they know it are really suffering from premature envy rather than exercising genuine moral conduct. It is easy to deride what you do not, cannot, have; much harder to work for what you feel belongs to you.

When love make vows, they have already begun to doubt they love.

I have sympathy and admiration for those pacifists who march, demonstrate and picket for their belles; they may be wrong, but they are devoted to their convictions, and they are motivated by love rather than by hate, as are those who are only activated by some ideal greater than their own personal welfare. Now that we non-pacifists could demonstrate the same devotion in behalf of our passive beliefs.

Another turn to the classics to escape from his contemporaries; an educated person turns to the classics to throw some light upon his contemporaries; and in fact the chief difference between pedantry and genuine learning.

It would do be that a man was known by the company he keeps rather than by the company he works for.

"The fox condemns the trap, not himself." — William Blake; and likewise, a man does not blame his own greed, but curses the world. The more stringent tax laws, more newspaper columns have been created in this country since the end of World War II than at any other time in U.S. history.

Men of science often suggest that religion should refrain from thinking; but science can keep people from thinking too — most scientific advances have been dogmatically opposed by the presumptuous gentlemen of their own time, as men like Pasteur and Freud quickly found out.

Installment Plan Fines

Windsor Star

In this day when everyone is economy conscious, are governments missing a chance to save money by not allowing the payment of court fines by installments? One man holding a responsible job could see that millions of dollars can be saved by this system.

Dr. D. W. F. Coughlin, director of Ontario's probation services, pointed out that persons convicted of minor offences and who are given sentences of 90 days or less take the sentence because they cannot afford to pay the suggested fine, and costs, in one lump sum.

Since it costs the province $4 a day to keep a man in jail, expenditure soon mount up.

Magistrates have the right to give convicted persons time to pay a fine but it is difficult for many of them to raise the needed amount in the short stipulated period.

Actually, taxpayers would get two breaks under Mr. Coughlin's plan. First, there would be more money coming into the public coffers. Second, there would be less much money expended for the care of prisoners.

The suggestion merits at least some study by provincial authorities.

Job for Judge

Hamilton Spectator

To regard a lieutenant-governor today as a representative of the Queen in the same sense as a governor-general is almost mythical and certainly misleading. There is no royal prerogative or vice-regal prerogative in the appointment. His function of assenting to or reserving bills in Her Majesty's name could as well be undertaken by a member of the judiciary.

Epilepsy Is a Neurological And Not a Mental Disease

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I am an epileptic but do not have many seizures since I am taking medicine prescribed by my doctor. What I want to know is: First, should I give blood to the Red Cross? Second, do epileptics go crazy or lose their minds? — P. W."

You are still trying to rout out a lot of false and unkind stories about epilepsy, and the best way is just to keep telling the truth about it.

Of all neurological conditions, epilepsy is the commonest. It affects something over 1½ million people in Canada and the U.S., and about six per cent of the population will have some sort of convulsion sometime in their lives. Pretty common, isn't it?

What is epilepsy? It's an unduse sensitivity of certain brain cells, something like the trigger of a gun that is so finely set that it goes off at the slightest touch, instead of needing the normal trigger pull.

So with an epileptic a convulsion can be triggered by some moderate shock that wouldn't do it to anyone else — excitement, fear, fever, infection, a tap on the shoulder. Thats like that.

However, epilepsy isn't the terrible problem it used to be, because new medications and modern diagnostic methods are helping us understand and control the seizures or convulsions — the "anti-convulsant" drugs. From 80 to 90 per cent of seizures can be controlled, depressed or prevented.

Epilepsy isn't necessarily hereditary. There are different types; how many is conjectural. But it's important for the families, but there are many other causative factors: brain injury at birth or later; brain infections; defects in circulation in the brain.

In many cases no cause can be ascertained. Seizures beginning late in life are often due to hardening of arteries or other disorders that can affect the brain.

Ordinarily the Red Cross will not accept blood from anyone with a chronic physical disorder, such as diabetes, heart disease, epilepsy, high blood pressure, etc. This is a matter of policy and that's that. It doesn't mean or imply that there is anything wrong with such a person's blood.

As to mental derangement from epilepsy — no. It's a neurological, not a mental disease, and the mentality is not affected. While it is true that some epileptics are mental patients, so are lots of non-epileptics. The fact that you know of an epileptic who was, or became, a victim of the mental illness meant no more than the fact that some epileptics, if so happens, have been among the great geniuses of the world. Epilepsy should be confused with matters mental.

"Dear Dr. Molner: is there a proved methods of dissolving calculus by the natural way? A.M."

No. It would be dandy if it were true, but in this sort of trouble, the best answer to date are slow, persistent and sometimes simple treatments.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Last year I had a hysterectomy and someone told me that usually one tube at left is removed, person losing her mind. I found out both or mice were removed. Is there anything to say truth in this? — Mrs. V.R."

That rumor deserves you more misinformation than is often condemned into so small a space. In the first place, it is much more usual to remove both tubes. In the second place, removal has no effect one way or the other, on the mind. It's surprising how many other baloney gets passed around. There is no cause to worry.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

One of our big industrial corporations recently held a reception. The hosts were the numerous vice-presidents, executives and top brass. Numbers of rising young men in the organization spaced themselves amidst the guest to enable nobody was left unintroduced.

These rising young men were curiously alike. They were tall, grave, formal young men all dressed the same in dark grey business suits. They all had the same reserved, polite manner, eyes alert, watchful; a gentle inward smile on their faces. They had the air of men of infinity befitting absolute assurance. There must have been ten or fifteen of them in the ball room. And you could hardly tell them apart.

This is automation. Human automation. Giving dispassionate the virtues of automation as the new machines are concerned industry can be hardly be aware for dreaming dreams about the possibilities of selection and training in university courses in business management and regular weekly sales or organization meetings relentlessly scheduled and thoroughly drilled, you can convert that most troublesome bugbear of industry, the human element, into something automatic, there are limits to the degree of perfection in mass production to which mankind can aspire.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

PULL AT THE OARS

I am a great believer in prayer. Through prayer, sincerely uttered, we crystallize our desires and set in motion energy organization in order.

But I am reminded of the story of the boat race at one of the little handful of terrified lads who were drafted into a crew boat. The strongest suggested prayer. A wiser one suggested the oars the lightest one and prayer for the weakest one — in other words, the "little fellow."

God does answer prayer, in my opinion. But He answers it through our own efforts.

If we depend wholly upon crutches, the chances are that we shall need them forever.

Bear in mind that every pull at the oars sends you forward. And even while you are gaining headway you are making room for another pull, the momentum of your last effort is having its effect.

Life's best bet is to keep pulling at the oars.

If you mean a tired back, stubborn muscles, and a long day — but if you have any objective worth striving for, these will become minimized as time goes on.

I have yet the college oarsman pull to his last ounce of strength and then topple over in his seat — but I have seen his boat cross the line a winner!

Pull at the oars. Never mind the fellow behind you or in front of you. Just keep pulling.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

Major A, Classic Leagues Celebrate Western Style

What was a Hawaiian Paradise for the city's two major bowling leagues last year turned into Tombstone Territory last night.

The Major "A"'s spread and the classic ranch combined cowpokes and cowgals at a colorful dinner - presentation - dance mess in the K. of C. corral.

A tin-starsigned sheriff, "Miserable" Jim McKenzie, "Rawhide" Bill Rawson, Major "A" hopeland, "Fearless" Fraser, and their cowhand committee, staged a setting that was nothing short of a spectacle.

Gun-totin' waite - Stetsoned cowgals added a pretty splash of color to the sombrero'd Earps, Mastersons, Slaughters, outlaws, gamblers and other western whatnot.

A lone Indian, "Sitting Bull" Jack Biggerstaff, and his squaw "Laughing Water," stood out in the paleface posse.

The background was "western" perfect. There was the "Big Gulp Saloon," western saddles on saw-horses, Tucson, Texas, Arizona and other cowtown newspapers. Dinner and reception music was cowboy laments, the strum of guitars and songs of the west.

There was a "Chuckwagon dinner" of old-fashioned western beef stew, and all the trimmins, served by "Smokey" Pranko of the El Rancho Restaurant with western-garbed waitresses. Delicious!

A pretty "Rose of Texas," Miss Frosa Turcotte, as accomplished dancer, aided the "sheriff" and added a touch of western charm.

There was a "bad-man" floor show with "Slim" Les Lemon leading a camp-fire community sing. There was dancing to the music of the Starliners from Trenton.

The sheriff, Rawhide and Fearless, supervised the highlight of the evening, the presentation of trophies, awards and wampum.

Major "A" president Bill Rawson said his league had had a very successful year prior to presenting the league trophy to Hector Joe's, the seasonal champions. Individual members received engraved drinking mugs from the league and sport shirt gifts from the association. The team won the top "wampum" prize.

Captain Wally Bever accepted the honors on behalf of his teammates, Sam Mulholland, Les Rumleske, Leo LaBelle, Wally Lavergne and Jim Begley.

Women's Institutes Aid Museum Project

This summer, the Hastings County Historical Society plans to open a county historical museum in the old Registry Office building on Church Street in Belleville.

Plans for the museum are progressing favorably, thanks to the interest of many district individuals and organizations.

In particular, the Women's Institutes are playing a leading role. They are represented on the historical society's executive by Mrs. Ray Doak of Stirling and Mrs. John Ingelis of Melrose.

To date, 19 Women's Institutes in the county have appointed representatives to the membership of the county historical society and 13 of the institutes have made generous financial donations to help develop the museum. These donations range upwards to twenty-five dollars and are most appreciated by the historical museum committee.

Women's Institutes have played a leading role in historical research for many years through their Tweedsmuir histories and other similar activities and it is evident that they are wholeheartedly behind the plan to establish a county museum.

Napanee Comets Play Saturday

The Napanee Comets will open the defence of their OHA Intermediate "A" championship in Napanee this Saturday night against either the Port Colborne Sailors or the Ingersoll Marianes.

The Comets have won the "A" title three years in a row and have once again reached the finals during this season, although failing to have a grouping to play in during the regular season.

Ingersoll and Port Colborne are tied at three games each in their semi-finals at the present time and the deciding game of that series is slated for tonight.

Napanee ousted Barrie in the other half of the semi-finals.

Remaining dates in Napanee's final series will be available as soon as a winner is declared in the Port Colborne-Ingersoll series.

'BOUGHT 'OLIVE TREES'

LONDON (AP)—A painting by Sir Winston Churchill called Olive Trees was sold at auction here Wednesday for £20 ($1,400). "I was certainly surprised to get it for so much money," said the buyer, Mrs. Charles Oppenheimer, whose parents now live in the Riviera villa where Churchill painted the picture.

Hastings County Home Costs Lowered Without Achieving Same at Resident's Expense

In a time of constantly increasing prices, even holding the line costwise is an achievement, but when costs are reduced, even slightly, it is something to talk about.

And that is exactly what Hastings County councillors feel about the operation of the county home for the aged.

Yesterday Dolores Reeve Carl Whittemore, chairman of the county home committee, said the average cost per patient day at the home last year was $3.41, one cent per day less than in 1959.

In contrast to this the average cost for ten comparable homes in the province had been $3.63 with none except Hastings County home being below the $3 figure.

Councillors generally commended the county home superintendent Kenneth York for his good work with Sidney Deputy Reeve Gerald Irvine noting that the comparatively low cost at the Hastings home was difficult to understand, even by department of welfare officials.

But Reeve Whittemore said that good management by Mr. York, who had responsible administration costs to a minimum, was a big factor in the lower costs.

"We haven't got the red tape that many other homes have," he said, "and we take full advantage of all discounts."

"It is the continual looking out for the small things that counts."

Mr. York assured the low per patient day costs at the home were not achieved at the expense of the patients and everything possible was done for their comfort. Wages also were comparable to those in other centres.

The report showed a total of 206 residents in the home with 56 of these from the city of Belleville.

Expenditures at the home totaled $348,408 with revenues of $122,831, leaving a net cost of $58,460. This in turn was reduced by $15,894 by a provincial subsidy of $42,685.

LIGHT EVENING LUNCHES

One of the added comforts for home residents introduced last year was the serving of light evening lunches, Mr. Whittemore said.

During the year there was an average of 47 patients in the Home infirmary wing.

The Home industry home farm again showed a profit last year, although according to Mr. York this is slowly declining.

High School Activities

TRACTOR CLUB

On April 25, at the school, the last regular meeting of the B.C.I.V.S. Tractor Club was held.

The next meeting will be held on the farm of Mr. Donald Spencer, R.R. 1 Ballville, on Wednesday, May 17 commencing at 4.30 p.m. Mr. Clark explained how the distributor works and discussed the lubrication system of a tractor, saying, "oil is necessary in a tractor because it reduces friction, seals, cools and cleans. Oil never wears out it just becomes contaminated".

Crafts Club.

Paintings by 31 other adult members of the club are also being shown in addition to paintings by 40 children in the club. The youngest exhibitor is five-year old Andre Fry, who has painted an imaginary boat.

Mr. Airola, a member of the Canadian Society of Painters in Water Color and a Fellow of the International Institute of Arts and Letters, is also an art instructor at Trenton, Cobourg and Port Hope. His paintings hang in galleries in Europe, London, Ont. New York, and in many private collections in Canada, the U.S, and abroad.

Friends Hold 'Welcome Home' Shower

DESERONTO — Mrs. A. H. Kendall was hostess at a kitchen shower on Tuesday evening in honor of Mrs. A. J. Coles, who returned from England last week. Some 30 friends and neighbors of Mrs. Coles were among the guests who gathered to welcome her.

During the early part of the evening the group indulged in a number of entertaining games which proved amusing and interesting.

When presenting the gifts, Mrs. Kendall read a short poem dedicated to Mrs. Coles and Mr. and Mrs. Coles to this country.

Following the opening of the numerous and useful gifts, the hostess assisted by Mrs. M. Leah, Mrs. A. McVicker, Mrs. E. Bett and Mrs. J. Herrington served a bounteous and tasty lunch to the group.

As the shower was in the nature of a surprise, Mrs. Coles was quite astonished at the picture of good will from so many of her friends. She was quite at a loss for words to thank the group but managed to express her appreciation for their kind consideration.

Neighbors' Aid Holds Euchre Party

2ND THURLOW — Mrs. Cecil Keene, Mrs. Frank Tuesbrook, Mrs. Earl Keene were hostesses for a Neighbors' Aid euchre on Friday night at the Aid Hall. Seventeen tables were in play with prizes won as follows: ladies' 1st — Mrs. Barbara Allison; 2nd — Mrs. C. Clapp; consolation — Mrs. J. Thomson; men: Arnold Mitchell, Leroy Turner; consolation — Glen Stratton; lone hand — Mrs. J. Kells.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses and assistants. Collection amounted to about $25.

Chi Rho Plans County Home Visit

Christ Church Chi Rho fellowship members turned out in force for the May 19th meeting to start work on the group's new projects. Artistic cats were made, pinking shears and sponges snapped as used Christmas cards were converted into attractive bags for Thalidomide parcels. The fellowship will have these highly decorative bags on sale at their annual "Falling Leaves Dance", next fall on through to Christmas.

While the young ladies of the organization busied themselves on the conversion of the cards, the men gathered and joined material for song sheets to be used by the County Home for the Aged, early in May when the Chi Rho will present an evening's entertainment for the residents and officials of the home.

RECREATION ACTIVITIES

The evening's activities got under way with recreation starting at 7:30 with 10 pound bulgs for the Crozier "crushers", over the Bettrim "bouncers" in the team totals. In the individual scoring four players tied with 10 big bags: Joanne Cavalier, 21 points, Bill Crouter, 19 points, Evelyn Warwick 18 points and Norman Butcher shooting fourth spot with Ted Warwick and Herb Cavalier of the bouncers with 15 points each. As these players and latest jockey for top honors, the friendly rivalry continues to grow and competition becomes exceedingly keener.

A gala rally in the volleyball contests lasted for close to four minutes, as members of both squads hurried and bodies rolled in a successful effort to keep the ball in the air. However, the Bettrim ball lacked players to fill out their required complement and extend the usual invitation to interested parties to join in.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Following the recreation, president Ted Warwick, conducted a short business meeting. Among the items brought under discussion were the plans for the forthcoming membership drive and the Spring May visit of the fellowship to the County Home. On adjournment of business, Marg Eagle led on the piano for the singing of a Scripture prayer which Herb Cavalier read from Scripture.

The meeting concluded with refreshments brought and presented by Betty Gardiner, Kay Robertson and Evelyn Warwick.

Mr., Mrs. R.D. Adams Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary

Recently, a special event was held in the banquet room of the Belmont Restaurant, when Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Adams of 272 Albert St. were honored by their children, friends and her husband, Mr. Norman Hyland, of Kingston, and Garnet and his wife, Helen, of Montreal, with a banquet on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding.

This was a complete and thoughtful surprise, and pictured above is the honored couple. It was a sumptuous and enjoyable affair, with many guests and relatives being present from East Claire, Ont., Little Britain, Picton, Rossmore, Massassaga, Fort Stewart, Corryton and Montreal as well as Belleville. The beautiful floral table decorations and the corsages were supplied by Mr. and Mrs. John Pinkerton, Florist, Belleville, who are personal friends.

The bride of 50 years ago is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benson S. Sills, while the bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Adams. They were married at the home of the bride's parents by the Rev. Dr. George J. Bishop, of Bridge Street Church.

The three tiered wedding cake was beautifully decorated with yellow roses, lily of the valley and golden horse-shoes, while encircled about the base with white bells and scattered yellow roses. This was on a separate table in the centre on the room. The toast table was decorated with a bulk of gold roses and forsythia and crystal candelabra with tall white tapers decorated with gold and the figure "50".

For the banquet their son acted as toastmaster and after grace was asked by Mr. H. J. Brenton, his uncle of Corryville, he expressed his pleasure with the presence of so many relatives and friends, and then proposed the following toast to his parents:

"As this fiftieth anniversary dinner it gives me great pleasure to toast the bride of fifty years, our mother.

First with a smile, or a word, or a prayer.

First to help lighten a worry or care,

First to encourage a hope or a scheme,

First to help realize some childish dream,

First, last, and always, above all the rest

The best friend on earth, And the dearest of mothers.

"So here's to Mother, a compliment to Dad, because even with all she has to do, she's not have shown better taste. A tribute to womanhood and a goddess of the children. May she live long enough to forget what little friends we may be and may the love and appreciation of later years overshadow the sorrows we have caused her".

Good health and happiness!

"If they are half as proud of their achievement as we are of them, their pride nearly equals their virtues."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Adams replied, voicing their gratitude and pride in their family and in the presence and good wishes of so many of their relatives and friends, also that received from the son and children born to them, their daughter not grown, to four by the addition of a son-in-law and a daughter-in-law, both of whom they have grown to love and are kindness itself.

During the banquet, letters of congratulation were read from the Prime Minister, Mr. John Diefenbaker, and from Mr. Lee Grills, the Member at the Dominion Parliament for this riding. Also, Mr. Elmer Sandercock, the Member of the Provincial Parliament for this riding, presented personally, a framed certificate from the Provincial Secretary, Mr. John Yaremkoc along with his own congratulations.

At the conclusion of the banquet, many gifts were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Adams, who expressed their appreciation briefly.

In addition to the floral decorations presented by many others, as well as cards, were received at their home from friends and also from Trenton Masonic Lodge in which Order Mr. Adams is a past District Deputy Grand Master, and from the Belleville Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, in which they have been respectively Past Patron and Past Matron.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart K. Rosenberg

The following is a two poems that day spoke of wear. There were worried looks on their faces and deep pangs in their hearts. I strolled in the seaside park with this man with old man with age and looked at him.

He sipped at his pipe, stopped and pointed to a nearby object. It was a tree. He said "This tree — here is a sermon in God's language. Leafy branches, soaring limbs — but look at its roots. We have wisdom without deeds, minds without hearts. Noble thought without noble action is like a rootless tree — it cannot long endure. Life is too short to be little."

"We need big hearts for big deeds, even in little things". And looking towards the horizon, he uttered an unforgettable word: "Heaven above you is only as wide as the earth beneath you".

We trudged our way closer to the sea's edge. We saw a simple majestic sight. A steamship slowly, majestically at ease on troubled waters.

"There, my friend," my companion said, "you have yet another sermon, in the language of the sea. A prayer for peace among nations, between men, and in their minds, but they don't find it for they seek the wrong kind of peace.

"They seek for a world or a society without fear or conflict. They multiply problems because they run away from problems. But all of life implies conflict.

"You don't achieve peace by retreating from trouble — but only by resolving conflict."

Hope fathered in his patient eyes, "Look at that ship," he said, "outwardly it is a picture of peace. Do you know why that is so? Because deep in her hold the engines are cursing, motors are throbbing, resolving the conflict between ship and sea. Don't retreat to some never-never land where problems never grow. The world at ease is a world without peace".

Taking my hand, he lifted it soft voice in a prayer that I shall always remember.

"O God, in your infinite love is to make the best that is in me transform the worst around me. I pray Thee to know and peace is not far away. For in my heart — born of my passive ideals, my pious lip service, my conscience. I profess but do not exercise faith in Thee, in all men, in Thine image created.

"Keep me far from self-righteousness. May I never flee from trouble. May I never flee from trouble. May I never flee from problems. May I never hide myself — to higher self — to peace. Amen".

Causes of Population Explosion Discussed at Study Guild

"The Population Explosion" was the topic at the April meeting of the Women's Study Guild held on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Meades, 25 Hastings Drive.

A short business session under the chairmanship of Mrs. R. A. Fleming followed by the worship service led by Mrs. Jack Richardson on the theme, "The Miracle of Spring". An interpretative story of the Easter Lily, with Lilies and fishes as told by the Rev. A. J. William Myers, was read.

Mrs. Ralph Hall, with Mrs. G. H. Trill, in charge of the program, used as source materials a recent book, "The Population Explosion", by Richard M. Fagley, the executive secretary of the Commission of the Churches on International Affairs established by the World Council of Churches.

Discussing the cause and consequences of the population explosion it was pointed out that in past centuries famine, disease, and war counteracted the continual doubling of population which has been occurring at shorter and shorter intervals.

Conscience tells that improvements in health with a consequent tremendous drop in the death rate are right.

Of the present population is becoming less and less possible. New ways to food people must be found. Not only is there a way out and slowing down but population, anyhow.

In the under-developed areas of Asia, Africa and Latin America, the ratio is now, not several generations away, as in North America. The solution, neglected at government level, must to a large degree be left to the religious level.

A survey of religious doctrines on parenthood and family and the attitude of various religious groups showed varying methods, suitable in various countries. These were dealt with as non-Christian groups, as well as the three main branches of Christianity, Eastern Orthodoxy, Roman Catholicism and Protestantism.

OLD, NEW TESTAMENTS SUMMARIZED

The relevant teachings of the Old and New Testaments the writings of the early church fathers, and the work of the World Council of Churches and related organizations, were summarized briefly.

The problem posed by an uncontrolled birth rate in the over-populated areas of the world may have consequences as far-reaching as atomic explosions.

At the close of the meeting, light refreshments were served by hostesses of the evening, Mrs. Leslie Reid and Mrs. G. F. MacIlwee.

TYENDINAGA — The art of transforming the ordinary cotton bag used for packaging flour, feed, sugar and other products into a variety of clever, charming or original toys or fashionable clothes was revealed to members of the Mohawk Guild of Tyendinaga by Mrs. J. Harry Wakelin.

The meeting, held at the home of Mrs. John Marsala, was highlighted by the showing of colored slides of the toy and clothing entries in the recent National Cotton Bag Sewing contest.

"No longer are the modern bags referred to as "sad sacks". They come in fine materials and are sturdy, washable and easy to sew, even for beginners", said Mrs. Wakelin.

ITEMS FROM COTTON BAGS

The slides illustrated the possibilities of cotton bag sewing. The toys seemed to come straight from the package-stage and walk into the hearts of all viewers. Appealing pink elephant; party pooles; invisible dogs and the most stylish modern doll were rounds of contestants. The summer wardrobe replacements captured the attention of all as dungaree mother and daughter frock combination inspired by a cotton theme set by Mary Martin in "The Sound of Music"; featured full skirted jumpers and puffed sleeve peasant blouses. Other costumes were: a shopping outfit; patio dresses; summer dresses and many children's dresses and sleepwear.

The program, presented under the auspices of the National Cotton Council of America, reported that more than 100,000,000 dress print cotton bags sized from five to 100 pounds are available to housewives as a source of fabric for home sewing needs. The production of bags for packaging sugar, flour feed, fertilizer and other products requires more than a quarter of a billion linear yards or cotton each year. A standard 100 pound size contains one and one-third yard of fabric of material adequate to almost any dress pattern.

From three to four bags of this size a housewife can fashion attractive and inexpensive wearing apparel and can produce curtains, slipcovers and other decorative household accessories.

The smaller flour and sugar sacks are readily converted into children's clothing, aprons, toys, gifts, quilt tops, tea towels, place mats and other items.

UNRAVELLING CHAINSTITCH

Mrs. Wakelin also gave instructions for the unravelling of the chain stitch seams and removing the washout ink print on the bags.

A prize of a special set of patterns was given to the hostess and the attendance prize was won by Mrs. C. Marsala, secretary.

During the business meeting, conducted by Mrs. Clinton Marsala, it was reported that $20 had been realized from the raffling of a quilt. This money will be applied to the church re-decorating fund. The quilt top had been pieced by Mrs. Susan Clarke with the lining and batts supplied by Mrs. Elizabeth Marsala. All members assisted with the quilting.

The Guild also decided to replace the fence on the south side of All Saints church.

The meeting was concluded by the serving of dainty refreshments by the hostess after a benediction by the Rev. E. Wrightson, rector.

W.I. Appoints New Officers

MOUNTAIN VIEW — Last Tuesday evening Mrs. Klaus Werkhoven entertained the members of Mountain View Women's Institute. There were around 30 in attendance.

Everyone was pleased to greet Mrs. G. Lough, one of the members who hasn't been able to attend a meeting for the past six years, owing to illness.

Business was discussed and plans made concerning the District Annual to be held at Mountain View on June 8. As this was the annual meeting the secretary-treasurer's report was read and Mrs. J. THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Georgina C. — With Cliff getting in late each night, what am I to think?

Clifford C. — She has nothing to worry about yet, but it's an idea!

Georgina C. — We've been married seven years. My husband is an accountant in a large insurance office, and commutes to the business district from our suburban home every day.

It seems more than a coincidence that each time his firm expands and hires more secretaries, Cliff gets home later and later. Our two youngsters are only four and five years old and, for all they see of their dad, he might be on an African safari.

He's more likely on a safari for easy game! I have no spaces proof, but a wife sees little signs of two-timing — like puffy looks!

Clifford C. — My wife can twist anything into a "guilty look" and trouble — anything from rings under my eyes to a shaving nick under my chin!

Instead of letting her imagination run riot, why doesn't she call in a sitter some day and ride in to see what goes on in our organization? Everything's high-pressure and strictly business. Our secretaries are at electronic computers, not on laps!

Her suspicions give me a pain. An office romance, though, may not be a bad idea. There's no romance for me at home these days, what with her nagging complaining, and berating.

In the office there's peace and quiet. And the talk makes sense.

The Council — If Georgina wants to see more of her husband, she has her tip-off right out of headquarters: "In the office there's peace and quiet." He means anything's "peace" — clanging presses, clacking typewriters, clinking cocktail jars — compared to the racket of her nagging.

Admittedly, she has no specific proof that Clifford stays late with his secretary. That "explanation" he is merely postponing the painful greeting awaiting him at home. Georgina would be wise to try an about face, confront her teammate in fight or non-acquiatory tone, and offer Clifford enough "peace and quiet" to do some of his overtime work at home.

Or else, she might take up his suggestion to meet him in town one day when his extra chores require the use of his office records and machines, and combine a shopping spree.

Evidently there's still time to save this marriage from the havoc of jealousy. Rather than being jealous of the secretaries, Georgina should, as Dr. Paul Popence of the American Institute of Family Relations advises, "be jealous of the marriage, and set her mind on enriching and beautifying it."

A recent investigation into office romances reveals that a wife like Georgina can push a man plumb into one if she consistently make his home a centre of stress. Of course, it takes a short-sighted and immature man, too, to allow himself to be drawn into a home wrecking affair by a career girl on-the-prowl. Both the C.'s must dredge up the old flames of feeling that held them mainly each other in the first place, and take it from there again; she, with more trust; he, with more companionship.

Incidentally, it may reassure Georgina to know that the most frequently discussed topic in offices, aside from business matters, is "the wife and kids."

Easy Wear

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

The easy-to-wear dress that travels well, that suits many occasions and that can be dressed up or down with a change of accessories, is at its best just now.

Typical of this sartorial treasure is this two-piecer of wool knit, which comes in a wide range of colors, one of the nicest being bright red. Smart too, in home shots for resort or cruise use.

The top, while not fitted, has a slight shape and notches at the side of the hem.

The skirt has clustered pleats, alternating box with small knife pleats.

Cabbage Roll Dinner For Guests

By Mary Moore

Bruce has been after Eleanor for months to make cabbage rolls.

Their close friends, the Harry Howells of New York Rangers fame, were over there one night and Harry said "I'm hungry for some cabbage rolls". That settled it. Eleanor invited them for dinner and decided to bake some according to her German mother's recipe.

They were a resounding success and two of the cabbage rolls, which Eleanor saved for me to taste, are before me now.

Since we are on an economical campaign and since I often receive requests for this, I decided the time was ideal to give you the recipe for this wholesome dish.

ELEANOR'S MOTHER'S CABBAGE ROLLS (serves 8 generously)

As close as we can figure the ingredients for these cost $3.40 which amounts to 80c per serving.

1 very large head cabbage (about 3½ lbs.), 1 pound ground beef (hamburg), 1-2 pound ground veal, 1-2 pound ground pork, 2 eggs, 3-4 cup raw quick-cooking rice, 1 tea-spoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon paprika, 2 tablespoons parsley flakes, 1-2 cup finely minced onion, 2 1-2 cups tomato juice (1 48-oz. tin) plus 1 28-oz. tin, 1 finely chopped garlic clove.

NOTE:

At some meat counters you can buy what is called combination meat-loaf mixture. If you would prefer to buy three pounds of this instead of the ratio of beef, veal and pork Eleanor used, it would be fine.

Remove the hard core from the cabbage. Turn the cabbage upside down on your board and with fairest and let water run through the leaves to help separate them. Do not discard the stem outside leaves. Carefully remove the leaves and trim off thick part of centre rib. Four boiling water over them and decided to bake some according to her German mother's recipe. Drain well. Mix well all remaining ingredients except tomato juice and garlic. Spoon about 3 or 4 tablespoons of the meat mixture about 3" from base of leaf. Start rolling from base, then fold in side edges of cabbage and continue rolling to enclose stuffing securely. Line bottom of heavy kettle or preserving kettle with a few of the dark green outer leaves you have withheld for this purpose. Place cabbage rolls, seam side down, in kettle, after all have been filled and rolled, piling them in neat layers. Pour over tomato juice and sprinkle chopped garlic over top. Cover and simmer. How long the time of cooking varies according to the cook. The longer they simmer the better they are. They will be cooked in 2 hours, but Eleanor simmered hers for 3 hours. So use your own judgment and experience.

These should be served with French fried potatoes or Ukrainian deep fried potato balls. Eleanor added a tossed green salad, rye bread, dill pickles. Dessert was Dutch apple pie and cheese. A memorable dinner.

Invalid Seeks Advice

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—Through a bad automobile accident I am now confined to a wheel chair for life. I have had physiotherapy and have got back considerable strength in my hands, but my legs will always be weak.

Since I am otherwise in good health my doctor says he is through with me. Suggests that I get something to do. But what can a person do in a wheel chair?—INJURED FOR LIFE.

DEAR INJURED FOR LIFE:— Want me to name a few things I have known wheel chair workers to do? Radio commenting, bookkeeping, clerking in a store, small assembly work, watch making, stenography, teaching, housekeeping.

Whether or not you are on the shelf, or a going concern depends not so much on your handicap as your desire to get on with life. Rehabilitation is a wonderful new kind of treatment which can point the way for you and help you get going.

Get your doctor to refer you to the rehabilitation service in your own hospital or to the Frontenac and District Rehabilition Centre, 169 Union Street, Kingston, for assessment of your capacities and interests. The National Employment Service in Belleville will work with the centre in locating the right occupation for you.

DEAR DORIS:—I came from across the continent to study nursing in an Ontario hospital. Now I am engaged to marry a doctor who is doing graduate work on a small salary.

My father is dead and I have few older friends in the east. We have asked a prominent physician, who taught us bother, to be the one to give me away. He will, but we would like to have an evening with him socially before the wedding. Is it his move to suggest this, or could we invite him to come for an evening to my apartment, which I share with two other girls?—MARGIE.

DEAR MARGIE.—The older man should make the first move. However, if it does not occur to him, it is a good idea to arrange an informal visit before the big day.

Wait and see if he does not think of something. If not, perhaps you and your fiance could approach him together and invite him to drop in on you for a cup of coffee.

DEAR DORIS:—My husband says it is my job to boss the children.

He won't have any part in it when I try to make them mind. The result is they smuce me back and I get very poor behavior. I can't do it all myself—HOPELESS.

DEAR HOPELESS—They are his children too. When he got married and undertook to have a family he took a 50-50 share in raising happy, well-adjusted individuals. This means sharing discipline as well as love and companionship.

But why does he give you the whole job? Did you complain about it when he did try to exert authority or shut him out in some way? Sometimes mothers get pretty possessive about this job of handling Junior, and only cry for help when their tactics bring the wrong results. So be sure you are sharing, too.

Pamphlets on "Obedience" and "Discipline" will help you—and your husband—with these problem. They are available from your local or provincial health department or by applying to the Information Services Division, Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa.

(Doris Clark will be glad to help you with your problems. Write to her care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

West Hastings District W.I. Celebrates 60th Anniversary

By MRS. PERCY MacMULLEN

Approximately 180 ladies gathered at Wallbridge Orange Hall on April 20th to celebrate the 60th anniversary of West Hastings District Women's Institute.

The district banner with the names of the seven branches was placed on the wall as a background for the head table which was centred with the anniversary cake, lettered in yellow and blue, with matching candles and edged in a ruffle of tulle. The cake was flanked with crystal candelabra with yellow tapers and bud vases of blue cornflowers. The three long tables were centred with jar yellow and white tulips and golden daffodils. The tables were laden with an appetizing array of food furnished by those in attendance and the banquet was most delicious.

Twenty-seven ladies were honored by the presentation of corsages of yellow roses with blue and silver ribbon. One past president was unable to be present but was to receive her corsage.

The Institute grace was sung previous to the meal and two duets from each branch assisted with the serving.

The president, Mrs. E. B. Phillips, welcomed the large group and said that there were 193 members in the West Hastings District, of which 16 are life members.

CAKE - CUTTING CEREMONY

The cake-cutting ceremony followed, when four past presidents, under the direction of Mrs. Roy Bush, lit the candles and each spoke briefly. The others were: Mrs. Louis Rodgers, Mrs. Harry Coulter and Mrs. Sam Nicholson. This closed with the thought and hope that others would carry on this wonderful organization through may future years of service. Four more past presidents, Mrs. W. C. West, Mrs. Casey Ketcheson, Mrs. Ken Faul and Mrs. E. S. Finkle, had the honor of extinguishing the glow when all the members sang "Happy Birthday." Mrs. Sam Lloyd, first president and a charter member, placed the silver candle tied with yellow streamers, in the cake. Two past secretaries, Mrs. Harold Phillips and Mrs. Perry Bronson, cut the cake, which was then served.

GUESTS AT HEAD TABLE

Mrs. Robert Burkitt was pianist and at 8.30 p.m. a toast to the Queen was followed by the National Anthem. The first branch Institute was organized at Wallbridge, hence the honour in being hostess for this anniversary. The president, Mrs. Phillips, did a good to be a member of this branch and introduced the head table as follow: Miss Julie Lane, home economist; Mrs. Roscoe Robson, area chairman; Mrs. L. G. Lymburner, F.W.I.O. president; Mrs. Sherman Foster, board director; Mrs. Harry Coulter, secretary - treasurer; Mrs. Sam Lloyd, first president; Mrs. Frank Treverton, honored guest and charter member, and Mrs. Mary Vandervoort, first Provincial Board director.

HISTORY GIVEN

Mrs. Clarence Holmes gave the history of the district for the past 60 years. She said that the daughters and friends of those women who organized West Hastings District in 1901 have gathered at Wallbridge Hall to honor those who have given leadership for peace and independence. She thought the group was highly honored to have the first district president, Mrs. Sam Lloyd, in attendance. The first secretary-treasurer, Miss Stafford, now Mrs. Young, is living in Toronto and was unable to attend on this auspicious occasion.

A list of all the various branches that were organized and re-arranged was read, but the records are not authentic until 1921 and some are not available. The seven branches functioning at the present time are Wallbridge Institute was organized in 1901; Chatterton-in 1907; Silver Valley in 1910; Uniondale in 1920; Bay of Quinte in 1921; and Stirling in 1927, whereby were transferred from North Hastings; Pinegrove in 1940; and Sidney Junctors were organized in 1925 but disbanded in 1957. TO FLY HELICOPTER — Flying instructor Marion Orr hopes to become Canada's first woman helicopter pilot. Miss Orr, who has logged more than 12,000 hours flying conventional aircraft of all kinds, sits at the controls of a recently helicopter as she prepares for a practice flight. (CP Photo).

Woman Flying Instructor Trying Hand at 'Copters

TORONTO (CP) — After 12,000 hours of piloting airplanes, Marion Orr was ready to try something new. So she is trying her hand at helicopters.

Miss Orr, one of Toronto's best - known flying instructors, has been at the controls of everything from tiny trainers to four-engined bombers. But the whirybird impressed her so much when she was first taken up in it that she promptly signed up for lessons.

Now she completes the 25 hours she needs for an instructor's rating, she will add the helicopter to the list of aircraft she's prepared to teach people to fly.

Miss Orr believes women are particularly suited to helicopter flying.

The helicopter requires a more delicate touch on the controls and only slight movement to make corrections," she said. "That should give women an advantage."

When Miss Orr completes her course, she will be one of six or seven women in North America qualified as instructors. About 40 women have the "wings" to their credit as fledged helicopter pilot.

"What's the point of a fledged helicopter pilot.

"They are so convenient," she said. "Anyone can learn to shoot anywhere, yet once in the air they can travel at almost 100 miles an hour."

MODERN MANNERS

TEEN-AGER, BE YOURSELF

I have received a rather pathetic letter from a sixteen-year-old girl. Her unhappiness is caused by a fault common not only to teenagers, but also to adults. She is afraid to be herself. The fault Putting on an act, trying to make yourself what you aren't, in an attempt to please others is common. When this attitude is taken, the only person being fooled is you! Suppose you teenagers ask yourself the following questions:

Do you overdo in your efforts to appear "gay"? Do you become boisterous and noisy in your attempts to join in with the gang? It's one thing to be naturally vivacious, and quite another to make an artificial attempt at it. Even the natural approach should be accompanied by some dignity. You are no longer a child.

Do you show a sincere interest in other people? Not only those your own age, but older folks, too? Or do you try to impress others with your great wisdom? Are you overbearing in your attempts to talk only about things of interest to you? Learn the lesson now that the best conversationalist is a good listener Showing a sincere interest in what others are saying, making a comment here and there when called for, will make friends for you faster than most anything else.

Do you flaunt the latest fashions of your favorite movie star, and at the same time try to be an individual? You will only succeed in making yourself look ridiculous. Why not just be your natural self? Dress properly for school and other dates. Don't go for two mixed up. Make simplicity the keynote of your wardrobe and you can't go wrong.

It all boils down to which is the greater fault, to be too sensitive to everything you hear, or just letting nature take its course and acting naturally. The latter course is the one to take. You can't cultivate an attractive personality merely by copying "movie queens habits" that will never let you down.

For example: Showing consideration for others, and doing the so-called "little" unnoticed things that mean so much in your daily contacts is bound to result in your becoming a well liked, popular member of any group (young or old) that you happen to be with. If you don't believe this, try it and see!

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Question — I am to be married next month, and, for sentimental reasons, I wish to carry a prayer book instead of a bouquet. Is there a copy of a formal wedding gown. My friends say it must carry a bouquet. Are they right? — Miss H. V. A., Toledo, Ohio.

Ans. It is perfectly proper that you carry the prayer book. Usually the book is covered in white satin and a small spray of lilies of the valley is suspended from it by white satin ribbon.

Girl of 23 Is Costume Designer for Men's Suits

MONTREAL (CP) — Most women have their hands full keeping one man well - dressed, but 23 - year - old Phillips (Pip) Wingfield has tailored a hundred or so.

As a costume designer and coordinator for the National Film Board, she is working on a series of Canadian history films, half of them for TV.

The films, 12 in all, cover the pre-Confederation period from 1535 to 1867. One of them called for 130 costumes.

"We should have had 300," said the young Briton, "but no costume house could fill the order so we did a shuffle—changing jackets and vests about four times."

Although most of the costumes were for male characters, Phillippa has had occasion to design women's gowns. She checks their authenticity with costume books, old portraits and magazines.

She feels fashion history reveals some interesting facts.

Mid-century skirts always go full, and the more formal in a period now, she said. In periods of war and revolution, however, women tend to ape the male fashion.

"I am fascinated by fashion, but not in a terribly personal way," admitted Phillips, who likes to wear slacks and a sweater.

After serving as a wardrobe apprentice at the Central School of Speech and Drama in London, where she also studied stage management, she did costume design for repertory companies and ballet theatre.

O.F.N. Enjoys Educational Bird Talk

At their regular monthly meeting held at the Entomology Building, the Quinte Field Naturalists had the pleasure of hearing Mrs. C. D. Quilliam of Kingston, as guest speaker.

Mrs. Quilliam, an ardent naturalist, columnist and editor of the Kingston Whig Chit Bulletin, "The Bluebill", has many other interests along this line. Her topic for the evening, "Amateur Bird Watching - Its Place in Ornithology, was most interesting.

She raised the question, "Why should amateurs keep accurate records?" These records she explained can be used in the present and in the future. They can be compiled into reports which can be sent to a central headquarters. "The Audubon Society", to be correlated with reports from all over North America.

USEFUL INFORMATION

Trends in migration, extension of range, extension of nesting range, effects of weather conditions, and other phenomena will show a pattern which can be ascertained, and the information used by the Professional Ornithologists, who would be unable to cover all these areas personally.

Mrs. Quilliam explained that these records should be extensive on all birds common or rare and should be kept all year long as to species, date of arrival and departure; the numbers, seen and weather conditions.

Her most prominent example was the effect of "Hurricane Donna" on birds. A great influx of birds of the West Indies was noted and reported as far north as the New England States due to the active interest of amateurs along the Atlantic Coast.

"These reports", she said, "are published in six copies annually of "Audubon Field Notes". Mrs. Quilliam asked the co-operation of the Quinte Field Naturalists in sending reports of this area.

Miss Joy Nichols thanked Mrs. Quilliam and mentioned how much more interest her talk had created.

During the social visit and refreshments, many members had the pleasure of meeting and talking with Mrs. Quilliam, personally.

Executives Run Elevators, Do Other Chores as Service At Royal York Nears Normal

TORONTO (CP)—Executives were running elevators and doing other chores, Guests were fetching their own linen, making beds, toting baggage, running up the stairs and carrying out the empties.

And jackets watched by police were patrolling outside the palatial Royal York Hotel, $30,000,000 apple of the CPR's eye, host to royalty and largest hotel in the Commonwealth.

Strange days have come upon the elegant and dignified hostelry since 1,200 of the staff went on strike Monday afternoon; leaving 180 employees to cater to the needs, wants and whims that overtake some 2,000 guests daily.

But by late Tuesday things were looking up in hotel service as the railway management rushed in reinforcements from Canada-wide points and marshalled help here from old Canadian Pacific hotels in Montreal and Toronto's many unemployed.

A hotel spokesman predicted the hotel's service would be "normal" will be 85 per cent of normal Wednesday with 300 people at work. He described this as enough to run the hotel properly.

Meanwhile in Lusaka in Zambia, secretary - business agent here for the Canadian Labor Congress' Union (CLC), predicted: "Soon guests will be leaving by the dozen."

NOT MANY CANCELLED

The hotel said there have been no cancellations so far and not as many as expected. Practically all of Monday's business at the York's 1,400 were filled, he said.

A few celebrities have been lost. Out of the hotel, which has housed such notables as King George-VI, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip and the Queen Mother, Winston Churchill, Hardwicks and Sir Laurence Olivier. The distinguished British actors are playing separate engagements here.

Ontario Ontario cabinet ministers elected to stay, But Saskatchewan Premier Premier C. Douglas, expected to become leader of a new political party Saturday, refused to cross the picket line, saying he'd be strictly limited. Beds and rooms are made up for new guests when they are on their own. Room service is off altogether as yet, but a snack bounder-Bellhop service will be restored to help 24 available.

"But it's not Royal York service—it's one union man connected.

Meanwhile, with every door on the hotel locked, the only working garage picketed, all of the hotel's old heads and new recruits—are getting in the front of the York without using any of the doors.

Luckily for the hotel, a tunnel crosses the street to Union Station, served jointly by the CPR and CNR and not subject to picket lines.

The powerful Teamsters' union, the short delliveries of some necessities to the hotel, but apparently the Royal York itself has had its supply well having stocked up before the strike deadline.

Minister Goes To Hong Kong To Sell Wheat

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton left for Hong Kong Wednesday to discuss another grain sale to Red China, prompting speculation it may be much larger than the $60,000,000 recently signed in February.

Negotiations have been going on in Hong Kong for several weeks with chairman W. C. McMenamin of the Canadian wheat board heading the Canadian team.

The Hamilton trip, announced in the Commons by Prime Minister Diefenbaker in response to a question, was taken as evidence that negotiations are at the point where ministerial decision is required.

Sale of about 200 bushels of wheat and 12,000,000 bushels of barley, valued at $60,000,000 by Mr. Hamilton, followed previous purchases in Australia to help ease serious crop reverses in China.

There have been varying reports on just how much might be involved this time. The February sale was a cash deal with supplies moving out of west coast ports at a volume combined with shipments to Japan and Russia — expected to keep terminals humming until August.

MAY NEED CREDIT

It is understood that Mr. Hamilton's trip could be required to smooth over credit provisions for Red China, spread over two or three years.

The minister also took a hand in the last credit sale, involving $11,000,000 bushels to Czechoslovakia earlier this year. So far this year, Russia has purchased 7,400,000 bushels.

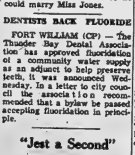
The United Kingdom remains the largest and steadiest customer, taking around 100,000,000 bushels a year in wheat and flour equivalent while Japan has developed into the second-best client with purchases in excess of 40,000,000 bushels a year.

Mr. Diefenbaker Wednesday declined to say anything beyond the fact that Mr. Hamilton was on his way and refused to be drawn on a Winnipeg report that more than 90,000,000 bushels of grain are involved in the Red China talks.

Given 9 Months For Extortion

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Lyle Ivan Ruston of Windsor was sentenced Wednesday to nine months in reformatory for extortion. He had also attended to finance his divorce.

His accomplice, Shirley Jones, 24, of Windsor received a suspended sentence and was placed on a year's probation. Both had pleaded guilty.



The extortion resulted from an incident between Miss Jones and the complainant, identified only as Mr. X, a large Windsor manufacturing firm.

Long-distance telephone calls from Ruston and Miss Jones urged Mr. F to pay 500 dollars or they would produce an alleged rape of Miss Jones.

In passing sentence Magistrate Johnston said he believed neither accused had a police record and they were seeking sufficient money with which to finance Ruston's divorce so he could marry Miss Jones.

DENTISTS BACK FLUORIDE

FORT WILLIAM (CP) — The Thunder Bay Dental Association has approved fluoridation of a community water supply as an adjunct to help preserve teeth, it was announced Wednesday. In a letter to city council the association recommended that a by-law be passed accepting fluoridation in principle.

Municipalities' Titles Should Indicate Size

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's select committee on municipal law Wednesday discussed whether the titles of municipalities should be changed to correspond to populations.

Vernon Singer, Liberal MPP for York Centre, said it was ridiculous that three of Ontario's six largest municipalities—North York, Etobicoke and Scarborough, all in Metropolitan Toronto—should still be called townships.

Lorne Cumming, deputy minister of municipal affairs, said an elaborate grant system had been built up, based on the premise that cities did not require so much financial aid as persons daily, and many municipalities would not want to change their status.

"There's something wrong with the municipal grant system when a city wants cities rather than need," said Mr. Singer.

He suggested more attention be paid to growth and assessment in the organization of municipal grants.

Other members of the committee agreed that assessors should be paid a better salary and a uniform system of training would be available to do a better job.

Mr. Cumming said assessors were doing the best they could, but there was room for training in the field.

He said there had been "frank acknowledgement" that municipal government had improved in Ontario. Many qualified men began becoming auditors. An association, like a lawyer's or a key municipal official.

Rhea Belisle, Progressive Conservative MPP for Nickel Belt, told how he resigned as solicitor to a northern municipality to serve as assessor.

"I was the clerk treasurer, tax collector, assessor and even the dog catcher—all for $1,000 a year," he said.

Mr. Cumming suggested that several municipalities, with the assistance of the part-time assessor, might get together and share one qualified assessor at a good salary to work for the common good.

Professor Ian Scott, consultant to municipal municipal statutes and related activities, said a system of orientation and consolidation, approved a draft letter to be sent to the 1,075 municipal councils asking for submissions.

In particular, his investigation, said Mr. Cumming, the committee might want to look at the municipal boards and others to determine whether the number of vacancies should be increased, decreased or left the same.

As for ways to reduce the number of private municipal bills—petitions asking legislation affecting a particular person, corporation or community — Mr. Cumming said it would be a difficult, if not impossible, job.

G.E. Company Elects Gordiner As President

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Robert A. Gordiner was elected president of the General Electric Company Wednesday by directors and his administrative officers won over whelming approval from stockholders attending the company's annual meeting.

Gordiner succeeds retired president by the company's board of directors at a meeting following a record, 65½ hour stock brokers' session retired in February because of ill health.

At the stock owners' meeting last week, Ralph J. Cordiner, manufacturer of electric goods, Cordiner's resignation demand that he resign as chairman.

A resolution of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers headed by James B. Carey was defeated 89,856,355 votes to 1,404,850. It called for an independent investigation of charges of price fixing other directors "reasonably" should have been expected to know about anti-trust offences before the U.S. government indicted the company last year.

Despite the fireworks, management was assured of victory because it held proxies representing the majority of the 88,000,000 voting shares held by nearly 450,000 stock owners.

Carey, at the meeting as a trustee of the IUE pension fund which holds 25 GE shares, said he sought only to head off future conspiracies, and to gain union advantages, as alleged by Cordiner.

Rebels Hurl a Challenge At Castro After Surviving Bloody Repulse of Invasion

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — "We're going back. And the sooner, the better."

That was the challenge hurled today at Fidel Castro by two rugged, sun-tanned Cubans who fled last in surprise from the republic of their invasion force lacerated lessons that will help them "next-time."

The men, 35 and 42, smiled when asked if they and brother rebels were demobilized.

"We're only on leave," one, who said, "in a few days we're going back to training camp," replied.

"Fidel would like to know, Guatemala? Nicaragua? He's been close in his guesses so far. The men he captured didn't know where they trained for the invasion until April 17. They were rallied by night and were rerouted to the training area."

His companion said he was an Oriente rancher. Both declined to tell their names because of danger to relatives still living under the Castro government.

The older man's boots were the only martial note in a cozy Miami home where they sat with their families and described the rebels' pull-out April 19 six days after and attack by Castro troops.

"I wore those boots on Playa Giron (Giron beach on the southern Cuba coast) and I expect to hit Cuba soil with them again," the wearer said.

This is the account two men gave of the invasion launched by the Cuban revolutionary council and buried back by Castro's troops:

"Our force—about 1,500 men was able to land without difficulty the first day. It was four or five hours before the invaders met any material opposition.

"Most of the opposition came the next day (April 18)—wave after wave of troops; Stalin tanks and a large number of cannon.

"We had landed five tanks but the turrets of two were out of commission.

"Our weakness was especially in lacking airplanes that could match the performance of the Sea Furies and jets that bombed our machine-gunned our men. Next time, we will have to have aviation that can match.

"One ship of ours only was struck by a 200-ton Rocket-dido, whose ammunition plooded when the craft was attacked. All other ships got away. Not once did the Castro navy interfere with our operations off Bahia Cochinos while we were lagging.

"We had more than 200 Castro militiamen and troops—and had to leave them behind.

Some we confined in a building on which was painted a cross. They seem to have been killed by a Castro bomb. Some had hammer-and-sickle tattoos."

They said Castro understated both his own and the invaders' casualties when he announced 80 or so of each side were killed. They refused to set a figure but said the death toll was much worse.

They ridiculed the Cuban dictator's contention that the invasion force was a mercenary one.

"We evacuated at least 150 to 200 by ship," they said. "A good number of our forces had fought their way into the Escambray Mountains."

Liberal MP's Want Chance To Quiz Coyne

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberal opposition in the Commons will move to give Governor James Coyne of the Bank of Canada called before a Commons committee for questioning, a Liberal party source said today.

The Liberal members of the Commons are dissatisfied with the line of questioning conducted in the Senate's banking committee when Mr. Coyne testified there Wednesday.

The Commons opposition also wants to force the government to refer the Bank of Canada annual report for 1960 to a committee for detailed study. The annual reports of the bank have not been before a committee since the Conservatives government took office in 1957.

Mr. Coyne appeared before the Senate committee at his invitation to give his assessment of the economy and the prospects for the government's management.

He said the normal growth of the economy can do little more than take up the normal increases in the labor force. Any special measures will be needed to attack the backlog of unemployment. Too much attention has been focussed on monetary policy as a solution. Monetary measure.ɔ could be more effective, he said.

But Mr. Coyne declined to make firm recommendations on what measures should be adopted. It is on this point that the Liberals want to question him more closely than the senators did, the source said.

The Liberals contend that since the Bank of Canada is held responsible for management for monetary policy, and is held responsible to Parliament, Mr. Coyne's annual report should be put before a Commons committee.

House Briefs

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Green announced in the Commons, Wednesday that he is not in the public interest to disclose whether anyone has been asked to leave Canada as persons who have engaged in subversive activities since October, 1957.

THE Commons gave permission for the 39-member House of Commons broadcasting, moved by J. W. Murphy (PC — Lambton West), to visit the atomic energy establishments at Chalk River, Ont., May 4 and 5.

There were 864,016 unemployed persons registered with National Employment Service offices and 837,961 receiving unemployment insurance benefits at the end of March, Michael Starr, Labor minister, parliamentary secretary to Labor Minister Starr, said in a reply.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said in reply to CCF Leader Argue that he could not advise the House formally whether or not Prime Minister Nehru plans to introduce legislation for federal incorporation of co - operatives.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker told Progressive Conservative (PC—Port Arthur) the principal reason for the federal government's rejection of Toronto's plea for $60,000,000 loan for an east - west subway was lack of legislative authority. If new amendments to the National Housing Act are to be made, he said, they will be announced to the House.

Works Minister Walker said regulations are being drafted for the sale of National Housing Act mortgages by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation on a public market. The regulations will cover such questions as the value to be put on mortgages, interest rate and per cent of the principal instead of the 100 - per - cent rate now applicable.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker declined to indicate how Montreal-Labrador airline is going to aid Liberal Leader Pearson when he talks air safety starting on an effort to avoid the May 24 strike he could say nothing more at this time except that every effort is being made to find a basis of agreement.

Revenue Minister Nowlan said taxpayers will not be penalized if the fact that the deadline for filing income tax returns — April 30 — falls on a Sunday this year. He told Alexis Caron (L—Huil) that when April 30 falls on a Sunday the revenue department "always arranges" so taxpayers will not be penalized by this fortuitous event.

Attempt to Dethrone District President of Smelters Union Sends Meeting Into Overtime

SUDBURY (CP)—The three-day convention of District 3 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.) today went into overtime.

The delegates approved the Wednesday Wednesday when they found the first three days had allowed them to deal with only two of the 9 resolutions brought to the convention by the Mine-Mill locals. And two of the five are to come back to the convention floor after further consideration in committee.

Wednesday's session took two hours long attempt to dethrone District President John Nabb, vice-president of Local 598, said he had lodged an appeal against the election during the morning sessions of the convention.

REFUSES TO LEAVE

When the chairman ruled the report out of order, Secretary-Treasurer, Local 598's financial secretary, made a motion from the floor to challenge the ruling. But the chairman refused to leave the floor and the meeting demanded that Polrier be led from the microphone.

The sergeant-at-arms precipitated near-bedlam when he refused to take Polrier from the grounds the union constitution said he could remain and that only occupy the chair once the ruling had been challenged.

Willie Mahoney and two sergeant-at-arms to remove the sergeants ruled that they could not take orders from the floor. In a brief ad hoc session, McNabb informed the chairman that Local 598 would charge him with violating the union constitution.

Although we do not ask you to step down from chairing this convention, we feel that the delegates of Local 598 are hereby charging you with a violation of the union constitution," he said.

Sokski reiterated that the union constitution has been planned before the convention. He said Local 598 is attempting to intimidate him with the aim of withholding renewal of his leave of absence with the firm International Nickel Company Limited here.

THURSDAY

Though he was elected president of the district last year for a two-year term, he took a present leave of absence with the firm to contest Thursday's election.

Earlier Wednesday, the delegates spent two hours discussing a 5-point program concerning problems of lone workers. They also heard a letter from Premier Frost urging the delegates to refer the resolution to the wages policy committee for scrutiny.

Leonard "some-privacy resolution," it seeks an amendment to the Ontario Pension Plan enabling workers to retire at 60 instead of 65 and a reduction in working hours without loss of take-home pay.

Another resolution calls for meeting with Labor Minister Starr and Revenue Minister Nowlan in an attempt to prevent wasting rights for loco pensions of the company promises that it will consult the union before making any layoffs or production cutbacks.

Labor Snubbed In Nominees Says Leader

HAMILTON (CP) — A Steelworkers Union leader said today the federal government snubbed organized labor by not consulting the Canadian Labor Congress on labor nominees to the 25-man National Productivity Council.

Larry Sefton, a director of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC), said not one large industrial union is represented on the council.

He added: "The government's choice of chairman, Mr. George de Young, apparently was designed to please Mr. Maurice Labor."

"Mr. de Young, president of Atlas Steels, is known to be a vehement opponent of bona-fide unions," Mr. Sefton said. "He is his own plant at Welland, he has persistently challenged the existence of a company union."

Mr. Sefton, director of USWA District 6, which includes 236 local unions from Niagara to British Columbia, was speaking to the Steelworkers' national policy conference here.

Commenting on the jurisdictional dispute between the USWA and the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter workers (Ind.), Mr. Sefton said an earth-mover-ger of the two unions "is non-feasible mining industry "would make no sense."

WOULD NEGOTIATE

He said he is prepared to sedown and negotiate with the Mine Mill union towards that objective.

William Mahoney, USWA national director, said this year's negotiations for new collective agreements in key sections of the basic steel industry will present a greater challenge than negotiations in the past.

Negotiations will take place in a time of large-scale unemployment in which Canadians enjoy prosperity while far too many of their neighbors suffer economic hardship.

Lehl testified he and Mrs. Rogers had been drinking with friends in Vittoria and were on their way home when an argument developed.

Income Tax Explained

Designed and written for the taxpayer who is not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or visit an Income Tax Office.

By C.A. Miller, former supervising Assessor, Income Tax Department.

A number of cases have been dealt with by the writer where a taxpayer is living with a common-law wife and supporting her children. The taxpayer is concerned about what claim he should make on his income tax return when he is not the father of the children.

The fact that the taxpayer is not the father of the children will make little, if any difference in the allowable claim, provided he is single, divorced, legally separated or a widower and the mother of the children has no earned income.

It is noted on Page 3 of the Short Form tax return is the first item under equivalent to married exemption that a taxpayer will be allowed $1,000 exemption for the support of a wholly dependent child under age 21 or any age if infirm or in full time attendence at a school or university. If the mother of the child has no income, then the same child may also be claimed again for the ordinary child's exemption in the space provided for wholly dependent children. The child's mother would qualify as a full time housekeeper. The space indicated "details of dependent" should also be completed.

The claims as outlined above are allowable if the conditions as stated have applied throughout the whole of the taxation year. If these conditions only applied for the latter part of the year it is doubtful if any exemption other than that of a single person would be given the taxpayer.

This attitude of the tax department is taken in order to prevent a taxpayer from entering a situation of this nature for the sole purpose of getting the advantage of increased exemptions.

Question — I have lived as man and wife for the past two years with a woman who has one child. Can I claim any exemptions on their behalf? I am a single man.

Answer — You may claim $1,000 for the child and if your common-law wife has no income you may also claim the child as a dependent. Your exemption would be $2,310 as this woman would qualify as a full time housekeeper.

Question — I lived as man and wife for six months with a woman who had two children. I supported all of them during that period. What exemption may I claim?

Answer — It is doubtful if the tax department would allow any exemption but that of a single person. The arrangement did not last for more than a year and would be considered as only of a temporary nature.

recommended in a report by Ted Goldberg, assistant research director of the union.

In his report to the union's national policy conference, Mr. Goldberg said such a plan is the best method of meeting objectives of a high-quality, comprehensive health program at a cost which can be met.

Existing group insurance programs leave too much to the risk of illness or disability on the individual, he said.

They do not adequately cover health services in the face of their rising costs, he said. Also, there exists a lack of co-ordination of existing plans.

POLICY IS EXPEDIENT

A report by Gower Markle, the union's director of education and welfare, says Canada is following a social welfare policy which is dictated by expediency and opportunism.

Unemployment insurance, the report says, is breaking down because the government is attempting to use it to overcome a major breakdown in the economic and social system.

"Unemployment insurance is a useful instrument for relieving the economic needs of individuals affected by short-term unemployment," the report says. But even to be set at rates considerably below public welfare, which have shown to be inadequate for minimum needs.

The report says that while 10 per cent of the labor force is unemployed and paying for the main burden of their misfortune through reduced family budgets, deteriorating health and well-being of their families, the 90 per cent of the labor force at work is generally more prosperous than ever before.

Massive, long-range planning and positive programs on all levels of society are the only remedy, the report says.

MINISTER SEES

Martin. "Procedural achievements are not progress."

The Liberal MP said Canada should "put forward substantive proposals which would likely capture the support of certain nations." He mentioned such countries as Brazil, Mexico and certain ones in Asia.

On disarmament, the external affairs minister said there is good reason to expect "real progress" this year. However, Canada must have to reconsider its stand against the spread of nuclear weapons if planned East - West disarmament talks didn't show progress.

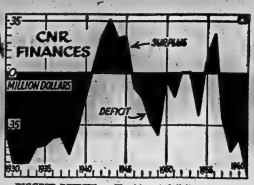
On Laos, Mr. Green confined his remarks largely to a review of efforts to reactivate the Laotian truce commission and arrange a permanent settlement.

Mr. Martin suggested Canada should have agreed to reactivating the commission when that was suggested months ago by Prime Minister Nehru.

On the over-all situation the Liberal MP commented:

"I hope that I will not be accused of pessimism but I suggest that this is one more instance where the Communist world has been able, by a process of attrition, to increase its sphere of influence and its sphere of control."

DEALS WITH OAS



Dealing with the OAS or Pan-American Union, Mr. Green said some branches of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs are studying the question of Canadian membership and will let him know the results.

He added that the government is not yet in a position to decide whether to join OAS.

"I am wondering whether Canada is wise in adopting so isolationist policy with regard to 'the Western Hemisphere,'" Mr. Green added, almost as an aside. "However, that is part of the argument on one side."

Stressing that he spoke only for himself, Mr. Martin said he would support any move toward OAS membership.

Mr. Green, in his speech, said he hopes an independent Cuba "free from outside pressure will result in relationship with those of the Western Hemisphere."

BIGGEST DEFICIT — The biggest deficit of its 37-year-history hit the publicly-owned Canadian National Railways in 1960. Graph shows CNR's deficits and surpluses 1930-60. A $57,496,777 loss last year was $23,908,487 higher than in 1959 and some $6,000,000 higher than record deficits in the depression years of 1931-32. (CP Newsmap.)

against Cuba, several of the prisoners grabbed microphones and pledged to fight off any attack. The rest of the prisoners roared their approval.

Castro was asked by one of the prisoners if his government was "completely Communist." He shouted back: "The Cuban people have a right to a Communist government if they want one. Ours is a socialist government."

CLIMAXES PARADE

Castro's public appearance only the second since the April 17 invasion, climaxed a five-day parade of captives before Havana's TV cameras.

Previous sessions featured interviews of captives by a panel of journalists.

Today, each prisoner—clad in clean white undershirts and the trousers of combat uniforms—stood and gave his name and home town.

Many of the prisoners said they had expected the Cuban people to rise up and join the invading rebels.

"Do you think we would have been crazy enough to come here—only a thousand of us—if we had thought we would have to fight the Cuban people?" one prisoner asked Castro.

Castro did not reply.

Controversy Dogs U.S. 100 Years After North Defeated South in War

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP)—Born in conflict and controversy, the United States, seems to be dogged by controversy as it turns to commemorate the bloodshed in which the union of states was baptized.

How necessary was that bitter civil war a century ago? Could it have been avoided? Is a century long enough to commemorate that fratricidal clash essential? If so, how could it best be observed without opening old family wounds?

The controversy goes on, mainly in the newspaper columns and political debate. It is waged by students of history and by men who after years of study still seem unsure of the real spark that touched off the war.

To the average American, the Civil War is gradually moving into the realm of romantic legend studded with heroes who fought glory in America no matter on which side they fought.

Virginia's matron summed up her feelings: "I don't care how they divide this thing as long as they don't start it all over again."

VANDERBILT TEN SCORE

A New England mother whose forbears shed blood to bring down the Confederate flag smiled and sighed as her tiny daughter picked a tiny model of that flag among those offered by a novelty store:

"Here I am a staunch unionist buying my daughter a confederate flag."

It was said in jest and with some indifference. The war had retreated even in the minds of many Americans.

But to historians the events are still as fresh as ever. And where a statement is made, an argument advanced, there's always a contradictory one ready.

Historian Bruce Catton suggests the entire war could have been avoided. Immediately, he is criticized by newspaper readers who charge him with belittling historical fact and shaming the thousands of men who died in the name of freedom and in the belief that the States were indivisible.

The federal civil war centennial commission sets out on a five-year profest to revive interest by encouraging re - enactment of battle scenes, and major political events of a century ago, and is scoured by one newspaper reader of a "desperate bid to stimulate tourism."

But for those who fear that old wounds will be reopened, a New Jersey centennial official observes:

"This is a risk that so far appears to have been over-estimated. In any case, reality is never escaped by assuming the ostrich position. Better these feelings, if they exist, be in the open where they may be countered with some chance of success."

TOO EMOTIONAL

Perhaps the greatest anguish of all, at least in the minds of historians, is whether the 1861-1865 war could have been blocked. Historian Catton suggests it could have been—that the machinery of democracy was available but not used. There could have been negotiations and a compromise on the burning issue of slavery but no compromise was sought. Americans were swept up in emotions rather than reason.

Catton, of course, could be easily challenged on the question of whether a compromise was sought. Even while Confederate forces fired the first shot against a federal fort in South Carolina on that fateful morning on April 12, 1861, Lincoln met with Virginians and assured them he wanted only peace.

In his 1861 inauguration, Lincoln told the South on March 4:

"In your hands, my dissatisfied fellow-countrymen, and not in mine, is the momentous issue of civil war. The government will not assail you."

What did Lincoln mean? Just this: He was ready to allow the slave-holding owners to keep their slaves, providing slavery was not extended into the new territories of the American west.

Lincoln made this clear repeatedly at a time when slavery was becoming increasingly unpopular in the English - speaking world. Britain had formally abolished slavery in 1833, more than a quarter-century before the Americans whose high moral principles led them to completely oppose slavery," this critic writes. "Their honored place in history will not be affected one iota by criticism from today's 'conscientious objectors.'"

Another writer laments:

"We glorify battles and neglect causes . . . It is one thing to honor the gallantry and clean wit a justification for the repudiation of the democratic process and the denial of the concept of the union."

Technical School Training Gives Girls Better Chance

VANCOUVER (CP)— An unusual pre-employment class offered at the Vancouver Technical School has paid off in jobs for girls with below-average academic ability.

The class, started last September for girls in grades VII and VIII who found the general curriculum too difficult has been even a bigger success than was expected.

Principal William Franklin says the courses was scheduled to finish this year but because of its success will continue next year.

Of the 37 girls who began the class, 18 found employment recently and job prospects for the others are good, says Mr. Franklin.

"Most of the girls in the class had failed two or three times in the early grades. They found they were not interested in carrying on their education. They would have dropped out of school and joined the mass of unemployed.

"We wanted to give these girls a salable skill. We disregarded the regular high school program and concentrated on courses that would be most valuable to them, in finding work."

The pre-employment course could lead to high school graduation.

The girls taking the course were taught how to wait on tables in the school cafeteria, serve as cashiers and how to order food.

They learned homemaking skills and dressmaking in home economic classes, and in commerce classes were taught typewriting and how to write business letters.

"We started with girls because we felt the need was greatest there," says Mr. Franklin. "Next year we hope to extend it to boys."

Cooper, 59, has been taking cobalt radiation treatments at home.

The Tracks

LEXINGTON Ky. (AP)—Calumet Farm's Bean Prince will not run in the Kentucky Derby, trainer Jimmy Jones said Wednesday night.

Jones said Calumet will depend on Sho Lea to try for its eight Derby win since 1941. Bean Prince's right front foot was injured in the Florida Derby.

FORT ERIE (CP) — Jockey Eric Morreale walked away uninjured from an amazing spill in the first race at Fort Erie Wednesday. Shaken by his experience, he cancelled the remaining two mounts of the afternoon—and both horses won with substitute jockey Charlie Boland in the saddle.

Morreale was leading on Tipton's Tempest, only 100 feet from the finish line when the two-year-old filly stepped in a hole and went down in a heap, her jockey clinging to her.

Examination by the track physician revealed that Morreale sustained nothing more serious than a head-to - toe mud bath.

Morreale had been scheduled to ride three mounts: Tipton's Tempest, Sagsilla and Additional, all of which are owned by Mrs. Churchill Mann, of King.

Boland scored on Sagsilla and Additional and captured the day's featured Wellaville claiming purse on Windsor Forest.

Windsor Forest paid $8.20, $3.20 and $2.50.

The daily double of Soft Touch and Miss Radar paid $87.30. The Quinella of Indian Line and Cairn Blue paid $19.50.

Says CBC Won't Air "Big Four"

OTTAWA (CP)—The question of Big Four Football telecasts may not be settled finally, after all.

Marcel Lambert, parliamentary secretary to Revenue Minister Nowlan, who reports to the Commons on broadcasting, told the House Wednesday what it already knew—that private station CFTO-TV outbid the CBC for the TV rights to the games.

Mr. Lambert said in a reply for Hubert Badanai (L — Fort William) that the CBC made three offers to buy the rights from the Toronto station but was told they were not for sale.

The CBC then made other commitments for its networks during football games.

This meant that no CBC station or privately owned affiliate would carry the Big Four games, But Mr. Lambert added without elaboration:

"It may be hoped that the door is not irrevocably closed."

Outside the House, CBC officials had no comment. It was recalled that the corporation announced several weeks ago that it had made firm network commitments for Saturday and Sunday afternoons, when Big Four games are played.

Jets Trim Maple Leafs, Take Lead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Columbus Jets are in first place in the International League today because of those two unbeatables—pitching and power hitting.

The Jets sold a half game edge over Toronto after beating the Maple Leafs 7-6 Wednesday night in the opener of a three-game series. Richmond and San Juan are only a game out of first after the Virginians lost to Buffalo 11-7 in 12 innings. The Marlins also got fine pitching and power hitting for a 4-1 victory over Rochester, Jersey City edged Syracuse 3-2 in the other IL game.

Tom Parsons had a no-hitter and a 6-0 lead for Columbus going into the eighth inning when the roof fell in. Though he allowed only one single before being lifted the Leafs went on to tie, thanks to Steve Demeter's grand slam homer off reliever Bob Lee. It was the only other Toronto hit.

Larry Elliot's sacrifice fly scored Johnny Powers in the bottom of the eighth with the winning run. Lee (4-0) was the winner and Pat Scantlebury lost his first for the Leafs. Don Leppert, Don Clendenon and Ed Sada homered for Columbus

BASES WERE JAMMED

Buffalo reliever Max Surkont got out of a bases loaded jam in the seventh and allowed Richmond one hit the rest of the way. Tuesday night's opener will be dropped to make way for the three replacements. Edmonton's lineup in the first game was made up of all play-

CHESS PLAY DELAYED

Botvinnik now needs only two more points.

Memorial Cup Real "Tester" Tonight

By LORNE BRUCE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP) — Rivals coaches agree that the battle for the Canadian junior hockey championship starts all over again tonight although Toronto St Michael's College Majors trounced Edmonton Oil Kings 4-0 in the first game.

The second game of the best-of-seven Memorial Cup final series goes tonight.

Coach Russell (Buster) of Edmonton said:

"We're as good a club as them but it's next game will tell."

Rev. David Bauer, Majors' coach, said:

"It's going to be close now they're strengthened."

Father Bauer was referring to Oil Kings' decision to use three replacements — defenceman Ken Stephanson of Winnipeg Braves, forward Bryan Hextall of Brandon Wheat Kings and forward Dave Richardson of Winnipeg Rangers.

Richardson, a veteran who played for Tuesday night's game will be dropped to make Edmonton's lineup in the first

The West, because of dominating by Ontario teams in the past, is allowed replacements for the Canadian final but the East is not.

However, Father Bauer said his Majors have been strengthened for the third game Saturday night.

Stan (Sonny) Osborne, a top-notch forward who has been starring on Ontario teams in the University of Toronto, will arrive by plane in time to rejoin his team for the third game.

Edmonton will have to solve the eastern champions' effective checking game if they hope to square the series tonight.

The annual Memorial Cup dinner was held last night and head table guests included Major Ernest Rogers of Edmonton, Al Leader, Western Hockey League president, Father Henry Hunter, A. R. Patrick, Alberta provincial secretary, and Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings.

Father Hunter told the gathering that hockey has fallen on evil days in some parts of Canada, adding that although it is the finest game there is, officials should take a long look at what we are doing to it.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Canadian Amateur Hockey Association president Jack Roxburgh is credited with the statement that he will recommend that the CAHA reject an invitation to send a team to Europe next year.

Mr. Roxburgh's reason is said to be "because the proposed schedule involves games with Sweden."

"Our hockey relations with Sweden are rather strained at the moment and there's no point in risking a repetition of what happened last year." He was referring to press charges that the Trail Smoke Eaters used "brutality" in a game against the Smorgasborders.

Mr. Roxburgh, I believe, is making a mountain out of a molehill. If necessary is carried the "President" arising from an exhibition game between the Smokies and Sweden was water under the bridge as far as the clubs were concerned, when they hit the tournament trail.

Practically every Canadian team that has visited Europe and played extended exhibition schedules prior to world competition has received similar press treatment from one country or another.

As a matter of fact the Swedish journalists' criticism of the Smokies' play in one game was rather mild compared to that handed out to previous clubs. The English-Canadian Prestige Vs. headed by those doughty warriors, the Warwicks, laid everything low that came their way and were almost ushered out of the continent.

The Whitby Dunlops, urged to the heights by the taunts of obellient kiss-curled Wren Blair, drew the wrath of the understanding Fleet Streeters in London and the columnar ire of the trans-coastal slaves of the typewriter in more than one European country.

The Belleville McFarlands were called "hoodlums and western gangsters" by the Finnish press after Al Dewsbury, Lammy Lamlunde, Moe Benoit and Johnny McKellagd had bowled strikes in a game of Five-Pinns during an exhibition tilt. The spectators played darts with Johnny using him as a board and snow-covered icicles as miniature harpoons while Johnny was parked in the Finn-bin.

But as in the cases of Penticton, Dunlops and other early Canadian teams who played the same robust type of hockey the incidents were forgotten as soon as the next editions rolled off the presses.

There were no resulting international incidents nor were relations between Canada and the representative countries "strained" as far as I know.

In fact in Prague during the world tournament proper, the Macs numbered the Finnish players and press among their supporters when playing against Iron Curtain clubs.

Sending a "pesty-waist" hockey club to Europe would be worse than refusing to send representative Canadian teams, who on more than one occasion have been quoted by European officials as "the most popular in the tournament." And a large part of this popularity stems from their rugged, hard-hitting style of play.

Refusing to send a team to world championships in Europe would be taking the ice off the tournament cake, so far as European fans are concerned. Not to mention the possible disappointment of the current Allan Cup winners, or amateur representative team capable and willing to have the honor of representing Canada.

Mr. Roxburgh quoted the Swedes as saying that after the incidents with the Smoke Eaters they would not play any more games in Canada. "So I see no reason why we should send a team to Sweden."

Be that as it may. I fail to see it as sufficient reason for not sending a team to Europe to defend our world honors.

I do not know when the Swedish statement was made, but in all probability it was issued by some official of the Swedish Hockey Federation while he was still "hot under the collar." It could be the statement of one official, not Swedish hockey as a whole.

The McFarland Canadians inspiring this reporter, found the Swedish players and officials to be fine fellows, good winners and good losers. They fraternized freely with us and were eager to hear about hockey conditions in Canada.

If the Swedes want to adopt a cry-baby-I-won't-play-in-your-backyard attitude let them do it. It is no reason why we should sulk in a corner and disappoint a dozen other countries by blasting in retaliation "we won't play in your community backyard either."

I think Roxy should reconsider his proposed recommendation not to send a Canadian team to Europe. One bruised apple does not speak for the barrel.

HEADS HENLEY GROUP

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Fred R. Hemphill of St. Catharines is the new president of the Henley Aquatic Association. The organization is responsible for the upkeep of the Henley rowing course here and the staging of the annual Royal Canadian Henley Regatta. Hemphill succeeds John M. Newman.

SWIM MEET SET

HAMILTON (CP) — The 14th annual Ontario YMCA swimming championships are scheduled for here Saturday with 225 competitors from 18 Ontario Y swimming clubs expected to take part in 30 events. London and St. Catharines are expected to give stiffest competition to Hamilton, winner of the last two meets.

Blank Pegs In 5th Game

GALT (CP) — The Allan Cup ousts today in this proud city which two years ago had no hockey club to call its own.

To the cheers of 4,500 screaming fans who rushed onto the ice here after the game was over, Galt Terriers shut out Winnipeg Maroons 5-0 to take the best - of - seven series for the Canadian senior championship in five games.

It was the worst beating of the series for the Westerners, the only team to defeat Galt in 16 playoff games.

"It's a long - cherished dream come true," said coach Lloyd Roubell amid popping champagne corks in the dressing room.

"That's just the way this club is. They don't like to lose."

Winnipeg coach Gord Simpson said the Terriers were the best team his Maroons had faced all season and deserved the cup.

"I was surprised, though, that the series went only five games. We expected at least six games and maybe seven. But they have a lot of guts and don't know when to quit.

"They stick strictly to hockey too."

It was the first game of the series that Winnipeg failed to score the first goal — or any goal.

WRAPPED IT UP

Three tallies in the first period and two in the third wrapped it up for the Terriers in their first year of eligibility for the title.

Two goals by Fred Fletcher and singles by Bob McKnight, captain Floyd (Buick) Martin and Bob Mader turned the trick.

Some fancy goaltending was needed by Harold (Boat) Hurley to nail down his third playoff shutout. He turned back 35 shots compared with 37 by Winnipeg's Good Dibley and came through with particularly sharp efforts on Don Rendall and Lou Joyal in the final minutes.

Maroons took six of the 10 penalties and were shorthanded when four Galt goals were scored.

McKnight started the scoring at 11:13 when he carried down centre, got inside defenceman Stan Bloomer and rammed a low, 20-footer through Dibley's pads.

WERE SHORT-HANDED

Jack McKenzie went off for tripping Darryl Sly at 11:07 and Fletcher scored his first goal 44 seconds later. Lloyd Orris was in the penalty box for holding when McKnight cleared the puck from the backboards and Martin knocked in a fast one from 10 feet at 19:07.

Protecting their 3-0 lead throughout the second period, the Terriers turned to tight checking in the third and prevented the Maroons from organizing a sustained offence. Winnipeg was serving a bench penalty for too many men on the ice when Mader scored from the edge of the crease on a pass from Martin.

When Fletcher made it 5-0 with five seconds left after trapping a stray pass and pulling Dibley, the crowd swarmed to the ice. They went back to their seats to let the game finish but came pouring out again for the trophy presentation.

San Francisco Giants, scrambling for everything they got, suddenly have bounced to within a half-game of a stump last year's champs with a 7-3 victory over Cincinnati Reds.

Singles by Kuenn and Mays tied it 2-2, and the lead run came in when Moon dropped McCovey's easy fly ball to left. Wills' error then loaded the bases, Bob Schmidt's sacrifice fly made it 3-2 and Eddie Bressoud's two-out single brought in the clincher.

The Dodgers, who had scored three in the fifth off Mike McCormick, two on Tommy Davis' homer, chased winner Jim Duffalo (1-0) after a walk and a pinch-homer by John Roseboro in the ninth. When Wills walked with one out, Bob Bolin came on. Wills went to second on a wild pickoff peg by Bolin before pinchhitter Norm Larker struck out, then went to third on a wild pitch before Davis fouled out.

Milwaukee roughed up Larry Jackson, the Cards' ace making his first appearance since suffering a broken jaw in spring training, with five runs in four innings, the two-run homer by John Demerit, his first in the majors, triggered a four - run second inning that wrapped it up. Roy McMillan also homered for the Braves. Don Nottebart won his first of the season. He allowed just three hits, walked seven but needed Ron Piche's relief in the eighth after three base on balls.

Gino Cimoli singled and scored Pittsburgh's first run off loser Dallas Green in the first inning, then singled home the slugger in the fourth. Vinegar Bend Mizell was the winner, giving up a first-inning run and then blanking the Phils until Pancho Herrera homered in the ninth.

Don Zimmer's homer broke it up for the Cubs against reliever Jim Maloney as bullpen ace Don Elston won his fourth without defeat. Jerry Lynch's third pinch-hit homer of the season scored the Reds' run in the seventh. Ron Santo also homered for the Cubs, now opwilliams left after giving up a leadoff double by Hiller in the eighth and the Giants then came from behind with four runs off losing reliever Larry Sherry (0-2), the last three unearned after another Wally Moon and Maury Wills.

Mantle Hits Two of Four

Yankee Homers Nip Tigers String

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Wally Moon has been slapping home runs and getting the headlines in that other league, but Mickey Mantle literally has been banging homers right and left in the American League, and, oddly enough, with very little fanfare.

The switch-hitting Mantle fired two home runs — one right-handed, the first left-handed blast that tied the score and the second a right handed loft in the 10th inning that gave New York Yankees a 13-11 victory at Detroit and ended the Tigers' winning streak at eight games.

That gave Mantle a total of seven home runs — two right-handed, five left handed—in 11 games on the road and at home. Moon, meanwhile, has led the National League record for April homers with eight in 15 games for Los Angeles Dodgers, all at home. Both Mantle and Moon are within reach of the major league high of nine set by Ken Williams of the old St. Louis Browns in April of 1922.

Mickey's five games left this month, three against Cleveland beginning today, and two at Washington Sunday, who has sliced his eight over the left field screen at Los Angeles Coliseum, and 12 April games remaining, all at Chicago, where he hit just two last season.

RETAINED LEAD

While Detroit retained a half-game lead over idle Minnesota in the AL race, Cleveland moved into a third place tie with New York by beating Baltimore 8-3 Wednesday night. Washington defeated Boston 2-1 in the only other AL game.

Mantle tops the AL with seven home runs, 15 runs batted in (all but one collected with the homers) and 13 runs scored. He also leads the Yanks with 13 hits and a .342 batting average.

His 10th inning send-off leading southpaw Hank Aguirre (0-1) gave his third game — winning home run of the young season and ended the Yankees' losing slump at three. His tying homer came off right handed rookie Jim Donohue and capped a three-run eighth that wiped out an 11-8 Tiger lead. It was the eighth right - left homer game in Mantle's 10 - year career.

Detroit, which hadn't lost since opening day, came from behind after trailing 8-0 going into the seventh inning against Yank starter Whitey Ford but then blew an 11-8 lead.

HIT HOMERS

Tony Kubek and Roger Maris each hit their first home runs of the season for the Yanks while Rocky Colavito smacked his third for the Tigers in a shabby game that showed eight unearned runs, split evenly. Reliever Luis Arroyo won his first with two hitless innings.

Cleveland came from behind with three unearned runs on Jim Gentile's fourth — inning throwing error at Baltimore. Winning reliever Barry Latzman, Bob Allen and Frank Funk then blanked the Birds on one hit over the last six frames. Bill Fisher (0-2) was the loser, giving up a two-run double by Jim Piersall that capped the third inning rally.

Washington right-hander Tom Sturdivant won his first as a starting pitcher since Sept. 28, 1958, but needed Dave Sisler's saving relief in the eighth at Boston.

The Red Sox, scoring an uncarned run in the first without a hit, mashed last three singles, all off Sturdivant before Sisler came on and got Jackie Jensen to hit into an inning ending double play with two on in the eighth. Winless Bill Monbouquette lost his third, giving up a tie - breaking single by Willie Tasby in a two-run fourth inning.

Disaster Plan for CFL Teams

WINNIPEG (CP) — A disaster plan covering all teams in the Canadian Football League is scheduled to go into effect at the start of next season, Commissioner Sydney Halter announced Wednesday.

The plan would provide for the restocking of any of the nine teams should they lose four or more players in an airplane crash or other mishap.

The team suffering the loss would obtain players from the other clubs.

The number of players to be provided by each team and what teams would provide them is covered by a complicated formula.

Mr. Halter said the plan was approved at a recent meeting of football managers in Toronto, but final details are still being worked out before formal approval is given by the league.

The plan also includes an insurance scheme which would provide financial reimbursement to a club suffering loss of players. League and other league clubs.

The Eastern section of the CFL, the Big Four, has made a disaster plan of its own to this point. The Western Conference has none.

Junior A Owners

Want New Player Rule

TORONTO (CP) — Club owners of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series at a closed meeting Wednesday night proposed a rule for the 1963-63 season to prohibit moving of players under the age of 18 for the purpose of avoiding the draft.

The plan will be presented to Saturday's OHA annual meeting.

Owners decided to leave the present draft law unchanged for next season. It says a player must be 16 before he can be drafted by any Junior A team.

Some teams have been known to use the past to move a favored young player of pre-draft age to another area to avoid the possibility of his being drafted later by another team, and there has been speculation in the last week that the owners planned to extend the draft to players under 16.

However, never was any intention of doing so, Sam Pollock, chief of Montreal Canadiens' farm system, said after Wednesday night's meeting.

"All we want to do is stop this business of moving kids under 18 away from their homes," Of course, we'll also be saving ourselves a lot of money by doing so."

SUBJECT TO DRAFT

Any player moved before he is 18 will become subject to the draft when he reaches 18, Pollock said, "so that any team taking such a gamble would stand to lose the player anyway."

A statement issued after the meeting referred to press criticism that Junior A playoffs were delayed in such an extent that Moncton Beavers were made to feel unwanted when they came to Toronto for the Eastern Canada Memorial Cup final against St. Michael's College Majors last week.

"The OHA Junior A council takes exception to the criticism placed on them of the treatment of the Moncton club as set out in the newspapers," the statement said.

"And for information purposes, the OHA winner met the final detailsa set by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association."

WINS SCOTCH CUP

GLASGOW (Reuters) — Dunfermline Athletic won the Scottish Cup for the first time in its history when it beat Celtic 2-0 in the final replay here Wednesday night. The first game between the two teams was a goal-less draw.

Hospital Board Re-Installs Officers at Annual Meet

CAMPBELLFORD — The annual meeting of Campbellford Memorial Hospital Board was held on Friday night in the board rooms with a small attendance.

C. H. Davidson, chairman, spoke of the steady growth of the hospital needs, both financially and in demands for services.

Gross hospital earnings, he said, were $238,648 in 1959, compared to $282,100 in 1959. An increase appears a certainty for 1961.

During 1960 the hospital had 1,771 patients. The staff comprised 67 full time employees, 22 part-time, making a total of 89, but there are at the present, 91 on the hospital payroll, as compared to 73 employees in 1959.

Th chairman stated that the hospital is a valuable industry and as proof he said that salaries and wages for 1960 were $213,316. It was estimated that in 1961 this figure would approach the quarter million mark.

TRIBUTE PAID

Mr. Davidson paid warm tribute to the ladies of the Hospital Auxiliary, who had raised $5,459 for hospital purposes in 1960 also to his fellow board members and the administrative staff of the hospital and the staff in general. Efficiency in operation all down the line had been outstanding. Mr. Davidson said, and in addition many important contributions in work and time had been given gratis for the betterment of hospital facilities. "The Order of the Eastern Star ladies had contributed three mantel radios at a total cost of $113 for both brightness and hours for hospital patients.

TREASURER'S REPORT

Treasurer S. N. Carr stated the expenses of operating the hospital had been up about $65,000 over the previous year, but the gross income amounts had also increased by $58,000. Provincial grants of $75,000 had to be died only for retiring debt or for capital expenditures were received in 1960, and it was hoped, but not assured, that this grant would again be forthcoming in 1961. About $18,000 plus $6,100 for furnishings and equipment had been spent on and in the hospital building.

The auditor's report was given by John D. Lewars, chartered accountant of the firm of F.A.R. MacFadden, chartered accountants, of Belleville. On motion, the services of this firm were engaged for another year.

Secretary C. Linton told of the increased demand for beds at the hospital. Several times since the unfortunate necessity of placing bed patients in the hall had been reported to, in order to meet the emergency. Despite this, there was often a waiting list. The Board does not approve of this practice, but it is difficult to make a hide-bound rule prohibiting this because of the emergency nature of hospital business. When the hospital was opened in 1953, some thought it was unnecessarily large. Now the need for extension is the prime concern. Twenty graduate nurses are on the staff now, as compared to eight in the year of the opening, 1935. This fact speaks for itself in the need for extension.

One of the few declines has been in the maternity ward, where the 1959 births outnumbered those of 1960, by 273 to 223.

Dr. A. F. Kaufman, representing the medical staff, spoke briefly on matters pertaining to this important phase of hospital work.

IMPERATIVE NEED

J. F. R. Douglas spoke concerning the imperative need for an addition to the hospital. He remarked on the overcrowded conditions, which will almost certainly get worse unless something is done to accommodate more patients. The hospital has a 65 bed capacity but as many as 78 have been pressed into use of late. Even this did not begin to meet the need as there is so often a waiting list of patients. Architects have already been called in to advise the nature of a proposed addition. Whether a wing or a third floor would be most advisable. Mr. Douglas quoted approximate percentage figures relative to the abode of the patronizing the Campbellford Memorial Hospital in the latest survey. These percentages were as follows: Town of Campbellford, 40; Township of Seymour, 30; Township of Percy, 11; Village of Havelock and adjacent township, 12; other points, 17.

Mr. Douglas, like Mr. Davidson, emphasized the industrial value of the hospital to the community, as well as the humanitarian value, and stated that its reputation and ability to serve the needs not only of Campbellford and Seymour, but of surrounding villages and townships, should not be lost because of future lack of accommodation and services.

In regard to accommodation of patients, it has been pointed out that five beds per 1,000 population is considered proper, and the Campbellford Hospital is serving an area of 25,000 population, a hospital of at least 125 beds would seem in order to adequately meet the needs of this area of the district.

LADIES AUXILIARY REPORT

President Mrs. W. F. Scott reported on behalf of the Ladies Auxiliary. She outlined the work performed by the ladies each Tuesday afternoon in the hospital, where they busy themselves with sewing during the winter months. The winter membership had realized to date over $1,000 and they feel the objective should be reached. The Auxiliary was also a financial success, she reported.

The Auxiliary is continuing the donation of a pair of booties to each new-born child with an estimated 1700 booties being donated since the opening of the hospital in 1953. The ladies had visited the Percy Township ladies' organization where they were well received and accomplished an outstanding public relations job. A membership drive is being conducted locally, as more help is needed to continue their work.

Open house at the hospital is slated for Saturday afternoon, May 46th, when the general public will have the opportunity of seeing the inside workings of their hospital, and of realizing the magnificent and indispensable asset it is in the community.

The Board moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Scott and the Auxiliary.

Mr. A. J. Meyers, one of the key person in making the hospital a reality nearly a decade ago, was present and spoke briefly with praise and encouragement to all present.

RE-INSTALL OFFICERS

He declined the invitation to preside for the election of officers and this office was ably attended to by G. H. Free, assisting in the seven elected Board members being unanimously re-installed in office for another year as follows:

C. H. Davidson, W. F. Scott, S. N. Carr, R. J. Locke, Mrs. Jesse Leach, J. R. Douglas and F. S. Linton. In addition there are several appointees to the hospital board. The entire Board of Directors will later choose their own chairman and other officers from among their own number.

At the Belle

Screen's True Seven Wonders in "Sword and the Dragon"

The super epic, produced in extreme wide screen, natural color, and the latest and most exciting film process, Vitamotion, is being presented, starting today, at the Belle Theatre. The "Sword and the Dragon" tells the story of Ilya Muromets, one of the most beloved heroes of Europe's mythological folklore.

Certainly the biggest picture from the standpoint of cast and budget ever produced anywhere, the "Sword and the Dragon" took three years to research and two full years to film. Its cast comprises 106,000 actors and 15,000 horses. The gratified budget was in excess of ten million dollars.

The story is the result of three years of intense research by thirty teams of experts in all phases of the life, customs, costumes and artifacts of the period.

The picture incorporates the most outstanding elements of the Muromets — seven in number, which, when seen on the screen, will fire audience with wonder, excitement and suspense sometimes bordering on disbelief.

These outstanding climaxes are billed as "The Seven Wonders of the Motion Picture World."

The intense research for the "Sword and the Dragon," now showing at the Belle Theatre, has also brought to light one of the interesting military tactics of the period. One of these, never before seen on the screen, is the Mountain of Men. When the Tugar chief's cavalries invaders needed elevation to view the progress of the battle, and it is not available in the form of a mountain or hill, the soldiers themselves form a veritable mountain of living, breathing men. One of the picture's high points is when the Tugar chief calls for a mountain of men and the men pile themselves into a mountain 100 feet high. The scene of the Tugar chief riding up the living mountain on his horse to view the battle ahead, he is a once in a lifetime theatre thrill.

A selected group of three colour Featurettes will be presented on the same program.

English Mystery Movies Fill-ins for Como Shows

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Perry Como's producing company offers considerable difficulty in finding some entertainment for a summer replacement for the singer's Wednesday night variety hour, has decided to use English mystery movies, cut to 60 minutes running time.

Another hour - long mystery series will be used as Dinah Shore's Sunday night replacement for the warm weather re-runs — unfortunately reruns of the shows that have the same purpose last summer.

Roald Dahl, the short story writer who specializes in the bizarre and macabre and who is serving as the semi-inisiter host of CBS' Way Out series, is also author of a gentle, charming and fanciful children's book —which he tried out first on his own sons.

Way Out, by the way, will consist of new shows through July—and then join the long list of shows using repeats.

ABC apparently is offering an olive branch to the critics of The Untouchables. The hero of next season's The Corrupters, a crime-fighting type show, is a character named Paul Marino. This series is alleged to be drawn from "the confidential files" of a magazine writer, revealing an increasing shortage of untapped confidential files these days.

RECOMMENDED TONIGHT

Summer Sports Spectacular, CBS, 7:30-8:30 EST — new fay time for the feature, starting with a tribute to the U.S. figure skaters lost in a recent plane crash;

Family Classics, CBS, 9-10— Jane Eyre, with Sally Ann Howes and Zachary Scott in an adaptation of Charlotte Bronte's novel.

Quinte COSSA Badminton

Ten district schools took part in the Bay of Quinte COSSA badminton tournament which was held in the Ontario School for the Deaf gymnasium Wednesday.

Team championships were won in the boys junior and senior divisions and the girls junior and senior divisions as well as the mixed title, going to the school with the highest number of points.

Representatives in the tournament were Albert College, Brighton High School, BCIVS, Madoc High School, Napanee Collegiate, Moira Secondary School, OSD, Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, Quinte Secondary School and Trenton High School.

There were 18 junior and 17 senior boys teams and 17 junior and 17 senior girls teams in all taking part in the tourney. Mr. J. Scott was the convenor.

The school trophy, awarded to the school whose teams win the most points, was won by Napanee Collegiate with a total of 41 points. Brighton was second place with 26 points while Prince Edward was third with 25.

Allan Mott and Jim Hurst of BCIVS captured the junior boys title while Bill Caughey and Mike Beaumont, of Prince Edward, took the senior boys crown.

Sheila Owen and Dawn Dale of Napanee won the girls junior championship with the senior girls title going to Kathleen Bonisteel and Jane Wright of Brighton.

Outstanding play by a great number of the youngsters in both the junior and senior groups points towards a fine future for badminton in the Bay of Quinte area.

Walt Disney in Red Last Year Now Enjoying Boom

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The movie comeback story of the year is being written by Walt Disney, in the red last year and now enjoying four hits in a row.

Disney's golden era started with Swiss Family Robinson, which cost $4,500,000 to produce and is expected to gross $7,000,000 to $8,000,000 domestically. Then came 101 Dalmatians, which cost $3,500,000, with $7,000,000 domestic gross in sight.

He expects The Absent-Minded Professor to be his biggest money - maker so far; it could go to $12,000,000 with a $2,100,000 cost. Previewers have already classified his next, Parent Trap, a surefire hit.

LOOKS AHEAD

These are the projects in his future book: Babes in Toyland, his first live - action musical; Moon Pilot, a comedy about space travel; Bon Voyage, a comedy about a family touring Europe; Big Red, about a boy, a man and a dog in Canada; The Castaways, a Jules Verne adventure. Also in the works is a cartoon feature, The Sword and the Stone.

Disney still clings to the old-fashioned notion that movies are family entertainment.

"I don't go for that sloppy kissing in films," he said. "It's like watching one of those French peep shows. We have to kinda' in our pictures — but only if there's a reason for it."

Suffered from Awful Gas, Heartburn, Sourness. This Woman Tells of Quick Relief by Taking Syntona.

"If you haven't tried Syntona Herbal Compound, let me assure you it's a real experience", said Mrs. W. J. Ellis, 29 Ontario St., Stratford, Ont.

Felt Sick All Over

"I was troubled with awful indigestion, acid rising and heartburn after my meals. Gas pressing on my stomach made me miserable and I felt sick all over. I couldn't sleep at night. I was subject to dizziness and spells of what I imagined was fainting at the time. I wasn't eating properly, so I lost weight and felt tired.

"I had tried many different things but it wasn't until I started taking what I really began to feel better. From the very first dose I noticed that my digestion was improving. I kept on taking it and I am pleased with the results I got. I can easily say Syntona without

Canada's First Muskeg Map May Be Unique in World

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The Defence Research Board has produced the first muskeg map of Canada. It may be the first of its kind in the world.

The map has been made because the armed forces need to know how the terrain of Canada would support various military vehicles.

For instance, there would be no point in building an access road to a radar site if the trucks hauling supplies would bog down or be torn apart by repeated collisions with hummocks.

To the scientist, muskeg is not simply bog. It is a layer of 25 to 30 inches of organic material of peat. In it may grow trees, lichens, moss, blueberries, laurel or various kinds of shrubbery and bushes such as Labrador tea.

By this definition, muskeg covers nearly all of Canada except the Prairies, Rocky Mountains and the Arctic archipelago. Its incidence is high in central Newfoundland and in the vast strip of territory extending around James and Hudson bays to Great Bear Lake.

HELP IN MINING

The map may have wide application in the mining field, in the government's access - road program and in schemes for rural redevelopment and better land use.

FIRST MUSKEG MAP — This map, first of its kind in Canada and perhaps the world, has been produced from studies by the Defence Research Board. It shows that muskeg, a layer 25 to 30 inches deep of organic material or peat, covers nearly all of Canada. Its incidence is high in central Newfoundland and in a strip of territory from around James and Hudson Bays to Great Bear Lake in the Northwest Territories. (CP Newsmap)

The work resulting in the map was done by Dr. Norman W. Radforth of McMaster University, Hamilton, perhaps the greatest authority in his field in the world. He has been working under contract for the Defence Research Board since 1949.

The map portrays high, medium and low frequency of occurrence of muskeg throughout Canada. It also gives the type of cover in each area. Regions are lettered and the letters correspond with photographs of the appropriate kinds of cover in an accompanying folder.

For example, northwestern Manitoba is lettered AEI. In the folder of photographs: AEI is shown to be open forest with trees well spaced.

Because muskeg regions of Canad aare analagous to similar regions in other parts of the world, such as the Soviet Union, the British and U.S. military have shown interest in Dr. Radforth's work.

Dr. Radforth compiled the map after scanning thousands of serial photographs of Canada's terrain. He now is working on measurement of the water content in muskeg.

WAGE RATES

The average hourly wage rate in the electrical manufacturing industry of Italy is 40 cents and Japan 56 cents.

WELLINGTON

Many Attend Official Bank Opening

WELLINGTON — More than 200 citizens of Wellington and vicinity called on Saturday afternoon to inspect the new Bank of Nova Scotia.

In spite of a rainy afternoon there was warmth and cheer inside. Baskets of beautiful flowers, gifts through the courtesy of the village of Wellington, township of Hillier, Mr. J. A. Clemmison and Wellington Board of Trade brightened the rooms.

Guests were informally greeted by Mr. H. R. Adams, the manager and Mrs. Adams. Among the honored guests present were: Mr. G.M. Hamilton, supervisor of credit department and Mrs. Hamilton; Mr. W. D. Stonehouse, assistant supervisor of credit department; Mr. P. A. Patterson, assistant supervisor premises department; Mr. Farrell also from premises department of Toronto; Mrs. Allan R. Redmond, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Allan, manager of Picton branch and Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Evans retired manager of the Wellington branch; Mr. H. J. McFarland, Mayor of Picton and Mrs. McFarland.

Mr. McFarland has reason to be proud of this beautiful modern building erected by the McFarland Construction Co. The interior is most pleasing to the eye, finished in dark and light olive green. The spacious counter has a white formica top. There is all the necessary equipment to provide the most modern banking services. It has a large vault, with safety deposit box facilities, and also a coupon booth.

A new addition is the modern kitchen with stove and sink, handy for light lunches and coffee. The members of the Guild who catered for the tea which was served on Saturday found this most convenient.

The manager extended his thanks for the lovely flowers, and to all who attended and the ladies who catered.

Mr. Hamilton entertained the bankers and their wives to dinner at Maple Inn, Bloomfield.

CONGO ARMY FORCES LEADERS TO TALK

Disband Three Paratroop Regiments

Foreign Legion Regt. Officers All Prisoners

Special 9-Man Tribunal To Try Revolt Chiefs

ALGIERS—A vast purge of the police, administration, press and army in Algeria was launched today on President de Gaulle's order to eliminate supporters of the unsuccessful general revolt.

Authorities revealed that 70 Algiers gendarmes have been arrested, a high appeals court judge suspended, "many" army officers arrested, 17 staff members of Radio Algiers suspended or transferred and hundreds of civilians questioned and many held.

French authorities ordered disbanding of two army paratroop regiments and a regiment of Foreign Legion paratroopers.

Formal orders were given to disband the four Foreign Legion Parachute Regiment that spearheaded the brief revolt, and all its officers are prisoners.

DISSOLVE COMMANDOS

All units of paratroop commandos also will be dissolved, declared government spokesman Jacques Coup de Frejac.

He told a press conference 60 arrests have been made in Algiers and said disciplinary action takes against more than 200 officers—including five generals, four colonels and a naval lieutenant who have been arrested and transferred to France.

"We are without news of the three fugitive generals, Salan, Jouhaud and Andre Zeller," he said.

Civilian and military officials will confer tonight to study reorganization of the services and action to be taken against those who supported the revolt, he said. Meanwhile, four Algiers newspapers in Algiers were suspended.

UNDER STRONG GUARD

Armored cars manned by loyal troops guarded army headquarters, Radio Algiers and other vital installations. Officials admitted that despite the widespread purge, they were still not confident government control had been completely restored.

The underground right-wing "army" of European settlers spread tracts through Algiers this morning saying the collapse of the army revolt did not mean European resistance would also collapse.

"Traitors will be punished," the tracts said.

Plumes of smoke were still rising from smouldering ammunition dumps 36 hours after defiant Foreign Legion troops were ordered out of the nearby Zeralda camp in disgrace.

Before leaving the camp 30 miles west of here the troops blew up their ammunition dumps and fired their ammunition in the air as they boarded trucks leading them to Sidi Bel Abbes, south of Oran in western Algeria.

MAD WITHDRAWAL

Some 1,200 rebel paratroopers withdrew to Zeralda after the revolt headed by four right-wing generals in Algiers collapsed early Wednesday.

All recruiting for the Foreign Legion was halted in France Thursday and the future of the entire force—estimated at about 30,000 men—was in doubt.

As the 900 Legionnaires pulled out in a convoy of 80 trucks, orders arrived in Sidi Bel Abbes, south of Oran in western Algeria.

MAD WITHDRAWAL

Some 1,200 rebel paratroopers withdrew to Zeralda after the revolt headed by four right-wing generals in Algiers collapsed early Wednesday.

All recruiting for the Foreign Legion was halted in France Thursday and the future of the entire force—estimated at about 30,000 men—was in doubt.

As the 900 Legionnaires pulled out in a convoy of 80 trucks, orders arrived in Sidi Bel Abbes, south of Oran in western Algeria, that the Zeralda camp...

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis: Scattered afternoon showers were forecast in Southern Ontario for today and Saturday, with slightly cooler temperatures. Cool weather with scattered snowflurries is expected in the northern regions.

PARIS (Reuters) — President Charles de Gaulle moved today to bring swift justice to the leaders of the abortive right-wing revolt in Algeria.

Special tribunals, using the dictatorial powers he assumed to crush the uprising, announced the establishment of a nine-man tribunal to try the leader of the uprising, former Gen. Maurice Challe, and other members of his clique.

The government's official journal announced that five generals will be among the members of the tribunal, along with four senior judicial officials.

Challe held in prison here, has been charged under articles of the French penal code to carry the maximum penalty of death.

STILL SEEK THREE

His three principal accomplices—ex-generals Raoul Salan, Edmond Jouhaud and Andre Zeller—were still being sought today. A Paris radio station reported that Salan was hiding out in an Algiers suburb but there was no confirmation of this.

Today's official journal said the special tribunal would judge "the author and accomplices of crimes, offences against the security of the state, and against the discipline of the armies as well as infractions connected with events in Algeria."

There will be no appeal against the judgment of the tribunal.

Jailed as a common criminal, Challe was given two days to name a legal adviser—or take one appointed by the court—before his trial opens today to prepare his defence.

Using the dictatorial powers he assumed to combat Challe's rebellion, de Gaulle sent police and troops streaming throughout France and Algeria. More than 600 suspected rebels were rounded up. About 200 arrests were made in the Paris area alone, including 15 army officers. Nemone of the better-known members of "Algeria is French" movement were picked up.

NO APPROACH MADE

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Green said Thursday the United States has made no approach to Canada to have waters from the Hudson Bay watershed diverted to the Great Lakes. Replying in the Commons to a question by Deputy Zeralda camp in disgrace.

Before leaving the camp 30 miles west of here the troops blew up their ammunition dumps and fired their ammunition in the air as they boarded trucks leading them to Sidi Bel Abbes, south of Oran in western Algeria.

Next week an American astronaut at Cape Canaveral, Fla., will stand in the nose cone of a Mercury rocket like this one, then be rocketed 115 miles into space and back to earth.

Little Joe VII, a cluster of solid propellant rockets, was fired from this test station of the national aeronautics and space administration with the 3,000-pound space chamber on its nose.

Half an hour later, after a flight that produced stresses even more violent than the extreme conditions that had been planned, the capsule was back on the beach after a parachute-cushioned landing in the sea and fast recovery by a helicopter.

Asked if a man could have lived throughout, project manager William M. Bland replied: "Unquestionably."

The aim here is to determine whether the equipment would work under the most punishing conditions an astronaut might encounter.

The real test will probably be next Tuesday at Cape Canaveral, Fla., with a man aboard for a longer ride.

Little Joe VII blasted off at 9:04 a.m. from this Virginia eastern shore test centre. The space chamber with two ballast-filled dummies aboard rode on the vehicle's nose.

In 30 seconds the rocket lifted the 3,000-pound capsule to about 35,000 feet, where a timing device triggered the next sequence.

The vehicle at that moment was rushing upward at about 1,500 miles an hour.

Later when a capsule is launched by a more powerful Redstone or Atlas rocket, it will attain much greater speeds but at much higher altitudes where

WORLD AFFAIRS APPEAR DARK SAYS PEARSON

Claims Canada Should Join OAS

OTTAWA (CP)—In five chilling words, the 1957 Nobel Peace prize winner Thursday night summed up his view of the world situation:

"The atmosphere now is dark."

Opposition Leader Pearson, former external affairs minister, was referring specifically to relations between the United States and Russia.

He said the Communists' khog - range strategy has not changed, though their tactics have. The West must expect "conflict inside coexistence."

Perhaps the most "sinister" resolution of the Communist summit conference last November in Moscow was a declaration that the Sino-Soviet bloc is eager to participate in wars of liberation." The definition of "liberation" would be the Communists' own.

Gas Govt., Rebels Squabble As to Who Goes to Whom

VIENTIANE (AP)—The West-ern-backed Laotian government's noon target hour for a cease-fire in the civil war passed today with no response from the pro-Communist Pathet Lao rebels.

Proclaiming "we are the victors," royal broadcasts were still demanding Thursday that the Vientiane government send a delegation to their headquarters at Xieng Khouang, in eastern Laos, "to negotiate and discuss the cease-fire and armistice question."

The Vientiane government showed no disposition to bow to the rebel demand and insisted that Vientiane, at the ceremonial cremation of the late king Sisavong Vong.

(The British government today suggested the opposing factions meet under a flag of truce somewhere in the no man's land between their forces to arrange a cease-fire.)

Officials of Boun Oum's government and diplomats were gathering in Luang Prabang for the cremation. But there was no indication so far that Prince Souvanna Phouma, whom the Communist bloc recognizes as ing the legal premier of Laos, and his half-brother, Prince Souphanouvong, leader of the Pathet Lao, would attend.

Souvanna and Souphanouvong are relatives of the late king, and Buddhist tradition requires their attendance at the rites.

Souvanna Phouma arrived back in Laos today after nine months in self-imposed exile.

Blaming the Western powers for the civil war, he flew to Xieng Khouang, in the Plain of Jars, after a host of European and Asian capitals that culminated in joint declarations of neutral support with Communist China and North Viet Nam.

British quarters in Vientiane have said that Boun Oum and Souvanna Phouma must form a coalition government to represent all Laos at the Geneva conference scheduled to meet May 12 to chart the future of the country.

But the declaration Souvanna Phouma and Premier Pham Van Dong issued in Hanoi today treated the Laotian as the head of an unfledged government. The statement said they had decided to exchange ambassadors.

There were no reports from the fronts of any serious fighting.

Drop in Export Sales Produces Trade Deficit

OTTAWA (CP) — A drop in Canadian export sales, especially to United States markets, helped produce a $24,300,000 trade deficit in February, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

Total exports fell to $271,900,000 for the month, down 13.5 per cent from $430,100,000 in February, 1960.

Sales to the United States dropped 19 per cent to $205,700,000 from $253,800,000 a year earlier, and there were also declines to overseas markets other than the United Kingdom.

At the same time, however, February imports declined 12.5 per cent to $296,200,000 from $432,900,000 in February, 1960. Though the main drop was in purchases from the U.S., imports from overseas were also down.

The month's trade deficit—excess of imports over exports —wiped out most of a trade surplus created in January and left a tiny $1,400,000 surplus for the first two months of the year. Last year there was a $22,800,000 deficit in February and a $1,400,000 deficit for the January-February period.

Export sales for the first two months of this year were $828,-800,000, down 2.7 per cent from $851,900,000 a year earlier. Two-month imports showed the same percentage decline to $827,400,000 from $852,300,000.

Following are trade figures by major areas for the January-February period this year and last, in millions of dollars:

	Exports
United States	$430.2	$503.0
United Kingdom	166.7	135.5
Other Cmwlth	63.2	46.0
All Others	168.8	168.4
Total	828.8	851.9
	Imports
United States	573.2	607.4
United Kingdom	91.0	89.5
Other Cmwlth	34.1	29.8
All Others	128.4	125.8

Final Test of U.S. Space Capsule Shows Man Could Survive Flight

WALLOPS ISLAND, Va. (AP) — The nose cone of a space rocket dived its final and most severe unmanned test today with this verdict: it could withstand "unquestionably" could have carried a man.

INTERNATIONAL TALKS ON CRIME MAY BE HELD

RCMP and FBI Will Be Invited

TORONTO (CP)—Do the tentacles of United States crime syndicates, including the sinister Mafia, reach across the border into Ontario?

Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission decided Thursday to find out. It put the wheels in motion for an international crimebusters' conference including the RCMP, the FBI and the U.S. federal narcotics bureau.

"We intend to find out who is behind this drug importation and slamp out the boodlums," said Chairman C. O. Bick after a commission meeting.

He declared the evidence at hand indicates there definitely is organized crime in Toronto and "considerable effort" is being to implicate the Sicilian - oriented Mafia which grew to prominence in the U.S. during the prohibition era.

Mr. Bick's view agrees with those of just about every senior official in Ontario connected with law enforcement.

But the Mafia keeps cropping up in newspaper headlines, particularly on stories originating from across the border.

GOODS change hands

The latest years gone back six months to the time reports circulated that six carloads of United States gangsters had crossed into Canada at Niagara Falls. The reports said they were here to talk over division of crime profits from the high - golded horseshoe that cradles the west end of Lake Ontario from Niagara Falls through Hamilton to Toronto.

Deputy Chief Robert Kerr of Metro police said they would be rounded up if they entered Toronto but nobody showed up in custody.

Another reference came up last month when Consi. George Scott, who doubled as a gamblers' watchdog while also undercover work for the provincial police, testified at a gambling and bribery hearing.

He said of a former brother officer, Robert A. Wright, who later was committed for trial on charges of conspiracy and bribing a police officer:

"I remember meeting Wright in the one occasion and expressing alarm on getting a telephone call from him.

"Wright said he knew a lot of big shots. He said Mike Dermott had gone on a flunking trip to James Bay with two or three r e a l big shots from the United States."

Joseph D. McDermott, 40, of Port Credit, Ont., and Vincent Freeley, 37, of Toronto, were convicted of charges of conspiracy and keeping a common gaming house.

Part then came the Max Bluestein case.

The Toronto gambler walked into a downtown Toronto jazz joint shortly after serving a short sentence for operating a gambling house and got a violent going over from four or five

Aid News Reports Gave to Castro Behind Kennedy Censorship Plea

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Kennedy's plea for voluntary restraints in publishing news that might prove helpful to the Communist appears to be a further reflection on the Cuban debacle and the part the United States played in it.

Authoritative sources here, considering himself a sadder but wiser writer of history, regarded Cuba's rebel invasion, maintained that some news stories written about it were giving the invasion attempt helped Fidel Castro smash the command-to-type force and capture most of the 1,300 men.

Castro himself later bragged that American newspaper reports assisted his intelligence appraisal. However, there is some indication his major intelligence came from spies planted in rebel ranks.

Agree Or Remain Under Arrest Is Ultimatum

Parley City Cut Off From Rest of Country

ELISABETHVILLE (Reuters)—The Congolese Army at Coquilhatville, capital of Equator province, has taken over the town and placed all political leaders there under house arrest, reliable sources said here today.

Politicians under house arrest are said to include central government President Joseph Kasavubu, other members of the Leopoldville government and President Moise Thombe of Katanga province.

The town, where a meeting of Congolese leaders was being held to deal with the Congo's problems, is completely cut off from the outside world, the sources said.

The troops were reported to want the conference to continue and planned to hold the political caps captive until there was agreement.

THEY DISAGREED

The conference was deadlocked earlier in the week when Tshombe refused to go along with Kasavubu on the continued role of the United Nations in the Congo. Tshombe has bitterly opposed the stationing of UN forces in Katanga.

Asked about reports Tshombe had been beaten up, the sources here said: "It is possible that he was beaten by soldiers."

"When the president and other members of the (Kasavubu) delegation were prevented from boarding their aircraft—when they were marched against a wall, their heads above their heads."

The town at Coquilhatville are reported to be under the command of a local officer.

Congolese Army Commander Gen. Joseph Mobutu was due later today but it was not yet known if he would be able to enter the town.

Thursday the Katanga government, alarmed at official silence on the fate of Tshombe, sent an urgent message to Kasavubu and Mobutu asking for immediate clarification.

So far, the Katanga government has received no reply to this message.

The Congolese foreign ministry said in a communique Thursday that Tshombe had been "provoked into armed action" from returning to Elisabethville as a result of a telephone call to the Congo premier reached at the conference.

The report said he returned Thursday but Tshombe did not attend.

Antoine Gizenga, premier of the Stanleyville regime in Oriental province, also reported the meeting from the start.

Nehru Presides At First Session Of Truce Group

He said such action would be

Rondeaunettes Will Give Show For Kiwanis Club

High-stepping dancers, humor, old songs and new presentations in the tradition of fine entertainment provided through the years by the Kiwanis Follies line. This fine show is slated to make its appearance in Belleville on Friday, May 5 and 6th at the Collegiate auditorium. Produced and directed by William G. Long of Trenton, the 1961 Kiwanis Follies has already played three evenings to capacity audiences in Trenton. At the request of the Belleville Kiwanis Club, the entire troupe went back into rehearsal for three repeat performances in the city.

For ten years, the high-stepping Rondeaunettes have added special glamor to this fast-paced show. It is interesting to note that this season approximately sixty per cent of the cast is made up of dancers, singers and comedians from Belleville.

Choreography throughout has been planned and executed by Miss Barbara Dresher, much of the comedy material for skits has been provided by Doug Bannon. Even native Westerners will enjoy the gentle spoofing of "Manitoba . . . and TV westerns take a new twist in the hilarious skit "Shakespeare Rides Again."

Bob Burke of Belleville adds his own special brand of humor to the barely recognizable take-off on the Broadway musical "Oklahoma" that is entitled "Poor Dud is Bald." Among the dancers and singers are other familiar faces.

Janet Kiwanis Follies has gaiety in the modern manner . . . nostalgia in the group of World War One tunes . . . warmth and gaiety in the calypso number. In addition to providing fine entertainment, the Kiwanis Follies through the years has been a source of revenue of between fifteen and twenty thousand dollars for the Kiwanis Club use in supporting charities and public service projects.

Scouting activities

By OSSIE F. LEGGAT

HOUSE OF COMMONS

A bill to change the name of "The Boy Scouts Association" of the Boy Scouts Association" to "Boy Scouts of Canada" has been duly passed by Parliament and given Royal Assent. In French it will be "Scouts du Canada."

Mr. Lee Grills, MP, sent us a copy of the debate and we quote certain passages to show how interested our members are in the Boy Scout Movement.

Mr. Stuart Fleming said:— "Mr. Speaker, although this appears to be a very simple thing, there is a great significance to this change in view of what has been happening in the Boy Scout movement in Canada during the years since the last war. The present name was established when the movement was in effect a branch of the Boy Scout Association incorporated by royal charter in London, England, in 1912. The retention of the old name could lead to misunderstandings as it does not indicate the independence of the movement. . . . I think in their interesting statistic that in Canada today, a relatively small number of boys between the ages of 8 and 18 years there are 300,000 Boy Scouts, Wolf Cubs and lady volunteer leaders. As a matter of fact, Scouts and Wolf Cubs are so numerous in the rural communities that we pretty much take them for granted, and perhaps overlook the fact that this large organization could not exist if it were not that it had the sympathy, understanding and co-operation of individual citizens in every community.

"We have several thousand men and women acting as voluntary leaders and devoting many hundreds of hours during the year to the training of Scouts, Wolf Cubs and Rover Scouts. I feel it is also important if the people engaged in public life take the time to examine the standards, aims and methods of the Boy Scouts Association. There has been no departure from the principles of Scouting as laid down by Lord Baden-Powell in 1908. . . . Scouting is designed to promote out-of-doors activities. A few years ago I was somewhat surprised when I found myself learning how to camp under canvas in the mountains of British Columbia in January. . . . It was a most valuable objective for the young boys. . . . I was not too sure that it was a worthwhile thing for myself.

"All of the things I have mentioned justify our attention and support. The Boy Scouts of Canada are endeavoring to contribute to those things we in Canada like to regard as distinctively Canadian."

Mr. Herridge:— "Mr. Speaker, as a Scout some sixty years ago and Scoutmaster some forty-two years ago, may I say that I think this is a very worthwhile benediction to all that Mr. Fleming has said in introducing to the Boy Scouts Association."

Mr. O. J. Godin, in his remarks immediately after, referred to a great deal about the organization from the province who had been a Scoutmaster for many years. He observed that the French translation of the proposed name is "Scouts du Canada." This is not a literal translation as the word "boy" is slurk out. "I make these remarks," he added Mr. Godin, "with the greatest frankness and with the desire to create the greatest possible harmony. There is no doubt that 'Les Scouts du Canada,' or 'Scouts du Canada,' by whatever name we may call them, will promote in Canada those wonderful things which has been mentioned by the House mentioned to the House."

Mr. G. R. Aiken concluded his remarks by the statement that "The present change will not affect the fact that the Canadian association is an autonomous unit in the Boy Scouts organization of the world."

Hon. W. J. Browne (Solicitor-General) said: "Everybody will be pleased to see the change in the name to the more one "Boy Scouts of Canada."

The last speaker, Mr. Macnaughton (St. Johns W.) told the House, "I should like to say also that I am a Scout and have been a member. . . . In the fall of 1908 I joined a Boy Scouts group in St. John's. It was introduced into Newfoundland by a Church of England clergyman."

All of which we believe will be gratifying to the 1,300 uniformed members and the hundreds of "civilian" supporters of Belleville. Thank you Mr. Grills for your co-operating.

Queen Elizabeth H-S Assoc. Hears Address on Conservation

Dr. T. Burnett introduced Mr. George Wishart to the final meeting for the year of the Queen Elizabeth Home and School Association. "Mr. Wishart," stated Dr. Burnett, "is a professional ecologist, who manipulates nature to man's benefit." He is a City Alderman and is associated with the Moira Valley Conservation Authority.

Mr. Wishart defined conservation as the science of preserving and improving forest resources. In fields, the coverage of land must be improved with proper pasture practices. Water control by the prevention of flooding, the maintenance of flow and also of the quality of water.

DEPLETED SOIL

It is of concern to note that soil losses are increasing and forces the movement of people. An example of this is apparent in the countries around the Adriatic. In Hastings County, alone, there are many abandoned farms. The soils have become unproductive and forced their abandonment. Another frightening aspect is that there becomes no place to go, because there are few arable areas, therefore we must improve the areas where we live. The population explosion aggravates the situation — two-thirds of the world are hungry, are hungry.

Since all of Southern Ontario is densely populated, the Department of Lands and Forests has little to do. The forests had to be replaced, so in 1944 the Department of Planning and Development was formed. In 1946 the Conservation Authority's Act was introduced.

IMPETUS FROM PEOPLE

In any Conservation Authority, the people must come from the people. "The moving spirit for the Moira Conservation Authority," stated Mr. Wishart, "was the late Col. Vanderwater." Two persons from the Township and two from Belleville serve as representatives on the Moira Conservation Authority. The Authority is divided into Boards and there can be members outside the elected ones.

Mr. Wishart also showed interesting slides, some pertaining to various phases of water levels in the Moira River. It is a matter of concern to maintain a desirable level in this river. In his final remarks, Mr. Wishart stated, "Conservation is an attitude of mind." He quoted from the book of Job, "Where there is no vision, the people perish."

The Commons concluded a two-day debate on foreign affairs with Liberal Leader Pearson saying relations between the U.S. and Russia have deteriorated and the atmosphere now is darker.

H. W. Herridge, CCF member for Kootenay West, charged that the U.S. has supported reactionary and right - wing governments throughout the world.

Finance Minister Fleming said there would be no advantage to Parliament or the public in having Bank of Canada Governor James Coyne appear before a Commons committee.

Friday, April 28

The Commons meets at 11 a.m. to debate foreign affairs; the Senate is adjourned until 8 p.m., Tuesday.

100 Empty Beds At Sanatorium Says Reeve

There may be long waiting lists at general hospitals in Belleville and Kingston but at least one hospital in Kingston has beds to spare.

This was noted yesterday at Hastings county council when Tyendinaga Reeve Charles Long said that the Oneyawasa Sanatorium in Kingston had 100 empty beds which could be used to relieve the serious hospital bed shortage throughout the area.

Reeve Long said the hospital beds at the sanatorium were fully equipped and were available at less than one half the cost of the per diem rate at regular hospitals.

quite similar to that of Australia and Britain, who, as co-chairmen of the 1954 Geneva conference ending the eight-year Indochina War, reactivated the commission. Monday they met with the cease-fire to which the warring rightists and pro-Communists have agreed in principle.

East-West tension over the Laotian situation has increased because of reports published there since Britain and Russia called for a cease-fire Monday.

SOUNDS WARNING

Sen said the cease-fire was primarily the responsibility of the parties involved, but added if they were slow about reaching a cease-fire it would "become everybody's responsibility."

He said this was so because the cease-fire must be worked with the proposed 14-power conference tentatively set for May 12 in Geneva to find a peaceful solution to the Laotian problem.

The other members of the commission are Canada, represented by Chester Ronning, and for the Communist bloc, Sen. Mieczyslaw Rakowski, a member of Polish delegates before today's meeting.

Prior to opening the session today in a conference hall here Nehru studied a message from President Kennedy expressing hope for a peaceful solution ending a Laotian cease-fire.

The president's message, delivered to Nehru Thursday by American Ambassador John Kenneth Galbraith, suggested an Indian appeal to Russia for help in speeding up a cease-fire.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States was reported near the end of its patience Friday with what officials privately call Russian stalling over a cease-fire in Laos.

President Kennedy has left state department hands with allied governments and with congressional leaders on what action may be taken next to prevent more of Laos from falling to Communist rebel forces.

New action could include U.S. and allied military intervention aimed at halting the rebel offensive. But informed officials said that possibility had not decided finally on his next move.

A state department statement Thursday night declared "real United States concern over the failure of the Pathet Lao rebel forces" to accept a British-Soviet cease-fire call issued last weekend.

said that the officers had surrendered to the authorities Thursday.

The officers were spotty on the run out from Zeralda.

European settlers streamed along the roads outside the town. A shouted "Algeria is French" as the convoy left.

Hundreds of sweethearts and wives ran along beside the convoy, calling goodbye and tossing bouquets of flowers to their men, most of them Germans and Hungarians.

"We have played our last card," said one European settler. "My main objective now is to get out of Algeria."

But the paratroopers got a cool farewell from Zeralda's Moslems. They watched silently as the trucks carried the legionnaires away.

Railway Subsidy To Be Effective As of May 1st

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker said today legislation to carry a $20,000,000-a-year rollback subsidy on freight rates will be made retroactive to May 1 when it is passed by Parliament.

Present legislation authorizing the subsidy, under which the federal treasury has put up $35,000,000 in the last 21 months, to counteract a 17-per-cent freight rate increase granted in 1958, expires Sunday night.

Mr. Diefenbaker was asked by a reporter whether it would be necessary for Parliament to act on the extension today to assure there is no lapse.

He said the government notice given to the Commons earlier this week would act in the same way as a budget proposal which becomes effective when announced, subject to later parliamentary approval.

The legislation to be based on the resolution now on the Commons order paper will be made retroactive to May 1, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

Israeli Planes Down Arab MiG

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Israeli jet fighters today shot down a Soviet - made Egyptian jet fighter in the northwestern Negev, an Israeli Army spokesman announced here. The pilot bailed out.

The spokesman said the aerial engagement followed the violation of Israeli air space by two jet fighter planes of the MIG - 17 type.

The fighters were engaged by Israeli Super Mystere (French - built) jet fighters, he said.

"One of the Egyptian planes was shot down and its pilot was seen baling out," the spokesman added.

The Israeli announcement said the Israeli fighter planes returned safely to their base.

GUNSHOT IS FATAL

CHATHAM (CP) — Gustaaf Dellfey, 50, died in hospital Thursday night of gunshot wounds suffered earlier on his farm, near Dresden, 12 miles north of here. He is believed to have stumbled while carrying a shotgun.

He Didn't Call Brinks.

Daily Smith of Trenton looked at the cheque and gasped.

It was properly made out, the signature was correct, the firm's name was beyond financial criticism.

It was the amount that caused Mr. Smith's eyes to open wide in surprise.

It was one cent.

Mr. Smith earns a salary which is far more than adequate to keep the wolf away from the door.

But a cent is a cent, and after all, taking everything into consideration, the transaction actually was a return of his own funds.

So he had no qualms in getting the cheque cashed.

But he did not bother his banker with such a minor amount. So he shoved the cheque to a friend, Alex. Macdonald of Lonsdale, who professionally is interested in financial matters of this kind.

During his business career Mr. Macdonald has come across cheques small amounts. The lowest of this kind he had ever seen, he said, was eight cents.

He cashed the cheque for Mr. Smith and will keep it as a souvenir.

The cheque, it was assued by the Government of Canada.

The amount? A rebate on Mr. Smith's income tax!

Danger Concert Series May Fail In Trenton

TRENTON — Speaking at last night's meeting of the Kiwanis Club, Mrs. Nan Cooke, New York representative of the Community Concerts Association, said she was "very disappointed" with this year's sale of tickets for the concert-series.

"I've always thought of Trenton as a town of a terrific imagination," she said, "but tickets sales this year indicate that your Community Concert Association has every chance of failing."

Mrs. Cooke said that the high school auditorium where the concerts are held could accommodate 1,000 persons. Last year's ticket sales totalled 520, average attendance was 450.

"This small attendance is discomforting to an artist," she said.

Mrs. Cooke commended the club on its purchase of tickets for high school students. She urged the members to get behind the membership drive, which ends Saturday night.

"Talk this thing up with your friends," she said. "We don't want the Community Concert Association to fail in Trenton."

'Open House'

TRENTON—An open house, sponsored by the Dufferin Home and School Association was held Wednesday night at the school. About 240 parents visited class rooms where exhibits prepared by the students were displayed. They also had opportunities to talk to the teachers. Many mothers patronized the bake table and all enjoyed a cup of coffee with teachers and guests.

Membership will be asked to choose between Hub Smith and Lorne Twiss, and Tail Twister.

The four directors elected were Sproule Currie and Claude Hitman. Two two-year directors will be chosen from a slate of five: Bernard Fox, Wib. Shier, Reg Tuffort, Earl Forbes and Harold Alexander.

Eleven members of the Havelock Lions Club and five members from Campbellford were guests. Trenton and Havelock are tied in competition to the club whose members have done the most visiting throughout the year.

Three new members, Harold Bleasdell, Harry Peake and Bill Hanthorne, were inducted by a team of past presidents headed by Don McPherson.

Lion Harry Sager extended greetings from the Lions Club of Jacksonville Beach, Fla.) where he spent the winter.

Following the meeting, the Lions were taken on a tour of Trent Cottons with manager Cliff Baker and Bob Reid in charge.

Next meeting will be a White Cane meeting with the club entertaining the blind persons from Trenton and Belleville.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO

Dear friends,

The details involved in directing the average funeral are almost countless.

However, those who attend a well directed funeral have no realization that the program is the result of careful planning. A smooth, dignified service is never accidental but always the result of many important parts of our profession.

Respectfully,
John R. Bush

Preventive Work in CAS Lowering Children in Care

Reeve Brown Tells Council

The importance of protective or preventive services in connection with the operation of the Children's Aid Society, was stressed to members of Hastings county council Thursday morning by Bancroft Reeve J. R. Brown, chairman of the council Juvenile and Family Court committee.

Presenting the CAS report for 1960 Reeve Brown noted that the over-all county total of children in care or the society was being lowered and for this gave credit to preventive workers.

He asked the county to give consideration of increasing its grant to the society for preventive work, at the same time assuring members the county would be saved by there being fewer wards of the CAS.

"I feel that we are not putting enough stress on preventive work," he said.

He said that every family kept together save the county money through fewer children being taken into care.

$4,000 IN REID

He said that per diem rates looked after only those children in foster homes as societies had to look to grants to cover the cost of its preventive worker.

At the present time the Belleville CAS was nearly $8,000 in the red in the operation of its preventive services. He asked that the county increase its grant for this purpose by up to $8500.

Reeve Earl Sager noted there was never any doubt in council regarding the value of preventive work by the CAS, rather the question had been whether the county was receiving value for the amount of its grant. The number of children in CAS care in the city had been reduced while the number in the county had remained relatively static, he said.

Reeve Verse McMurray suggested that if through additional preventive work the number of wards could be further reduced the number on the CAS staff might also be reduced thereby saving the society more than the additional preventive costs.

LESS EMPLOYEES

Reeve Brown noted that this had already taken place as three less employees were now on the payroll than when the number of wards was at the highest.

The Juvenile and Family Court committee report showed there had been a total of 162 cases handled at a total cost of $7,103. There had been 70 county cases and 93 city cases with the latter according to the ratio of cases.

Reeve Douglas Spencer noted the existing arrangement between the county and city for juvenile court costs had been in effect for 12 years and said the city was asking for a new agreement with costs based on the population basis. Both Reeve Spencer and Warden Hamilton said such arrangement were satisfactory.

70 Terrorists Killed in Uganda

LISBON (Reuters) — Security terrorists were killed Thursday in an unsuccessful attack on the village of Luanda, 25 miles north of Luanda, capital of the West African colony of Angola, the Portuguese news agency Lusitania reported today.

It was one of the biggest attacks since terrorist activities started in Angola about six weeks ago.

The agency said the attack on Uca followed 30 minutes of intense firing.

Second Thoughts On Cuba

A Montreal businessman, Harry Dolansky, on his arrival at New York from Havana, told newsmen that the invasion of Cuba had unified the nation, behind Castro.

He and his companion, Henry Marvin, agreed that the bombing of Havana had done the trick.

"All those who were not with Castro were so angered that they are with him now," declared Dolansky.

In the same story which relates Dolansky's and Marvin's opinions, another arrival is quoted as saying he thought only the poor and lower classes support Castro. This may be largely true, but the poor are so numerous that this amounts to almost the same thing as unified backing.

The Montreal Gazette refers to a report made by Arthur Blakely, its Ottawa correspondent, after a visit to Cuba earlier this year. "Within the space of two years he (Castro) has changed the face of Cuba," Blakely had declared. For all the tyranny and cruelty, Blakely said, Castro had the reputation for being an honest man, not a plunderer like Batista, and "the basis of his strength lies in his readiness to undertake the most sweeping social reforms without delay."

With good reason, we in the western democracies have looked askance at a man who mocks our ideas of justice by trying trials for show-places and who so readily executes his enemies. But this disapproval should not have blinded us to the possibility that the poorer Cubans themselves, long the victims of injustice, would see nothing wrong in their former exploiters being handled in this manner. Given time, they would almost certainly have wearied of the blood-baths and have been ready to welcome a more moderate regime. To expect them to rise, though, in support of an invasion by a motley group of exiles, including some erstwhile oppressors, backed by a foreign power and a power, moreover, which had not frowned on its investors bargaining at Batista's table reveals a degree of wishful thinking one would hardly have expected from a realistic government.

Castro fought in the hills and seized power from an entrenched regime, because he had the backing of the masses of the people. He has armed these masses, giving them rifles and machine guns. If they ever wish to unseat him, they have the weapons to do the job, without any assistance from outside. Meanwhile every attempt to hurry the day, every effort to cut Cuba off from its normal sources of supply, can only heighten Castro's dependency on the Communist powers.

The gravest danger of all is that the U.S. may succeed in winning for the Communists what they could not possibly win for themselves, acceptance not only in Cuba but amongst the exploited masses of other Latin American countries as their allies in the fight to win a fairer share of their country's resources.

Busy Border

Immigration statistics for 1960, issued by the Department of Citizenship and Immigration, list eighteen ports of entry, a great many of which the average Ontario citizen probably never heard of, while several other places he probably never considered as ports of entry.

Several interesting facts can be learned from figures for these ports. For instance, the extent to which air travel has supplanted ships is clearly revealed by the fact that more immigrants entered Canada at Dorval airport, Montreal, 30,019, than at Quebec City, 29,035. Or take Vancouver—108,338 people landed at the airport, and only 9,993 in the city itself—these figures are for all arrivals, not just immigrants.

The pre-eminent place which Ontario occupies in travel between Canada and the U.S. is clearly shown by figures for arrivals at Fort Erie, 9,643,979, Windsor, 8,817,482, and Niagara Falls, 6,515,493. These three ports are far ahead of any other—the nearest rivals are St. Stephen, N.B., with 3,273,092 and Sarnia with 3,262,186.

Halifax, N.S., had the largest percentage of immigrants amongst arrivals, 18,976 out of 27,973 compared with only fifteen immigrants out of the 2,693,550 people who entered the country at Edmunston, N.B.

Total arrivals in Canada were 59,064,331, or well over three times the country's population. We wonder whether any other nation on earth has such a large traffic in proportion to its population across its borders. One would expect that the greater portion of the traffic would be made up of Canadians returning from across the border, but of the entries only 29,246,161, or less than half, were returning Canadian residents.

Proper Pace Set for Heart

BBC London Letter

One of the most remarkable life-saving developments of 1960 was the Birmingham heart pace maker, which science correspondent Anthony Smith described in a recent edition of the BBC General Overseas Service program 'Science and Industry'.

From man's first breath to his last, the heart keeps up its faithful rhythm, pumping blood around the body, usually at the rate of about seventy pumps a second. But there are some heart diseases (as distinct from the heart attack caused by a clot of blood forming in one of the arteries) when the mechanism begins to falter, makes just a series of tiny electric shocks, and these are sufficiently large to act as impulses for contracting and relaxing the big muscles of the ventricles of the heart. Surgical researchers at Birmingham have been doing much development work with these tiny gadgets. In the latest experiments, the doctors actually inside the patient, just beneath the surface of the skin. Electrodes are planted inside the heart, while the transmitter, which provides the main source of power, is kept outside the body. Between the external transmitter, the receiving coil beneath the skin, and the electrodes in the heart, the heart can be kept pumping."

Because the heart's rhythm changes according to whether a man is exerting himself or at rest, the pace maker must make it possible for the patient to alter the pace to suit circumstances, setting it to any one of four positions according to what he is doing. Dr. Lee Peacock pointed out, even this wonderful mechanism was not as good as the heart's own mechanism, which was kept automatically informed by the rest of the body of the speed at which it should be beating. This is the next adventure, was to develop a pacemaker which could take account of these changing requirements and set it speed accordingly. This thing is fantastic — and it surely will be — then the man or woman whose ticker-beat regulator has completely broken down will be able to behave as a human being ought — run for buses, hurry up the stairs, and then relax. The heart, with its pacemaker, will adjust itself. Another triumph of surgery will have been achieved.

How to Rate Executives

Christian Science Monitor

In monarchial societies the successful business executive is decorated or given a title. Or the Maddison Avenue man is just decorated — or, to be more precise, interior decorated.

In a Manhattan New York Herald Tribune interview, office design expert Morton Goldin disclosed the flowing secrets of up-to-the-minute for rating company office hierarchy by its decor:

Count the drawers in his desk. The fewer drawers, the more important the chieftain.

Step on the carpet. The deeper you sink, the higher its owner's position.

Notice wall art. Original paintings signify top management. Prints, vice-presidents. Lithographs, the rank and file clerks.

Check the lighting. Top brass rate more windows, less fluorescent light.

We'd like to see more signs tricity, in office decoration. After all, what with trends to an enterprise whose executives can't call a subordinate on the carpet, he'll be quite satisfied with calling him into it?

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR EARL L. DOUGLASS

BRINGING OUT THE BEST

In a square-rigged sailing ship half a century ago, an old seaman was dying.

The crew was a tough one, made up of sailors from seamen from a dozen different countries. They quarreled with their officers and fought with each other.

But the old man's impending death mysteriously altered them. The rough sailors cared for him gently. They somehow produced special foods, medicines, and comforts. But most remarkable, all the trouble on the ship stopped. The men did their work well, and ceased fighting. The mates became milder. For the old man was dying, and the old vessel became that ideal sea-going community — the happy ship.

We have all probably had the chance to observe how emergencies seem to bring out the best in people. When there is a bad fire, flood, or some other disaster, the spontaneous relief operation tireless energy, heroism, self-sacrifice where we never expected to find them.

It is wonderful how much good there is in men; it is hopeful how much of the time that good remains hidden. In a crisis, we may show what greatness we are capable of, but then we may also show what greatness we are capable of, but then we take back to our old second-rate self.

A few truly great people live to the utmost always. But most men have within themselves potentialities of strength and goodness that they rarely use. To you, as an individual, remains the choice of whether you will live partly or fully, bearing interest at six per cent.

UN Voters Get Out of Balance

St. Thomas-Times-Journal

The Commonwealth Conference now has a majority of Negro or Indian members, and the same situation is developing in the United Nations. Africa alone has a large representation. What used to be large countries are being divided into several new countries, although they are no more than territories occupied by specific tribes. Before the end is out, a number of new countries will have been given separate status and entitled to be admitted to the United Nation. Looking ahead ten years, the total in Africa alone is West Samoa, which has a population of just over 100,000, or less than the population of London, Ont., before its recent annexations. Add all the can members are Togo, Chad, Gabon and Zambesia, all of which have only a few hundred thousand together.

The result is those republics has all the voting rights and responsibilities that go with membership of the United Nations. They have the same power in the Council as Britain, the United States, Russia, the United Kingdom, Canada, and the rest.

Science has also fashioned the Nations at San Francisco could not have foreseen the result of opening the doors to any small independent nation on equal terms. It is absurd that the voice of the republics like Togo and Chad should neutralize the voice of the United and Russia. The situation could influence the policies of a big power to play for the votes of a number of puny ones which probably don't even pay their annual fees. A man like Premier Nkrumah of Ghana, who is playing for the leadership of all the African republics and has designs on Nigeria, could find himself kow-towed to by dele gates anxious for his support. The whole thing is fantastic.

The present situation is getting out of hand. It will be worse tomorrow. The powers may soon have to reconsider amendment of the constitution so that contempt of republics shall not override more responsible states.

All Japs Have Own Seals

St. Thomas-Times Journal

Japanese penmanship — or lack of it — is a problem to foreigners trying to do business in Japan. Even the Japanese themselves have a hard time, and in any other people who use the Roman alphabet. This is why it is required by the Japanese embassy at Ottawa, we learn that all documents must be signed by a Japanese. It means nothing to bother with a fountain pen, men. Even if a banker knows a man well he will refuse a loan unless the applicant applies his personal seal. Only then does a document become legal.

A young Japanese goes to the city hall after he quits school and confirms that he may be to his own design. It may be a simple affair or elaborate according to his father's means. He carries that seal all his life and it is used in making identification if he is injured or killed and has many other uses.

When a workman checks in or checks out of his place of employment, he uses his seal.

Last year 1,500,000 seals and 2,775 certificates may be issued in Tokyo. These identify an individual as a seal.

A Japanese official says Japanese are not trained in handwriting. They may have difficulty in handwriting.

We have seen some Canadian signatures that were as incomprehensible as Japanese. Many Canadian should sign their names with seals too.

Men Readers Soon Become Our Leaders

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

In line with this column's policy of calling attention to the good advertisements, rather than attacking the many bad ones, I want to commend a recent full-page magazine ad by International Paper Company.

"Send Me A Man Who Reads!" said the headline of the ad. The subhead said "If your boy reads a lot, don't worry about it — he's becoming a bookworm. Research by International Paper shows that top scholars are also likely to be athletes and leaders."

The body of the ad goes on to say that, in an interview with 100 high achievers who had just been awarded national academic scholarships, nine out of 19 read at least one book a week in the previous month. The total number of books read by these boys was 400.

Then, in an interview with 100 high school seniors who had been selected "most likely to succeed," but who had not been awarded any type of scholarship, it was found that only six out of 19 read at least one book. The total number read by these boys was only 175.

Men who read more, and explored on it, are almost twice as likely to be school leaders. They are twice as likely to be part of at least one service, social or athletic organization, compared with 36 of the non-scholarship students.

It is part of the great anti-intellectual cliches of modern society that the reader is a bookworm, a dreamer, a recluse, bespectacled, introverted and impractical. These stereotypes are social charm. Every survey has shown this to be an utterly false conception.

Children with higher IQs tend to be better adjusted and more outgoing than their less endowed playmates. Students who go on to graduate school tend also to be active in sports, social organizations, and campus life, except for the occasional eccentric genius, who has his own quirks and should be treated with respect for his unusual powers.

It is well time that the business community stimulated the desire for scholarship and make full use of the talent we have. Too often it has publicly sneered at the academic virtues while privately benefiting from all the tools and techniques of academic research and investigation.

Of course, International Paper wants to sell a lot of paper, and a lot of paper goes into books. But interest in reading is commercial, but there is nothing wrong with a commercial interest when it coincides with a legitimate national goal. They are both to be honored together more often.

The old anti-intellectual is prejudice, but far-sighted businesses know that "profit" is a long-term concept, and that we can not prosper as a nation unless we invest in the best learning with the money and prestige that today we too often give to mere cunning and cupidity.

Many People Will Retain Tonsils All Through Life

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I am 38. My tonsils have had pockets filled with decayed yellow matter. Would this cause me to have a bad breath? Do you advise having the tonsils out? Would that solve the bad breath? — Mr. C."

Infected tonsils are one possible cause of bad breath and an example of why brushing the teeth or using a mouth wash isn't necessarily the cure for it. There are other possible causes of bad breath including some lung disorders, nose and/or sinus infections, cavities in the teeth, food that catches in the crevices between the teeth, and infected gums.

I'm not going to say that removal of infected tonsils will stop bad breath. It will if the tonsils happen to be the only cause.

In a case like this, I conscientiously pass the buck to your own physician who, shot to take a look at your tonsils can give the soundest advice as to whether they should be removed.

Here's another question that has been received:

"I am in my late 20s, and my doctor tells me my tonsils are badly infected and that I have them out. I have heard that after removal the tonsils sit, he ages faster. Is there any truth to this? — B."

No there's no truth to it at all. In fact, the opposite should tend to be true. When tonsils are infected, they place a certain strain on the system, just as any focal infection does. Removal of tonsils, in such a case, improves the patient's health, and so should help keep you young. There is nothing like robust health to keep a person young.

In view of the ages of the people who wrote the above letters, it seems to me that it might be worth pointing out that bad teeth are not the exclusive property of children.

Very few teeth are perfect.

Children tolerate tonsil-and-adenoid operations very well, but that's no reason for taking out the tonsils in childhood unless they really need removing.

Tonsils serve a purpose. If infection is causing more harm than the tonsils are doing good, then remove 'em. If the reverse is true, keep the tonsils as the good outweighs the harm.

Many people are going to keep their tonsils, to their own benefit, until the 30s or 30s or later, and — happy thought — there are a great many of us who will keep our tonsils all our lives.

"Dear Dr. Molner: My husband has salivary glands that come and go as large as pouches on each side. What causes this? Is it cancerous? Would this cause offensive breath? — Mrs. P. I."

The usual cause of such swelling that comes and goes is an infection of the duct. It is conceivable that it could cause bad breath. While cancer can occur in these glands, if this usually a hard mass that does not come and does not usually is present in only one gland, not both.

Note To "X": What's Aldrich's explanation of "syndrome" is a group of symptoms which fit together into some disease pattern. Aldrich's syndrome is featured by a deficiency of blood platelets, which are needed to stop bleeding. Hence, the result is bleeding or bruising (which is bleeding under the skin). Also included in the syndrome are eczema and recurring infections.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

A lawyer of my acquaintance has been busy in recent months drafting new laws, written by what are called discount houses that sell under-priced goods to gullible citizens on terms that result in grief and debt for the litigation to the poor emptor who didn't count the cost before signing, meaning the buyer who didn't beware.

"It," says my lawyer friend, "there weren't millions of suckers in this world, there'd be no sands would starve. Suckers are the lawful means of support of a goodly section of the rest of society, and I don't mean lawyers only. Our entire economy would collapse if you took out of circulation all the dimwits, fathead, dupes, greenhorns and gulls. The trend of modern society is to make everybody intelligent, but thanks to enlightenment, communication, we have fortunately been able to prove the mentality of the body politic. If the day ever comes that we shouldn't, and every-body is intelligent, and nobody didn't count the cost before and what he can afford, industry and commerce will practically come to a halt."

My friend is a champion of the dupes. He fights for their rights with tooth and claw. He hears himself skinny studying and searching out the loop-holes in the law on behalf of his clients.

But he thinks they are mighty stupid, even if they do keep the wheels of commerce turning.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

GOD'S GARDEN

The greatest argument in favor of a real God lives in the Earth's garden strewn with flowers!

Who is there who would want further proof in the face of these mysterious, multi-colored, unique creations? I care not what flowers you choose. They are all wonderful. Look at them under a microscope the most tiny flower and you will see wonders enough to astound you.

I looked at a great bore chestnut recently. Hundreds of massed stems, with hundreds of thousands flowers, made it an entire tree look like some snowclad giant. Such beauty and such fragrance.

No one can be wholly bad who finds beauty in flowers. And how filled with latent inspiration is every flower that blooms. Paradoxically though it is, we people who love beautiful gardens and prove their love by planting beautiful flowers are not always good people.

I have loved to walk into thick woods and down steep hills into deep valleys, and along murmuring streams, shrouded by overhanging hide. Every time I have stooped to pick up one of the little flowers that nestle around fellows I have become newly inspired and awed.

No wonder lovers first think of flowers to carry their messages back and forth. No such silence they say so much.

Remember, too, some of the most beautiful of the flowers creep up out of the mud and darkness of swamps in the most out-of-the-way places. So may finds beauty in the midst of we have — certain that it will bear beauty — no matter how unpretentious the gift may be.

Each of us may grow through the lesson of the flowers.

Delegation Asks $5,000 Grant Toward Construction Of New 'Y' in This City

Adding to a long list of grant requests heard earlier in the session, Hastings county council Thursday afternoon was asked to contribute up to $5,000 toward the construction of a proposed new Belleville YMCA.

City Alderman Lorne McDougall, member of the "Y" board of directors, acted as spokesman for the five-man delegation which waited on council to outline the YMCA story. Other members of the delegation were John McDonald, "Y" president; and campaign leaders William S. Wills, Donald Williams and R. A. Pringle, Q.C.

Alderman McDougall outlined plans for the proposed new YMCA costing $550,000 noting the present building was outdated, in need of repairs, and lacked facilities for its 2,300 members.

He said 25 per cent of the "Y" membership was from outside the city and stressed that the YMCA was "doing a good job" for Belleville and district.

REQUEST REFERRED

Campaign chairman William Wills said the program of the YMCA was to develop responsibility and leadership in young people and to develop good character through group activities.

The grant request was referred to ways and means to be dealt with later in the session.

The Thursday afternoon session was taken up mainly with the hearing of committee reports, one of them, from Hungerford Reeve Harold Varty as chairman of the roads and bridges committee giving a rundown on last year's work and outlining the program for this year.

He said this year's construction program would be limited due to regular maintenance costs and other expenditures. The road budget was $35,000 higher this year at $370,000, but the committee had been able to maintain last year's high mileage of 7.5 miles.

Winter maintenance costs last year had been only half that of the two previous years. The figure for last winter was $16,219 for snow removal, sanding and other work as compared with $34,282 last year.

CLEARING CULVERTS

Total cost of winter control for the 1960 fiscal year had been $48,482.

Mr. Varty said Gearing of right-of-ways on the county's a-half miles of the Madoc county road to be rebuilt this year had been started in March and since that time much work had been done.

Tenders for the reconstruction were called by the Ontario Department of Highways last week.

The administration of justice report read by committee chairman Reeve William J. Davis, showed a total of $113,845 in costs for last year. Of the total $35,000 was paid $37,289, Belleville $40,835, and Trenton $816,371.

Mr. Davis also reported on the recent Ontario Education-al Association convention, his remarks prompting a query from Stirling Reeve Carl Bateman as to how effective the O.E.A. actually was.

COCTS GOING UP

He said educational costs were constantly rising and suggested the No. one request from the ingreasingly powerful teachers federation appeared to be higher salaries and annual increments.

The Municipalities powerless to cope with the demands. If they try to do anything "they say they are blacklisted," he said.

In reply Reeve Jarvis said he had been active in the county council sections of the O.E.A. convention last year and had have more representatives at the meetings.

Reeve Victor Hughes said school boards were being forced to economize on each other in paying big salaries in order to obtain teachers.

Reeve Bateman of Madoc felt there was something lacking somewhere in our education system.

"Education is lacking somewhere because it is not teaching responsibility," he said. "We have got to get away from the idea that we can get something for nothing."

He said people seemed to have gotten the idea that no matter what is asked for, somehow it will be provided. But they seem never consider where the money is going to come from.

He said provincial assistance for education had increased many times what it was 15 years ago and yet people did not seem alarmed.

Reeve Pat Fitzgerald said it was unfortunate that education was always associated with dollars.

"If people showed as much interest in school meetings as they did in council meetings things would iron themselves out," he said.

Also during the afternoon session councillors got some first hand information on how to win the fight against weeds.

County Weed Inspector Harry Coulter introduced Ralph Walker, representative of a Niagara area chemical firm who said great strides had been made in recent years in weed control techniques.

EASY TO CONTROL

He said it was now a simple matter to control roadside weeds and brush, while cattail and poison ivy could be killed very easily by the proper sprays.

And, a boon to tomato growers, a spray had been developed within the past five years which would kill weeds in a tomato patch and leave the tender tomato vines unharmed. Only production limitation prevented the spray from being readily available.

The development of chemical weed killers would continue in future years.

"In ten years you can name any weed killing problem and there will be a spray to deal with it," he said.

Quinte Mixed Bowling League Holds Enjoyable Banquet, Party

A warning to the big headers of the mixed bowling leagues. The women are taking over the bowl joba.

And don't we know, thank you.

Last year the Quinte Mixed Bowling League elected an all-gal executive, headed by president Thelma Cooney. She had Aileen Coe as secretary and Thelma Cooney as treasurer.

How did they do?

Lead right at the league's annual dinner-dance-presentation party at Club Canara they put the gals back in office with two chaeges.

The change made had the nerve to oppose president Madeline Hanna and got the voice-uppance by a standing vote.

They named Doris Kravaiel as secretary and Aileen Coe as treasurer.

The four-teen-team 124-player league had a very successful season. So said President Madeline Hanna, M. I hope you did. And I hope we shall have another next year," she said.

Like the predecessors, the party was a highly enjoyable affair. The CNRA Ladies' Auxiliary served a delectable cold turkey supper with the accompanying hot vegetable trimmings.

League championship position winners and individual achievements were honored.

President Hanna presented the team trophies to the 1960-61 champions with handsome individual plaques. Similar awards went to runner-up Bowlerettes Dogs, section "A" and "B" winners.

Kegling the Lowe Bowlers in top honors were G. Clapp, G. Scobie, J. Pedersen, Ray Lavergne, D. Batchelor, L. Pallman, T. Fitzgibbon and M. Scully.

Wally Lavergne won the men's high single award with a 341 with Madeline Jones taking the ladies' triple prize with 764. High average honors went to Gar Anderson 227, and Ann Pedersen, 212. High single toppers were Jack Canning 409, and Lorna Lloyd 335.

Some twenty five bowlers of both sexes who bowled 300 or better were presented with special awards. Only two, however reached or topped the 400 mark. These were Jack Canning with 409 and Dave Batchelor with 400.

A surprise presentation was that of a handsome gift to president James made by Gar Anderson on behalf of the league. The "appreciation" awards were made to Mr. Anderson and Coe Bardwick for their assistance to the executive.

Appreciation was expressed by the president to Bill Bateman, Bowl-O-Drome manager, Jerry Cheeseman and Bill Fenton of Corby's for league donations.

Dancing to the music of Hugo Diggins and his orchestra rounded out an extremely pleasant and enjoyable evening.

O.R.M.T.A. Names 1961-2 Officers

The regular meeting of the Belleville branch of the Ontario Registered Music Teachers' Association was held on Wednesday, May 3, being at the home of Mrs. T. F. Townsend, 19 Hillside St. Sister Mary Avila, vice-president, was in the chair due to the absence of the president, Mr. John Wilson.

The meeting opened with routine business followed by election of officers for the coming year; past president, Mr. John Wilson; president, Mrs. Egerton Boyce; vice-president, Sister Mary Avila; secretary, Mrs. G. H. Reznik; assistant secretary, Mrs. T. F. Townsend; treasurer, Mrs. Percy Veidy; social convener, Mrs. G. E. Martin.

The special feature of the evening was the report of the annual music teachers' convention held in Toronto during Easter week. This report was brought to the teachers by the branch convener, Miss Marjorie Woodard, who, in her opening remarks, announced that this convention had a very high attendance than usual, which showed a deepening interest and enthusiasm and it was noted that the three - day program was full, interesting, and appealed to the members.

ROUND TABLE DISCUSSIONS

The round table discussions were most worthwhile and Miss Woodard quoted Mr. Geen of Ontario who was in charge, with the remark "thought goes before practice." He also said "What is played is not music if it is not the same in another person."

Pupils' practice periods were discussed and it was stated that the best practice period wastes 75 percent of his time at the piano.

Practice exercises were given an important place in a pupil's training, and Miss Woodard gave examples of different exercises in connection with the weak fourth and fifth fingers and the clumsy thumb.

A number of technical books were also discussed. Different points in the study of music were dealt with; namely pedal, memorizing, and especially stress was slight reading.

MUSIC INTANGIBLE

A resume of the Master Piano Course, by Mr. Jaques Abrams, a pupil of Ernest Hutchison, was also given. Mr. Jaques Abrams said "music is an intangible thing and cannot be abstract. Words which are used to abstract become associated with the music. Contrast to one person may mean black and white, and to another it may mean all the colors, hues, tints through grey to off-white and white. Musical appreciation is involved with more than notes, rhythm and dynamics. It interprets life and is a truth to all of the subtle shadings."

Isaac Stern's contribution to the convention was outstanding and Mr. Abrams referred to Stern's talent as fabulous.

Miss Woodard quoted Mr. Adaskin, who made the statement, "Teaching is the highest form of communication and teaching a soul or many souls" and ended her talk with a quotation from Mr. Sokol, past president of the Ontario Registered Music Teachers' Association: "He who would kindle a flame must first glow."

Sister Avila thanked Miss Woodard for her splendid report and at the close of the meeting a delicious lunch was served by the hostess.

MEDJEZ_EL BAB (Reuters) Queen Mother Elizabeth, on a four-day visit to Tunisia, placed a wreath before the "cross of sacrifice" in the British Commonwealth Cemetery here Wednesday. The cross is a memorial to almost 2,000 unknown Commonwealth soldiers who died here during the Second World War.

Mr., Mrs. E. Badgley, Napanee, Mark 50th Anniversary

It is not easy to leave a specious farm home where you have lived almost a lifetime and accommodate yourself to living in your newest years in a small apartment in a new town on a busy street. But Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Badgley, of 55 Bridge Street, Napanee, who celebrated their golden wedding April 18, have a philosophy of life which has enabled them to make a successful adjustment in less than three years and to be happy and content with their surroundings and with the many new friends they have already made.

To visit them is a stimulating experience. They have much to tell you of the excitement of their new life, with its conveniences, its ease, its friends always dropping in and the heartening panorama of traffic passing their window at all hours. Trinity Church and the post office are only a block or so away. The store is just around the corner. And there is time to read books which had to be put in the background on the farm.

But there are frequent references to "home" and soon the mementoes of the former life are brought out for the visit. Here is the picture taken in their bridal attire following their marriage at the bride's home near Selby. Standing before a bank of flowers Carrie Lee Knapp became the bride of Eugene Miller Badgley 50 years ago. Because her father was dead, her uncle, Uriah Wilson, gave her in marriage and he and the minister was the Rev. Wesley Down of the Methodist Church, where Carrie played the organ. He wrote the account of the wedding for the paper, and one reads the yellowed clipping with interest.

The wedding dress was one in high fashion for the day, made by Miss Lee, Napanee's most sought-after dressmaker. It was a creamy voile, with lace yoke and overskirt which fell over a floor-length pleated skirt. The high boned collar was of lace, and long tight sleeves of full lace sleeves, which were tight, the entire length.

Lace panels were used to create a bolero effect on the bodice and the train of the moss satin sash was arranged at the side front. Booted steamers fell from the skirt below the knees. Pearls were used lavishly to decorate the veil. White carnations formed the bridal bouquet.

The bridesmaid was Miss Pearl Badgley, cousin of the bridegroom. Her dress was a pink

W.I. Dream For Community Hall Realized

From the time of its inception in 1930 it was the dream of the Women's Institute at Long Reach-Corbyville to have a Community Hall. To that end they set aside a fund and contributed to it regularly but the dream remained vague. Then the Collingwood Ball Club, looking for a location for an Athletic Field had the opportunity to buy a suitable tract of land from Mr. H. Rogson at a very nominal cost. At this point Institute and Ball Club joined hands to crystallize the dream. Through the generosity of Mr. Mel Payne the club was able to purchase the land and, a further donation from Mr. Tom Peacock, gave the field a right of way. The deed was turned over by the club to the Municipality of the Township of Thurlow and formal application was made for a Community Centre.

Early in 1960 Thurlow Community Centre became an actuality and since that time Ball Club, Women's Institute and interested citizens have worked to prepare the grounds for a ball park, open air skating rink and a picnic ground. A well has been drilled; the cooperation of construction companies in the use of earth-moving equipment has been had; generous discounts from merchants and environment have been given; the use of trucks and their drivers for hauling fill; men have given labor or service, the women of the Institute, the Ball Club and the community have turned their efforts to the raising of the necessary funds.

MUCH STILL TO DO

There have been dances, draws, euchre parties and catering. For all that has been done there is still much to do, and the greatest single item of all — the building of a hall.

To this end the Board of the Centre is starting a week's campaign on May 1st and are confident that the citizens and businesses of the communities concerned will be as generous as they have been in the past.

Board meetings are held on the fourth Monday of each month and they are open to anyone interested.

TOP SKEET SHOOTER — Mrs. Barbara Stephenson, the mother of two children, is Canada's top skeet shooter. A member of the Ottawa Valley Trap and Skeet Club, she holds the Canadian women's closed skeet-shooting title and has won dozens of trophies in competitions in the United States and Canada. Her official average is 94 hits out of 100 shoots. (CP Photo).

Canada Woman Skeet Shooter Champion for Past Four Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Mrs. Barbara Stephenson says that eight years ago she didn't know which end of a shotgun to load. Today she's the fastest gun in the country when it comes to women's skeet shooting.

The attractive blonde widow, mother of two teen-aged sons, has held the Canadian women's closed skeet-shooting title for the last four years and has won dozens of trophies in Canada and the United States.

She got her first lessons in 1953 from her husband, the late Air Commodore J. G. Stephenson, who died as an air crash last year, and Sqdn. Ldr. Barney Harman of Ottawa, one of Canada's top skeet gunners.

Mrs. Stephenson has been shooting practice rounds all winter in preparation for defence of her Canadian title at Montreal this May. Her official average is 94 hits in 100 shots at the fast-moving clay discs.

Since she took up the sport it has attracted other Ottawa women and the Ottawa Valley Trap and Skeet Club now has 15 active women members. They practise the year round with 12- and 15-gauge shotguns.

Mrs. Stephenson says Canadian competition has become stiffer in recent years, partly because women work up more fighting spirit than men when they compete against one another.

Her sons, Michael, 19, and John, 13, haven't yet been introduced to the sport. She says she doesn't want to have them "ruined" by taking it up too young.

LETTER:

Have read and enjoyed your column for several years now. I would like to pass on a favorite recipe for "Applesauce Cake" which I use regularly for children's school lunches. Have experienced a hit with it so will show the original recipe as well as changes I have tried:

APPLESAUCE CAKE (courtesy Gwen H.):

One-half cup shortening or margarine. 1 cup white sugar. (I use 1-2 white and 1-2 brown). 2 cups unsweetened applesauce. Mix above. Sift together and add 2 cups flour (I use 1) cup cake flour and 1 cup whole wheat), 2 teaspoons baking soda, salt, (1-2 teaspoon), 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg, 1-2 teaspoon allspice or cloves. Stir in 1 cup raisins. Bake at 350 deg. F. for 50 minutes . . . Gwen H.

LETTER:

Several weeks ago one of your readers asked for your suggestions regarding improving her coffee bars. I don't remember her name, because it has just occurred to me as I am making a batch that if she likes the flavor of coffee in her cookies, she would probably like the following recipe. I just love them, could eat the whole pan myself, to the detriment of my figure! They are a bit [illegible] to make but are simple and well worth making.

ORIENTAL CRUNCH (Cookies) (Courtesy Catherine M.):

Ce cup butter, 2 tablespoons instant coffee, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon almond extract, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract,') cup granulated sugar, 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 (6 ounce package) cup semi sweet chocolate pieces, 1-2 cup unblanched almonds chopped coarsely. Heat oven to 375 deg. Fahr. Blend butter, instant coffee, salt and almond and vanilla extracts together. Gradually beat in sugar, then flour. Add chocolate. Spread in ungreased 15 x 10 x 1" pan. Sprinkle almonds over top and press them in. Bake 20 minutes. Cool slightly and cut into bars, or cool completely and break into irregular pieces . . . Catherine M.

ANSWER:

Thank you too Catherine for submitting a tried and approved recipe which also fills a request.

MODERN MANNERS

QUESTION BOX

Question — Our son is marrying a girl from out of town. She is living in Baltimore, but the wedding and reception will be in her home town, near Chicago. Naturally, many of our friends will not be able to make the trip. Therefore, I would like to have a cocktail party for them prior to the wedding, so everyone here will have an opportunity to meet her. Our space is limited, so any plan must be kept simple. Is a party of this type proper? In wording an informal invitation, should I mention that it is for the bride-to-be's fiancee? — Mrs. M. C. — Baltimore, Md.

Answer — If you prefer to be lovified is to be small I would suggest writing a short note to each guest, rather than sending an informal invitation. It will be easier to explain in a note that the party is being given in honor of your son's fiancee, than to try to place this information on a small invitation. It is a perfectly proper idea to give a party be given. Do remember however, to be sure not to include in any way that is a "shower" and that gifts are requested. As I have said many times before, no/celative (which you will be soon) should ever entertain in honor/or one of their own.

Question — At a recent dinner party, which was held in a high restaurant, my husband and son ordered roast beef, served with a big piece of bone still in. We were at a conspicuous centre table, and I was shocked and embarrassed to see my husband pick up the bone and gnaw on it. He told my son it was all right to do the same. My husband says it's an accepted practice. If it is acceptable to do this, I will have to conceal, but I thought it looked dreadful. Am I wrong? Mrs. C. W., Teaneck, N. J.

Answer — You are certainly are not! Nothing is more unsightly than to see someone chewing on a bone of any kind, be it beef, chicken or a chop. Whether you are in the home of friends, it just isn't done. But not in public, ever.

Nifty Knickers

By ALICE ALDEN

By now, most of us have heard about Irish coffee. So now we're learning about Irish fashions.

In Dublin's fair city, there's a wonderful Irish designer, one Donald Davies. He is the man who put colours in knickerbockers and he's doing the same for us. Must be so, for the buyers of many of our smartest stores have purchased lots of them.

They are faultlessly tailored of gossamer-fine tweeds or of exquisite Irish linen for the southland, the duties handwoven, hand-dyed and available in an array of exquisite colors and color combinations.

Grand for bowling or golf, we'd opine!

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mr. G. R. — Mom put words into my mouth.

Barry R. — I have to "cover" for him, in front of my friends.

Mr. G. R. — It was a mystery to me when the other morning, my neighbor asked me, "Why wouldn't you let Barry keep that puppy?" It was the first I'd heard of a puppy. Later, Barry admitted he'd made up a tale of woe about his cruel parents, to match the one his pal, my neighbor's boy, told of his! And it had gotten around.

I don't know what parents can do to protect their reputations among the teen set and their parents. Barry's 13 and he's always come to me, not his playmates, with his problems. Now he just makes things up about me, to drum up sympathy. Then I get dirty looks from his "public!"

Barry R. — Well about the puppy, a lady down the block offered me one and I said no, my father wouldn't let me have it. It's true I didn't ask Dad, but I knew what his answer would be. Anyway, my friend Milton was with me. He couldn't take the dog because he has a collie, but he felt sorry for me and told his father. But his father's just as firm as mine and to get rid of their dog.

I don't think my father takes much interest in me in general. When I go to a party or a meeting of my club, he never tells me what time to leave to come home. Of course I have to make things up, like saying, "My father'll beat me up if I'm not home by 10."

Then I can scram, and boy-o-boy is it nice. He ought to give me a few order, though, shouldn't he?

The Council — Parents of Teenagers, unite! You have anything to lose but your "horns." Whether you're strict or, like Mr. R., permissive, you're still a parent and fair game for all familiar ploys, such as "All the other parents permit it;" or "No other kids eat breakfast."

Barry's at the age when it's "the thing" for the guys to band together, and it makes for a better bond to dig up reasonable, real or imagined, armed or defenceless. Parents loyally under all handicaps.

Mr. R. must be grateful that Barry's tales are no worse. Some adolescents resort to real whoppers to regale their peers, such as hints about having been left-on-the-doorstep, or about Phiff's in the family. But he must also see that a lie is a wish, and that Barry in pining for some control.

Strangely, these not-big, not-little children want definite orders for two interesting reasons: As directional signals and as something to rebel against. And strangely too, they usually obey them after kicking up the expected ruckus.

What determines the intensity of their rebellion is the health of their basic relationship with their parents. Another determining factor is where the instructions place them, in relation to the other kids. Certain that they are loved, and that obedience won't make them stand apart from their pals like a maverick, they don't rebel too hard.

That's the design-for-living Barry cravers right now. Easygoing Mr. R. isn't filling the bill. But before cracking down with a 24-hour strait jacket, he might consider Dr. Spock's "to keep in touch with the parents of his child's friends, discussions of, acceptable-behavior agreement."

A printed code, agreed on by both parents and their parents, might result to end nearly all arguments and save all faces. One such document, as a model, is offered for a dime by the Parents . . . 22 E. 60 St., N.Y., 22, N.Y.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Define Adoption

DEAR DORIS:—What is the difference between a foster child and an adopted child?—MR. J. R.

DEAR MR. J. R.:—Any child who is living apart from his parents or relatives is a foster child. There are two main types of foster care, adoption and boarding.

According to the laws in Canada, when a child is adopted, the adopting parents contract to take the child permanently as their own. He then has all the rights to support and inheritance and loving care that belong to a natural child. Once the papers are signed and the term of probation is ended, there is no going back on this arrangement.

DORIS CLARK

A child who is boarded out (commonly called a foster child) is usually one who for some reason cannot be provided for by his own parents for a time. It may be that the family has broken up because of death or unemployment; his mother may be ill, or trouble at home has upset him. Child welfare agencies always try first to improve things at home and keep children with their parents, but sometimes the understanding care of foster parents carefully picked, supervised by the agency, is the only way to carry him through a critical period in his development.

Once the crisis is over or the treatment at the hands of foster parents had done its work, the child may be returned to his own parents.

If the situation means he needs foster care over several years, most child caring agencies work towards adoption and a permanent settled home, where this is possible.

DEAR DORIS:—My daughter of 15 goes to the school dance with her girl friend every Saturday night. I think this is all right, but the trouble is, she doesn't come home when it is over. When she goes out she says she won't be late, and then I lie awake until she is in, wondering what has happened to her. She turns up about half-past one. The dance is over at half-past eleven.

She says they are out in the restaurant having cokes with the boys, but she often walks home alone or with just her girl friend. Don't you think this is much too late for an unescorted girl to be out?—MOTHER MARTHA.

DEAR MOTHER MARTHA:—Yes, it is too late. Young people have to bring an evening to an end.

When she says she won't be late, get her to tell you what she means. Remind her that 15 is too young to be out until all hours. Agree between you on an acceptable hour. Have it understood that if she does not keep her promise, she comes in half-an hour earlier next time.

Then stick with it. It is good for the sense of security of our youngsters to know that there is a line they cannot overstep. You are not being mean to enforce it.

TO M.H.:—Your friend is no friend at all. He drove you home from work because you were both going that way. He has never taken you out. He ignores your letters and cards. Now he is joking about you to other girls.

Any further approaches from you would be sheer folly. As far as you are concerned there are more and far better fish in the sea. Start casting your line in new waters.

Mother's Helper

WHEN A CHILD is an accidentprone, a good disciplinary approach is through his wallet. For example: coat not hung up? Five cents fine. Cap on the floor? Same price. Tell your youngster about your financial plan, making it clear what offenses will cost him cash. Chances are he'll remember to do things you've despaired of teaching him. You must be confident in collecting fines incurred.

Ont. Federation Home-School Assoc. Holds 42nd Convention

At the recent 42nd annual convention of the Ontario Federation, of Home and School Associations held at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, the Deseronto Association was represented by Mrs. D. McVean who returned with a glowing account and increased enthusiasm of the sessions attended.

The official opening of the convention was held in the impressive Canadian Room. With the president, Mrs. John Crooper presiding, she extended a warm welcome to all, remarking that it was the attitude towards one another, and the attitude toward the convention that makes the Home and School convention, as well as the local association such a success year after year.

KEYNOTE ADDRESS

The keynote address was given by Mr. Douglas Walkinton, president and originator of the Canadian Home and School Parent Teacher Federation. There are now 320,000 Home and School Associations across Canada that make up the Federation, with the work now being done by the local association.

A few of the subjects he discussed included: television and its effect on children; the lack of high and secondary school associations; the completed library project in a good many of the better equipped schools rather than in the rural or county schools, and teachers' qualifications.

Teaching year after year does not make good teachers; they should strive to increase their standards, and, eventually obtain a university degree.

This would naturally increase taxes in the community, but it would be a wise investment because it is money being spent for the welfare of children, their culture and living later on in their lives.

SIX HOUR DAYS

Mr. Walkinton gave six ideas in which in a small way helps not only the local Association but the Federation as well; encourage the inter-change of foreign students; try to impress on the School Board or teachers the importance of the study course of Current Affairs in the high schools, so that the children will be more able to cope with problems such as appear in the newspapers today; correspondence with foreign countries, especially with teachers and Home and School Associations; vitalize with new Canadians; international Home and School conference discussions; stand behind the teacher and teaching methods, research is most important in education.

GREETINGS BROUGHT

Mr. Kilroch, 2nd vice-president, of the Educational Association of Ontario, brought greetings and well wishes from the president, saying that "we were all closely related in that the youth of the country was our main interest and concern." He also pointed out that education should not be left completely to the professionally educated. He often wondered at the absence of men at the Home and School meetings; they should show a little more interest in their children.

Mrs. T. L. Morris, chairman of the Courtice Memorial Library, spoke of the good books available; the lending or travelling library, and explained how the library was maintained by the donations sent by the Associations on Founder's Day.

PUBLICATIONS DISPLAYED

The chairman of Publications, Mrs. Denison, had an amazing display of over 400 publications, many of which were free of charge.

A most interesting talk was given by Mrs. Croun, chairman of the leadership camp, on the quality of a Home and School Association, which depends a great deal on the quality and executive ability and leadership, emphasizing the need to send someone to camp for the three-day period. The camp at Lake Couchiching is provided by the Ontario Department of Education.

Mrs. McVicker attended a symposium on "What is your Program; Any Problem?" There were three ladies and one man on the panel and each discussed problems Association have, and how to rectify mistakes, as well as giving some new ideas in program planning.

FAMILY LIFE LUNCHEON

At a Family Life luncheon and conference the principal speaker was Mrs. Hawood, vice-president of Canadian Home and School and Parent-Teacher Federation. She said, "only in Ontario and British Columbia do women dominate Home and School Associations; in other provinces meetings are planned for the weekend. A round table discussion was held with a question and answer period re family life.

There was a panel on Citizenship which proved most interesting, the topic was, "What Price Vandalism".

Mrs. Mackay, director of art education gave a demonstration of art teaching with 12 pupils present, and showed a film, "The Performer", showing what art is.

On Thursday morning the annual meeting was held and one of the resolutions proposed was easily the most controversial enough to be proposed. It was suggested that the word "Christian" be dropped from a public school act section requiring teachers to instruct in Christianity. That resolution, however, was dropped after considerable discussion.

At a get-together luncheon, Mr. R. S. K. Welch said that school policy decisions are often based on officials' prejudices rather than on scientific evidence. One is forced to conclude there is a vast amount of opinion and a scarcity of genuine research to support opinions.

Selling the public on education research is a major public relations job the Home and School could do in promoting education.

BARNS VS SCHOOLS

Mr. Crawford, a public school inspector, said at a rural school conference that TV, radio and newspapers have done much to wipe out the difference between city and rural children. Often teachers find the problem demanding attention before move to the nearest large centre. Too many farmers are willing to spend money improving their barns while they won't spend money on their school.

Mr. Walkinton spoke again at the Secondary Schools Conference which was an open session, the theme being: "Shifting Into High." The question and discussion period followed on various topics.

STUDENTS PUSHED OUT

Dr. Collins, research officer for the Canada Education Association, said, "many students do not drop out of high school; they are pushed out."

School boards, principals, tend to look at high school teachers by how many students pass Grade 13 examinations subsequently. teachers see to it that students with some chance of failing in Grade 13 never get there. They are 'failed-out' in grades 11 and 12.

Mr. Shipley Katz, at the banquet on Thursday evening, was most interesting speaking on "Is the Human Race Getting Better or Worse."

Mr. Walkinton installed the newly-elected officers, with the Federation president again being Mrs. Cropper.

Mrs. L. Courtice was presented with the life membership in Ontario Federation, bringing the convention to a close.

Double Duty Dress

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Optional separate sleeves give this black crepe dress a pleasant double life.

The dress itself is of the type that transforms seams and darts right for so many events and settings the year around. It has the new flared hemline, is buttoned all the way down one side. The sleeves are made on a separate gulmpe.

A good idea for the travel-light voyager!

Club Activities

EGGLETON M.B.

MADOC JUNCTION — The April meeting of the Eggleton Mission Band was held last Friday afternoon, at the school.

Dianne Prest presided over a program that had been arranged by Beverley Stapley and Lois Danford, and opened the meeting in the usual manner.

During the business period Sheila Clarke and Carol White were appointed to prepare the program for the May meeting and Wayne McMullen and Kenneth Danford to bring lunch.

The Easter thank-offering envelopes were gathered by Mary Jones and dedicated with a Litany prayer, with Beverley Stapley as leader.

Cross Canada Survey

3,273 Canadians Killed Last Year in Car Crashes, Another 90,410 Were Hurt

By WILLIAM MacDOUGALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A memory is all that remains of a record 3,273 Canadians whose dirge last year was screeching brakes, tinkling glass and grinding metal.

Another 90,410 were heralded to hospital by a wailing siren or to a doctor's office by frantic horn - honking. Some of these now face life in a wheelchair, others fast on their beds.

They were the victims of 87,792 traffic accidents in Canada in 1960. Property damage was well in excess of $80,000,000.

What are we doing to curb the slaughter on the roads?

A Cross - Canada Survey by The Canadian Press showed that governments and safety-minded organizations are promoting campaigns to educate drivers, weed out the hopelessly dangerous ones and put teeth in laws to punish those who break highway regulations.

THERE'S STILL HOPE

Can the battle be won? W. Arch Bryson, executive director of the Canadian Highway Safety Council, thinks it can.

"Accidents happen because of human error and can be minimized at a time by thoughtful individuals who have developed a dedicated and continuing leadership."

Prince Edward Island: 360 (431); Nova Scotia 3,683 (4,678); New Brunswick 4,197 (4,153); Quebec 1,075 (4,070); Ontario 28,691 (32,628); Manitoba 8,314 (7,830); Saskatchewan 2,541 (2,331); Alberta 4,629 (5,716); British Columbia 2,530 (2,420).

The death, injury and accident figures can be minimized only if done by thoughtful individuals who have developed a dedicated and continuing leadership."

Some solace can be taken from the fact that since 1935 the number of motor vehicles in Canada has increased almost five - fold and traffic deaths about three-fold.

In 1935 there were 1,180 deaths and a little more than 1,000,000 vehicles. Last year there were 3,273 deaths and 5,361,008 vehicles.

LAWS AMENDED

All provinces are taking some form of remedial or educational action.

Nova Scotia has tightened highway safety regulations and stiffened penalties for infractions. A seven-day driver's license suspension now is mandatory for a first conviction for speeding. It's 15 days for the second offence and 30 days for each one after that.

In New Brunswick an amendment to provide a uniform traffic ticket is to be introduced in the legislature. Ontario lawmakers are considering giving police officer power to direct traffic, giving the force control of reeding drivers through stop signs and red lights. The law now also provides a signal from vehicles pulling out from the side of the road and restricts U-turns.

The Saskatchewan legislature has passed a bill providing for a demerit system similar to those in operation in several other provinces. A driver who builds up a certain number of points for road infractions faces licence suspension.

MANDATORY PENALTIES

Quebec is cracking down on violations and asking courts to go harder on offenders. A revamping of the Motor Vehicles Act is hoped to broaden responsibility of drivers is planned.

In Manitoba a highway traffic co-ordination board set up in 1960 is at work. It reviews complaints or recommendations from various traffic authorities and weighs their merits before making recommendations.

The safety council, service clubs, Canadian Good Roads Association and other organizations are working with provincial governments and safety groups to promote safe-driving. The council sponsors six national highway safety campaigns each year.

Licence suspensions are one of the prime weapons against the can't - stop, can't - improve driver. The number of suspensions increased last year in all provinces except Ontario, Prince Edward Island and Alberta.

While figures for Newfoundland weren't available, these are the totals for other provinces (with 1959 figures bracketed):

Newfoundland: fatalities 45 (36); injuries 1,344 (970); accidents 4,612 (3,392).

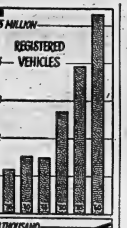
Prince Edward Island: Fatalities 13 (30); injuries 365 (360); accidents 901 (881).

Nova Scotia: Fatalities 105 (106); injuries 2,662 (2,387); accidents 6,033 (5,701).

Quebec: Fatalities 855 (811); injuries 21,467 (19,857); accidents 66,575 (60,285).

Ontario: Fatalities 1,186 (1,137); injuries 34,636 (31,932); accidents 87,186 (81,518).

Manitoba: Fatalities 121 (127); injuries 4,722 (4,659); accidents 12,938 (13,025).



Saskatchewan: Fatalities 128 (139); injuries 4,888 (4,676); accidents 12,202 (12,264).

Alberta: Fatalities 360 (349); injuries 9,467 (9,728); accidents 30,007 (29,087).

British Columbia: Fatalities 294 (309); injuries 11,471 (10,541); accidents 26,091 (25,635).

Yukon and Northwest Territories: Fatalities 8 (8); injuries 106 (117); accidents 302 (342).

All Canada: Fatalities 3,273 (3,231); injuries 90,140 (84,465); accidents 247,792 (233,973).

RATIO DECLINES

Traffic deaths in Canada have tripled in the last 35 years but the ratio of deaths to registered vehicles has dropped. Graph shows there were 1,180 deaths and 1,170,639 vehicles in 1935. Last year there were 3,273 deaths and 5,361,008 vehicles. — (CP Newsmap.)

Sunday School Lesson

Religion Via Experience

By ROY L. SMITH

It is one of the fallacies of our times, that so very many of us are accepting second hearsay religion—the faith that has been passed on to us from other lands and which we have never tested for ourselves.

Surely, if concerning anything one should be sure, one ought to have a religious faith that leaves no doubt in the mind of the believer. it should vonside on his own verified experience.

JOB, THE WISE MAN

No little time and much scholarship has been invested in the effort to discover whether or not Job, the Old Testament character, ever actually lived. After all, that is a question of little importance. If Job himself never existed, then "another man by the same name did", in other words, if Job is actually in literary creation, the problems with which he wrestled are very real. As a matter of fact, there is a sense in which it can be said that there is at least some small part of Job in everyone or us, if we have done any hard thinking about the problems of life and faith.

Job, the Hebrew wise man who has given us the scripture for this week's Sunday school lesson, was no more than an honest man who attempted to face the realities of this world, and who tried to make sense out of life. He makes no pretense at being a learned man although the scholars have been content with his writings for more than 2,000 years. He quotes no authorities, appends no footnotes and claims no "scientific proof". But none of us can afford to ignore his conclusions.

WORLD AUTHORITIES

There is a beautiful story in the New Testament concerning a young man who had been healed of his blindness, only to be cornered by the rabbis who demanded to know why he had received a sudden heal hin. "Whether he is a sinner or not, I do not know" the excited youth replied. "But there is one thing I do know. That is that whereas I was blind, now I can see perfectly."

Concerning the matter of sin the young man was a helpless amateur. But concerning the matter of seeing, he was world authority.

In the field of religion each of us can be a world authority if we will! We do not need to live in doubt concerning Jesus of Nazareth, for example. We can turn our lives over to Him (and let His do with them and make out of them what He will. Thereafter we can speak with authority — unassailable authority.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for April 30: "When God's Wisdom Prevails", Job 42.

"I once knew a man who came home drunk every Saturday night, to beat up his wife and his children. He spent all his money for liquor, and let his children starve. In every way that an enslaved man could, he disgraced his wife and his little ones, and threw a blanket of thick clouds over every sky. Then, one night, he knelt at the altar in a little church at the invitation of an evangelist. He said he turned his life over to God, and that is what he must have done, for he had mighty little of life left. But when he rose from that altar it was never to drink again. Within a few weeks his children had food on the table, and new clothes on their backs. As their bruises healed they came to realize that their father was a new man. I do not know what the preacher's theology was, but I know what the man's life became. I ought to know. He was my father!"

And it was these words that the governor of one of our states declared his standing as a world authority. He knew what had happened in the life of a man who was redeemed for he had been that man's son and had lived through hell.

ANY MAN CAN KNOW

"Any man can know see thee", Job declared. Up to that moment he may have been sustained by the opinions of others of men. They may have been wise and good men. But now he was an authority in his own right. No longer was his a heer-say religion. Instead, it was something he had experienced — something beyond philosophy and theology. And it was something no one could take it away from him.

Once China's Capital City Nanking Converted by Reds Into Big Production Centre

Clare McDermott, Edmonton - born Newspaper man who now is Reuters correspondent in Peking, recently completed a 3,500-mile tour of eastern and southeastern China. In this story he reports on developments in the former political capital of Nanking.

By CLARE McDERMOTT

NANKING (Reuters) — Nanking, where politics has taken precedence over commerce for most of China's history, has taken great strides forward in industrialization since the Communists moved the national capital from here to Peking in 1949.

Foreign travellers are told by local officials in many Chinese cities: "This has changed from a consumer region in the past to a centre of production today."

Western observers who knew Nanking in pre-Communist days and have visited it recently believe the claim probably is more justified of this city than of many others.

Nanking, with a strategic position on China's transport network, today boasts iron and steel mills, big chemical and fertilizer plants, truck manufacture and cotton textile, silk, radio, electronic and other industries.

BUSTLING CITY

As do many other large cities in China today, it is also a busy air of a building site as new roads are built, older ones widened, and new blocks of apartments and factories go up in the suburbs.

Communist press reports say the amount of housing available here has increased threefold since 1949, both in the city centre and in the industrial suburbs.

Officials add that schools and colleges have increased greatly, from five institutes of higher education in 1949 to 20 such schools, with 30,000 students, at present. The old Nanking University, housed in grey stone buildings in the heart of the city, now has 8,000 students.

HAS TV STATION

The city also has its own television station, although it is still experimental and transmits programs for the public only on weekends.

Although still far behind some other cities, Nanking is growing in importance as a textile centre. A big new cotton textile mill is one of the monstrous sooth of the city, while another plant along the Yangtze River has been enlarged. Silk-weaving mills have been established to make use of the raw silk from the surrounding provinces.

In the eastern suburbs, there is a factory manufacturing electronic equipment. Watches, clocks, radios, lamps and electronic equipment—all new products for this city—are made in small street factories.

The new industrial area on the Pukow side of the river is typical of Communist Chinese planning, with factories becoming almost completely self-sufficient economic units, each with its own residential district, schools, hospitals, public utilities, stores, entertainment centres, food farms and subsidiary manufacturing plants.

As the capital, Nanking never became an industrial or commercial city like Shanghai, Canton, Hangkow or Tientsin, where large foreign firms were established.

"There were only one or two big factories that I can remember, as well as a few smaller ones," said one European former resident, recalling the days before 1949.

Chinese Communist officials say the value of Nanking's industrial production now is 50 times what it was in 1949.

The city, expanded to take in much of the surrounding countryside, now has a population of 2,760,000, although only about 1,000,000 live in the urban area.

Stretching for two or three miles along the river, about 10 miles south of central Nanking, are the tall chimneys and brick buildings of the Nanking iron and steel plant, a large power plant, and the Nanking Chemical Industry Company.

The chemical company, one of China's largest fertilizer producers, has between 70,000 and 80,000 people living inside its boundaries, officials say.

Yul Brynner Thanks Canada For Help to T. B. Refugees

By JOHN E. BIRD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Actor Yul Brynner has paid tribute to Canada for its part in helping find new homes for refugees from European camps.

In his book Bring Forth the Children, published after a visit to the forgotten people of Europe, the Broadway and Hollywood star made incidental mention of Canada's decision to accept refugees suffering from tuberculosis.

He cites the decision of Canada and other countries to admit TB refugees as evidence that for a comparatively small sum much can be done to alleviate unnecessary suffering.

He urges a world that can spend billions on armaments to do more for refugees, particularly the children who live in a continuing hell."

Mr. Brynner was enthusiastic about Canada's admission of TB refugees that he sent a telegram of praise to the book to Immigration Minister Fairclough, whose department arranged for their arrival.

He said he sent the book to Mrs. Fairclough "as appreciation of help given by the Canadian government and people did it go unnoticed in Bridge Year." Mr. Brynner has been a special consultant to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees since 1959.

Since the 1939-45 war, Canada has admitted 325 TB refugees and 500 dependents, or a total of 825 refugees. Their admission formed part of Canada's contribution to a World Refugee Year program designed to find homes for refugees otherwise unable to migrate from Europe because of sickness.

However, the TB sufferers form only a segment of the refugees Canada has admitted since landed immigrants since 1947. Of the 2,000,000 immigrants in the present period, more than 235,000 were refugees brought to Canada under federal government auspices.

In his book Mr. Brynner tells of meeting many TB refugees on his travels in Scandinavia.

Mr. Nansmoff was one of thousands of refugees unable to migrate because he was a TB case. Proper hospital treatment was not available.

Mr. Brynner says such refugees keep on trying to find a country which will accept them.

"The refugee is like a man falling in a pool when he doesn't know there are no fish. He goes on fishing in the hope of some day making a miraculous catch.

"What happened to Peter Nansmoff is that he suddenly caught his fish. Canada accepted him."

Mr. Brynner says Mr. Nansmoff's reaction was that of a man rescued after giving up in despair. The news that he could go to Canada sent him almost into a state of shock.

Some Timely Tips For Rural Readers

Now is the time to clean turnips out of storage. suggests Prof. C. B. Kelly of the O.A.C. Botany Department. Organisms that cause turnip rots survive in the manure. The rotten turnips and in the soil that was mixed in with the roots. Dump the refuse on land where you don't expect to grow turnips for quite a few years. Spray your storage area with a copper sulphate solution and fall before you store your turnips.

Maybe you should aim for a 306-day lactation and 12-month calving interval instead of longer freshening and milking periods. A just-reported Canadian Department of Agriculture study showed this: cows milked for 12 months averaged 7,550 pounds of 4.1 per cent milk. Those that were milked 10 months averaged 8,780 pounds of 4.46 per cent milk.

You can lower replacement costs if you keep good hens a second year, says John Walker of the O.A.C. Poultry Department. Hens in their second year lay about 80 per cent as many eggs as they laid the first year. Pullets averaging 5 lbs. when will lay about 220; a 250-egg hen, 180 eggs; a 200-egg hen, only 160 eggs. It usually takes 300 or more eggs for a hen to pay her keep. You probably will have to cull about 30 per cent of a good hybrid flock. Low-producing hens to keep records will be able to cull more easily. Others will have to depend on skin bleaching and molt.

Watch out for worn bushings in disc harrows. So cautions J. R. Gray, of the O.A.C. Engineering Science Department. Worn bushings if not maintained on disc harrows can cost $25 to $35 damage in half a day's work.

Farmers Preparing Prairie Soil for Another Season Have Fears of Drought

By PHIL ADLER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP)—Fears of drought are creeping through the West, as farmers prepare the early parts of their soil for another season of seeding.

Will there be enough moisture in the soil to germinate the seed? Will the crop survive?

These questions and fears of chilly signs fully on only one point—there is a lack of moisture in the soil. Statistics bear this out. Southern Alberta dust storms, lower river levels and drying winds all point to cattle feed and grain shortages.

What does this mean?

F. L. Grindley, Alberta director of water resources, said the drought of the last two years indicates that the prairies are in for another drought period—a disaster that last hit the area in the 1930s. Then many farmers stood by helplessly as their grain and cattle lands became dust.

Officials from Saskatchewan and Manitoba, while in some cases disagreeing with the indications given by Mr. Grindley, felt it was too early to speak in terms of drought.

NO SCIENTIFIC BASIS

Fred Durrant of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration's agricultural division dismissed Mr. Grindley's prediction as a "farmer's type observation."

He said the Alberta official appeared to be commenting on the assumption that two dry-year periods would be followed by a third—as in the past few years. There is no scientific basis for this thinking, Mr. Durrant said.

The normally-optimistic Alvin Hamilton, federal minister of agriculture, has said in his personal opinion the Prairies have experienced the greatest crop because of moisture conditions. Excellent spring rains were a main factor.

A Manitoba agriculture department spokesman said it is too early in the season to predict a drought cycle.

Earl Johnson, Saskatchewan's soil specialist, is confident that normal or slightly above normal moisture would give the surface soil adequate moisture.

MACHINERY IS BETTER

"In any event, he felt that present day machinery in 1961 could not be compared with those of the '30s. Improved farming practices and machinery would enable the farmer to cope with drought better.

Figures released by the federal weather office show that the Prairies had slightly below the normal precipitation during the fall and winter months.

For the seven months ended Feb. 28 the deficiency was 20 per cent in Saskatchewan, two per cent in Manitoba and four per cent in Alberta.

J. A. Griffiths, Manitoba director of water control and conservation, said the three main lakes in the province — Winnipeg, Manitoba and Winnipegosis, have in the last couple of years dropped below the 40-year normal line.

"The pattern is too short for a firm prediction," he said.

W. G. Malaher of the Searle Grain Company research department said there were two or three seasons during the last 10 years when crop failure had been expected but good rains saved the situation—and gave a normal or better than normal crops.

Book on Parole Is Assured Of Waiting List

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A 18-page booklet is the hottest piece of literature in Kingston and district penitentiary librarian.

It's all about how to get out —or parole.

The author, T. George Street, won't be confronted by too many critics. He knows his subject matter as chairman of the national parole board at Ottawa.

The booklet is expected to remain among the "top ten" in penitentiary libraries and is assured of a prolonged waiting list.

Those serving a sentence of two years or more in a federal prison must complete one year before parole can be granted. Those serving three years and over must complete one-third of the sentence or four years—whichever is the shorter.

"Lifers" serving a commuted death sentence have to wait 10 years before seeking a parole. Convicts on an ordinary life sentence must put in a seven-year stretch.

The booklet has 13 chapters and contains a copy of the parole act and parole regulations.

Mr. Street says "parole is not leniency, clemency or mercy. . . . The make-test is whether or not you have changed your attitude and materially improved behave properly in the future."

The parole board, he says, is obliged to help as many prisoners as it possibly can. "But you must be willing to help yourself. If you do not want to help yourself, probably no one can help you."

Aims of the board are to consider the offender rather than the offence and "to deal with offenders as individuals and not as members of a group."

Alberta Teachers Want Hutterites in Their Schools

By RON MacDONALD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Teachers' Association has asked the provincial government to study the possibility of integrating into the Alberta school system more than 7,000 children now attending their own schools in Hutterite colonies and on Indian reserves.

The request by the organization representing 12,000 teachers was prompted by recommendations of the Cameron commission on education in Alberta.

The commission, headed by Senator Donald Cameron, said the same basic educational standards and emphasis on citizenship should be required in Hutterite schools as in all other Alberta schools.

The commission said a study should be made to determine whether integration of Indian students is desirable. If it is, non-Indian children should be educated in the heritage of the Indians to smooth the integration process.

Hutterites, a religious sect of pacifists, live in communal colonies of about 90 persons. The German - and English-speaking people rarely leave their colonies from birth to death, make their living by farming. Their children go to work on the communal farm as soon as they can be legally withdrawn by their elders. Hutterites in Alberta this is at the age of 15 or on completion of grade IX.

While Alberta's Indians, through a brief presented to the Cameron commission, have indicated their willingness to be integrated into Alberta schools, officials of the ATA who have dealt with the matter feel there will be resistance to integration from the Hutterites.

The education of Hutterite children in schools of their own is largely a result of decisions by Alberta courts.

There now are 57 tiny Hutterite schools in Alberta providing instruction for 1,250 children. These schools, except for three owned by the sect itself, are financed in the same way as all Alberta public and separate schools—by taxes and provincial grants.

The Hutterites pay municipal and school taxes.

Teachers at Hutterite schools qualify under the same regulations as those in Alberta public schools and earn hired in the same way as public school teachers—by school boards.

Indian residential schools, built and operated by grants of the federal government, number 47. These schools, run by churches and assisted on or near Alberta's 50 Indian reserves, provide instruction for 5,800 children.

The curriculum in Indian residential schools and Hutterite schools is the same as that used in Alberta's public schools.

Not all Indian residential schools provide instruction up to grade XII and almost 1,000 Indian children are attending school with non-Indian pupils to obtain their high school education.

Teachers for the Indian residential schools are hired by the federal government.

President Getting Good Press In Canada for His Resolute Stand on Cuban Situation

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With a few exceptions, a tough, yes talking John F. Kennedy is getting a good press in Canada for his resolute stand on Cuba.

The weight of editorial opinion in Canadian newspapers is behind the U.S. president when he says "we do not intend to abandon Cuba to communism."

Some reflect nagging fears that perhaps he has gone a little too far in declaring that the United States reserves the right to intervene by force to deal with "Communist penetration" of the Western Hemisphere.

Several suggest that a sound program of economic assistance is to be preferred to threats of force to keep communism out.

The consensus appears to be that the United States blundered in lending assistance to the immature invasion and that Washington's prestige has been damaged by the failure of the attack.

By and large, the press of Canada applauds President Kennedy's declaration that he will not permit the traditional inter-American policy of non - intervention to prevail or excuse a policy of inaction.

"U.S. irresolution could have tempted the Kremlin to a really dangerous gamble," says the Vancouver Province.

No doubt the invasion was premature, it declares, "but if the U.S. could have known the studies the alternatives that confront the American administration will agree that from the viewpoint of the West, Mr. Kennedy and his aides were right about the only thing they could do."

Says the Halifax Chronicle-Herald: "Mr. Kennedy, we think, has chosen the proper moment to resort to language that the Soviets and their Red Chinese comrades best understand and respect."

Ottawa Journal: "It must be clear to Mr. Khrushchev that the U.S. could never stand by and allow Cuba, 90 miles from the American mainland, to become a major Communist base."

The News, St. John's, Nfld.: "... This is one area for which aide the Russian sphere of interest—that Khrushchev's menacing words are an intolerable affront to the security of the whole American continent."

Niagara Falls Review: "Many Canadians have serious reservations to the Kennedy policy but do they wish to surrender to Russia a country within sight of the Florida coast within striking distance of Central and South America where they can easily infiltrate a dozen others? The Americans do not and let they do we."

Also critical is the Winnipeg Free Press: ". . . The action is one of desperation, not one based on something more than the expedience of power politics. The United States is to move in and impose a democratic form of government on the Cubans by force of arms would arouse tremendous resentment not only throughout Latin America . . . but in the United States itself."

The question of how deeply involved Moscow is in the Cuban crisis is a matter for a small number of newspapers.

The Regina Leader-Post: Cuba is not merely a civil war but part of the global East-West struggle. . . . "It would be folly for Washington to meet it in anything else."

Montreal Star: "Castro . . . whether Communist or fellow-traveller, is more deeply entrenched . . . the struggle now is between Castro and Premier Khrushchev out rather than getting Castro out."

The Toronto Telegram Standard calls for constructive efforts to meet the Communist challenge.

"Both the United States and Canada are now deeply concerned about the beachhead for establishment of a Communist satellite state on that hemisphere. That concern should result in detailed efforts to heal the breach by assistance to the people of Latin America rather than by condemnation of them."

Windsor Star: "The principal danger to democracy in this hemisphere lies within the hemisphere itself, and not from the outside."

Despite Denials U.S. Had Lot to Do With Invasion

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

In thousands of words of denial, the United States has convinced almost everybody that it did, in fact, have a lot to do with the invasion of Cuba.

The whole American attitude toward the Cuban debacle appears to be an easy to unreasonably with the age - old redeeming face being the early end of the fighting.

Efforts to penetrate the official American thinking have been baffled by the conflict and apparent diplomatic evasion of statements from Washington. Perhaps the only frank admission is that Washington does not like Premier Castro.

President Kennedy, while rejecting U.S. responsibility for the invasion, willingly accepted responsibility for its failure and insisted the blame should rest only with his Democratic administration.

Kennedy wanted it to "be understood by all" that the former Republican administration could not be credited with the abortive try, although former vice - president Richard Nixon had advocated the overthrow of Castro for two years.

CIA IN SPOTLIGHT

The affair has renewed suspicions that the chief U.S. spy agency, far from embarrassing bright beginner, has instead managed to put its own government on the spot.

This could, the Central Intelligence Agency won even more prominent headlines after the shooting down on May 1, 1960, of an American spy-plane over the Soviet Union. Then - president Dwight Eisenhower assumed full responsibility for the flight, an act which caused diplomatic ripples around the world to raise eyebrows while Soviet Premier Khrushchev raised the roof.

The tragic attack on Cuba by a force of Cuban exiles using small scale and there is much evidence that the U.S. government-trained air force would be supported by an uprising of Cuban nationals who had a role in this but its function is still in dispute.

The Communist threat the U.S. has regarded itself as the protector of the Americas in the international law, the charter of the United Nations, or the charter of the Organization of American States favors intervention in the face of an internal affairs of its island neighbor.

The eloquence of U.S. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson in the United Nations made a convincing case against the country's tyranny in Cuba but the world body rejected his plea for conciliation by the OAS, apparently because the hemisphere organization is dominated by the U.S.

Kennedy's actions since the invasion indicate he wants in future to free a clearer picture of what the CIA is doing, and what it makes its decisions.

By its nature, the spy agency budget is not subject to review by Congress — has wide scope for independent action, far exceeding the mere business of gathering information.

Kennedy has ordered a full and complete review of the security activities of the government, including the CIA, raising the question whether the agency will again be placed under the supervision of a cabinet watchdog committee, as it was in its early days.

Resume Talks In Effort to Halt Strike

MONTREAL (CP)—Canada's two major railroads and representatives of their non-operating workers were to continue talks today to see if a nation - wide strike can be avoided.

The 15 non-op unions have called a strike for May 16 to back up their demands for higher wages as recommended by a conciliation board report last Aug. 24.

After closed-door talks Thursday, the parties made no announcement but it was learned for new negotiations and meetings are to continue throughout the weekend if necessary.

The union negotiating team is headed by Frank Hall. It represents 111,000 non-operating workers— those who do not actually operate the trains.

The railways were said to have made new proposals.

Before negotiations began, the railways maintained they could not afford to pay the 14-cent hourly wage increase recommended by the conciliation board.

FAST GUESSING

It is believed, however, CPR President N. R. Crump and CNR President Donald Gordon have been given hints by the government that legislation will be introduced to ease their financial positions.

They were in Ottawa last week for talks with the Cabinet.

The MacPherson royal commission on transportation recommended earlier this month that the government grant subsidies on a declining scale to the railways.

The subsidy will be $97,300,000 this year and decline by $10,000,000 a year in five years. The object would be to help the railways reduce or eliminate uneconomical services.

The unions originally asked for a 25-cent hourly pay boost. They accepted the report of the conciliation board recommending a 14-cent boost in three stages over a three-year contract.

The present basic wage rate is $1.77 an hour.

Bitter Wrangling Between Two Factions of Union Push Convention Into Fifth Day

SUDBURY (CP) — Bitter wrangling between two factions Thursday pushed the scheduled three-day District 2 convention of the International Union of Mill and Smelter Workers into a fifth day.

The fourth-day sessions ended abruptly Thursday night when, after an hour's heated debate, Mike Solski, District 2 president and convention chairman, adjourned proceedings on grounds of disorder.

The evening session was to have heard delegates from Local 598, largest local in the district and leader in the battle against the district's presidency, present an appeal against last June's election of district officers.

Don McNabb, vice president of Local 598, applied to present the appeal Wednesday. Solski at first objected on the grounds he put a motion on the floor to the appeal be added to the agenda, but then agreed to submit the question to a committee.

The committee met Thursday morning and agreed to set up the appeal during the afternoon. But Solski objected that he would not hear it, and that to postpone the appeal, it was then agreed to postpone the question until Thursday night.

But Thursday night the Local 598 delegates demanded that the convention first hear the report of the committee on the district's political action committee by Ray Poirier, financial secretary of the local.

Poirier had started reading his report on accusing the district's leadership of Communist sympathies in the morning, but session was interrupted by the noon adjournment.

Turmoil developed when the chair ruled that discussion on the election appeal should come first.

Local 598 President Don Gillis asked the delegates to register their protests against the chairman's "dictatorial decision" but in the interests of keeping the convention alive, to submit to the ruling.

The Local 598 delegates remained standing in the floor microphone in turn to register their protests as the chairman tried to proceed with the election appeal. They were followed by other delegates to the microphone to the chair.

Amid the confusion Solski adjourned the convention.

Solski also prematurely adjourned the afternoon session after a wrangle over whether to hear Poirier's report. But after the adjournment delegates from Locals 598 and 637 Port Colborne) stayed to listen to it.

The majority report had recommended no political affiliation. The minority report alleged that the International Mine-Mill is directly connected with a political party and cited instances which purported to prove that officers at both national and district level are connected or have been connected with the Communist party.

The report also recommended that the union have no direct affiliation to any political party nor give support to any party that advocates dictatorship, such as fascism or communism, but that it support all democratic parties in Canada and seek co - operation with them to further labor's goal.

In the morning Mr. Gillis appealed to all remaining on the assembly floor to get supporters to the night's hearing "to see how we are being treated for $20,000 a year." That is what the 17,500 members of Local 598 pay in dues each month.

Quebec Legislature Embarked On Longest Session in History

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec legislature has embarked on what is to be the longest session in its 94-year history. In British Columbia, critics say the province's program may also come to be regarded as a landmark.

Premier Lesage's legislative meeting up remarkably, today equal a session record set in 1932 under the Liberal administration of the late Alexandre Taschereau. It opened Jan. 5 and closed after 76 days of sitting.

The current session opened Nov. 30. With 20 bills still to come down and record estimates of $1,000,000,000 to be expected to prorogue for another six weeks.

Policy changed in the wake of the political upheaval brought about in June, 1960, by Premier Duplessis and the victory of his polls led Jean Lesage, premier Jean Lesage's revitalized Quebec Liberal party are one factor keeping legislative members on the job. Another has been the vocal opposition of the Union Nationale to the Liberal program.

Everything that could possibly happen—short of dissolution and the calling of a premature election — seems to have happened during the present session.

There have been three resignations in the opposition of the two byelections, the last-minute appearance of a new opposition leader.

There was even the open threat of a sudden dissolution and the calling of a provincial election when the going became rough.

The one single big reason for the tremendous volume of work ture.

Steelmen Told Unemployment Likely to Rise

HAMILTON (CP) — Unemployment may rise to 10 per cent of the labor force in spite of some recovery from the recession in 1961, a labor union economist said Thursday.

Harry J. Waisglass, assistant research director of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC) made the statement in a report on the country's economy to the steelworkers' national policy conference.

Mr. Waisglass said the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate of 7.2 per cent for the labor force in 1960 will increase this year if gross national expenditure fails to rise more than three per cent.

"The adjustment of trade and commerce forecasts further declines in 1961 from the high 1960 levels of business spending on plant, machinery and equipment," he said. "Therefore, much greater increases are required in the consumer-and government-spending sectors in order to take up the slack and keep the minimum five-per-cent growth."

He said an additional five per cent of job opportunities must be created each year to reduce present unemployment.

RAPS AID PROGRAM

H. W. Abel of Pittsburgh, international secretary - treasurer of the union, criticized the administration of President Kennedy for being more concerned with foreign aid than with the plight of its own people.

He said it is "asinine" to spend $4,000,000,000 in foreign aid while proposing to spend only $394,000,000 for relief of depressed areas in the United States.

William Mahoney, USWA national director for Canada, told the Winnipeg Free Press publication in British Columbia appears to be aimed at wiping out opposition to the Social Credit government.

He said the government recently adopted legislation which denies the right to strike over a dispute to union which supports a political party, he said.

LETTER CHANGING

He stressed the need to organize technicians and similar workers because technological advances are changing the character of the labor force.

Larry Sefton, director of District 6, which covers a region including Ontario and British Columbia, criticized the federal government for appointing labor representatives to the 25-man national productivity council instead of the Canadian Labor Congress.

"The labor force is represented," he said.

Mr. Sefton also criticized Labor Minister Starr for leaving the solution to Canada's economic problems to industry and labor.

"Golly!" exclaimed Len. "I guess that's possible."

"Maybe, but listen. He also insisted that the centre of his casket should lie exactly nine feet from all the five corners of the stone."

Pity the poor executor! Can you figure out the possible dimensions of the stone?

Record Rents High, Apartment Rents Hold Firm Despite Increase in Number

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The restless tide of renters, quiet during the long Canadian winter, begins running again in earnest May 1.

With a surge like the ice going out in the spring, the cliff-dwellers and accompanying women's houses begin the migration that swells to a peak in the summer and dies away again in the fall.

What will the nomads find this year: The situation varies from province to province but there is an over-all picture. It must be "little change from last year."

In a cross-Canada survey, The Canadian Press found that for those wishing to put down roots, mortgage money appears easier to come by. Generally, house costs remain high in many areas and apartment rents hold firm despite an increase in the number of apartments available.

Only in parts of Quebec and New Brunswick is there an immediate problem. Rents are high and, to a lesser extent, in Regina. May 1 traditionally moving day.

And Regina reports the price is falling. Rents are down to 15 per cent lower than they were in 1960. There are more units — the two-bedroom apartment—brings $85 a month this year; last year it was $100.

Quebec City also reports a drop in the average rental value of power compared with 6,000 last year and 8,000 in 1959 in the Quebec City area.

"It's not hard to find a place," says Valmont Gosselin, city statistician. Last year 625 apartment units were added and the rents for a two-bedroom apartment held firm at $80 to $85 a month.

Rents are higher in Montreal than they were two years ago, but slightly down from last year. The two-bedroom, modern unit goes for $90 to $100.

Saint John, N.B., reports moving generally is heavy this time of the year, but with April 26 to May 3 the busiest period. Average monthly rent is $90 to $95, a slight increase over last year.

"For one reason or another, people are desperate in their urgency to find accommodations," says Mrs. Lyall Boyd, executive secretary of the Saint John Family Welfare Bureau.

"We are almost as hard-pressed as we were in the United States

Police Want Johnny Papalia

TORONTO (CP) — Police here have sent a description of Johnny Papalia, wanted on a charge of assisting a prisoner, Max Bluestein, to all Canadian border offices.

There is no picture but police described him as "Johnny Papalia, alias Johnny Papa, male, white, 5' 9½", medium build, black hair, dark brown complexion with caution."

Deputy Police Chief George Elliott said Canadian police forces have not been asked for aid in the matter.

Three others have been charged in connection with the March 21 breaking of Bluestein.

He said three other investors have been named in the purchase left Dimensional during the inquiry "and left us cold." WITHDRAWAL

Earlier, citizenship minister Pickersgill said the dealings with the Indian band told them the contract with Dimensional was void.

She said during the 30 days after the city's application for Dimensional's payment of the $4,500,000 owing the Indians, action was to be initiated which came to me to indicate that an injunction was wanted."

The minister added she was not sure whether she could legally have extended the deadline.

Mrs. Fairclough said her policy as associate-general of Indians was not to dictate to them what to do but to tell them whether certain alternatives can be done legally.

"You are intelligent people, and you can make decisions on your own."

Investment Co. May Take Legal Action in Land Deal

SARNIA (CP) — An embittered director of Dimensional Investments Limited Thursday said he planned legal action to recover money he said his company lost through cancellation of a $6,000,000 land purchase from the Sarnia Indian reservation.

Howard Ray of Toronto made his announcement after the Indian band voted Wednesday in considering any new proposals from Dimensional to complete the deal cancelled by the federal government April 17.

"In view of the way we were treated tonight," he said, "I would say legal alternative but to take legal action."

Mr. Ray said he has been prepared to offer the Indians the $1,000,000 payment within 30 days plus a 6% interest payment with the $3,500,000 balance owed the Indians which would have after this payment spread over three more years.

He said he had also secured the world in an attempt to raise money for the project, "if I couldn't do it through you."

"My father, Samuel Ray, who is president of Canada Packers, Ley Ray, secretary - treasurer and myself have suffered," he said. "We've been taken to the

After rejecting the Dimensional proposal, the Indians unanimously to seek immediate distribution of more than $1,-000,000 held in trust by the government.

Mr. Ray said he will instruct the firm's solicitor to institute action "as either the Indians which did not change hands, or to have a new agreement drawn up under which Dimensional will be bought "to tie up the land" until one or other of the company's objectives are completed.

Mr. Ray blamed politics and a Royal Commission inquiry into Dimensional's deals at

THE ONTARIO HOME FAIR

Everything's Convenient

THE EXTERIOR OF TODAY'S HOME, Design H-467-KF, is attractive as the dwelling's interior is efficient. Construction is frame. Note how the breezeway and the garage, at left, add to the dwelling's architectural beauty.

A BUILT-IN OVEN and range are placed convenient to the food preparation centre, at left, and a dining nook, at right.

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

That's how a classified ad might sum up today's home. Not the description, appealing as it is, does not do Design H-467-KF justice. It's a gem of a house, and for more reasons than one.

Private Baths

There are three bedrooms and two baths, but the latter are placed so that each bedroom has its own bath.

It may not be good arithmetic, but it's excellent planning on the architect's part.

The home's main bath, just a step away from the front bedroom, is close to the foyer and the living area.

The second bath is centered between the two remaining bedrooms, and is accessible from either.

Generous Closets

All bedrooms have generous closet space.

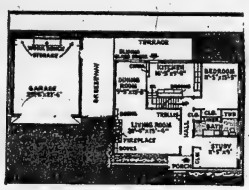
The back master bedroom is a winner. It not only has two closets—one for Mr., the other for Mrs.—but it also boasts a built-in vanity and sliding plank doors that open on a covered terrace.

The living-working area of the house is equally arranged.

The living room faces out on the street. A wonderfully wide window "captures" a picture view of the front lawn. The fireplace, flanked by built-in bookcases, highlights the end wall.

For convenience, sliding doors can be closed to shut off the living room from the entry-foyer or from the dining room.

Open planning links dining room, breakfast nook and kitchen, yet each has its separate identity. When desired, sliding doors separate dining room and breakfast nook.



Access To Terrace

In the dining room and the breakfast nook have access to the terrace via sliding doors.

Just a step away, the kitchen boasts an efficient L-shaped setup for sink, cabinets and refrigerator. A built-in range is placed so that it's convenient to the kitchen food prepared in centre and also close to the breakfast nook and dining room.

The basement stairs are accessible from the kitchen.

A breezeway, which joins with the covered terrace at back, links the home and a two-car garage.

TWO BATHS SERVE three bedrooms. At back, open planning links kitchen, the breakfast nook and dining room.

The latter provides additional storage space and also has a work bench for the home handyman.

Design H-467-KF comprises 20,783 cubic feet; 1,582 square feet for the house and 338 square feet for the garage.

Stainless Steel Plays Lead Role in the Modern Kitchen

The kitchen of 1961 is practical as well as glamorous. This trend began during the servant shortage of the past few years, when the mistress of the house took to the kitchen herself. Once in the kitchen, however, she rapidly discovered that glamor wasn't enough. Now she wanted the materials that were the easiest to clean and the most difficult to scratch, stain or mar. She wanted appliances that were built in such a way that they were both convenient and out of the way.

Stainless steel answered many of these needs. Literally as strong as steel, it is almost impossible to wear out or dent. Its non-porous surfaces resist rust and stains and make it the easiest metal to clean. It is the same material throughout; hence, it will never chip or wear out.

One of the greatest kitchen revolutions took place in the kitchen sink, which developed from one bowl to two or three, acquired a built-in garbage disposal, a rivaling spindless faucet that reached all bowls, a fitted vegetable basket, a separate shallow bowl for soaking vegetables or fruits, corner drains to eliminate the risk of glassware tipping, built-in power units with outlets for food mixer, blender and knife sharpener and often a heavy cover of either stainless or wood which fitted one bowl, converting it into either a giant ice bucket or a place to store course three while course two was being served.

Stainless steel sinks became especially popular because research has proven it the cleanest of metal — so much so that hospitals use it almost exclusively in their kitchens and laboratories.

In stainless steel, adaptability has really been the spice of popularity. One reason stainless can be found in such a wide variety of kitchen items is that there is a stainless adaptable for every item.

While all stainless steel is a solid alloy that must contain at least 11½% chromium to be called "stainless," there are about 25 standard types.

Lighting Can Contribute to Home Decor

Decor-conscious homemakers are taking increasing notice of carefully planned lighting in their decorating. One significant indication of lighting's importance for pleasure, comfort, beauty, and safety is that electric utility companies define as "Light for Living" and specify that provision for good lighting is as necessary as full horsepower and electric appliances for their Medallion Home awards.

Lighting, as much as fabric and furnishings, can be used to create dramatic visual effects, solve space problems, and complement and give richness to colors. Indeed, money spent for expensive and tastefully decorated rooms is wasted if the results cannot be seen because of inadequate lighting.

Experts in home lighting suggest the following decorative effects you can achieve with lighting.

1. Spaciousness. Rooms can be made to appear larger when an abundance of lighting eliminates dark corners. Low ceilings are "raised" with a lighted cornice, formed by mounting the lighting channel and faceboard on the ceiling over a window or wall.

2. Definition of Living Areas. Just as decorators often use area rugs and different textured wall coverings to define a dining area or home entertainment corner, so co-ordinated lighting fixtures can set aside activity centres.

3. Accents. Wall and ceiling fixtures will not only illuminate but also point up paintings and art objects without creating floor or table clutter.

4. Color Significance. A proper level of illumination is necessary to do justice to a carefully considered color scheme. And special effects can be created with coloramic lamp bulbs. A dawn pink bulb, for example, enlivens reds and enriches walnut and mahogany, while a sunny gold bulb is gay and mellow with all colors, particularly effective with green and maple, pine and fruitwood.

5. Controlled Lighting. Area lighting (for example, any overhead source of light) which illuminates the whole area of a room, should be controlled so that you can have a high level of intensity when there are several persons in a room or, for fewer people, less light, which provides a quieter, more relaxed feeling. Table and floor lamps provide task lighting for reading, sewing or similar seeing tasks. Perimeter lighting is illumination at the sides of the room. New light controls make it possible to dial any degree of light from off to full brilliance.

Care of Electrical System

Thousands of home fires are caused each year by the abuse or misuse of electrical equipment. Don't be an amateur electrical repairman, and don't let any other amateur handyman alter the wiring in your home or repair your electrical equipment. This work requires a professional, so when something goes wrong call a reputable electrical contractor or a recognized appliance service agency.

In modern homes today every housekeeper depends on a lot of little "helpers" — electrical appliances. Refrigerators, toasters, lamps, electric clocks, freezers and many other such helpers do much in the everyday work around the house.

To keep these things working for you, you need full "house-power" — adequate electricity coming into your house and plenty of outlets to feed your appliances.

Canadian Standards Among Highest

The wiring in your new home meets code requirements and minimum safety standards, and will accommodate a large number of electrical "helpers." But many appliances do their work animatedly, and some of these—usually the larger ones—require separate circuits for best operation. When you plan to purchase any of these, be sure to check with a reliable electrical contractor to learn whether your home requires additional wiring to accommodate them. Canadian-made appliances meet the standards of the Canadian Standards Association, whose requirements are among the highest in the world.

Causes of Power Failure

When electric outlets fail to deliver electricity, it is usually a sign that a fuse has blown or a circuit-breaker has been tripped. The cause may be (1) overloading the circuit by plugging in too many appliances; (2) a short circuit resulting from a worn cord or a defective plug connection; (3) some defect within the appliance itself; or (4) the starting of an electric motor. (Motors require more current to start than they use when they are running.)

The first thing to do when a fuse has blown or a circuit has been tripped is to locate the cause and correct it. If the cause is a defective cord or appliance disconnect it and do not attempt to use it again without having it repaired or a new one obtained.

To reset circuit breakers simply follow the instructions on the electrical panel.

To replace a fuse, locate the one which was blown. It will have a burned spot on its top surface.

Take Care With Fuses

As a safety measure, the electrical wiring and equipment in your home are protected by fuses or "circuit breakers" located in a main panel. Since they are important "safety valves" in your home's electrical system, you should never replace burned out fuses with a penny, or with fuses of larger capacity than those which have been installed. A fire could result.

As a matter of fact, it isn't always safe even to replace burned-out fuses with others of the same rating—if that rating is more than 15 amperes. If your home is an older one fuses of too-large capacity could have been put in by a previous owner. So if you continue the practice, you are continuing the danger which resul's.

A Safe Rule

A safe rule to follow in replacing fuses is this: Never use a fuse of more than 15-ampere capacity unless the appliance or installation is clearly marked and calls for more. If a 15-amp fuse is insufficient then to give the power you require, it means your wiring is inadequate—and you need the services of a qualified electrical contractor.

In the case of a domestic power failure, first check to see if your neighbors still have electricity, probably one of your main fuses has blown. In this case, don't try to handle the trouble yourself; call in a reputable electrical contractor to look after it.

If you are bothered by frequent power failures due to starting electric motors, try using so-called "time-delay" fuses instead of the ordinary kind — being careful to follow the rule about fuse capacity given above. These special fuses are available in standard ampere ratings and are designed to handle — temporarily — the motor starting currents. But they will still blow, as they should, on sustained overloading. They are recommended by the Canadian Electrical Code for all house circuits.

Protecting Your Family

For the protection of small children in the home, cover unused outlets within their reach with adhesive tape. Teach your children never to touch electric sockets or fixtures.

Never handle cords or fuses or attempt to plug in appliances when your hands are wet, or if standing on a wet floor. Of course never touch anything electrical when in the shower or tub.

Your heating plant and other new electrical appliances are accompanied by instruction books and papers. Look them through them carefully, extract any return post cards necessary to record warranties, and keep a list of authorized service agencies handy. Read carefully all instructional literature so that you will know how to operate all electrical equipment in your home.

STORAGE HASSOCK EASY TO BUILD

Even the beginning, do-it-yourselfer can handle this simple storage hassock. It would make an excellent present to give friends.

The whole hassock can be covered with a heavy cloth, or plastic-leather covering. Foam rubber top is covered easily, with edges of the covering material tucked between the two layers of fir plywood that form the lid. In this way the covering material is held securely.

Sides Uncovered

The sides of the hassock is exactly the same on opposite and matching edges. One good practice is to cut out two of the sides, then use this as the pattern for marking the others.

Plan Shown

If the cutting plan given here is followed the hassock can be sawn from a 4 x 4 inch piece of fir plywood with plywood to spare. All saw cuts are straight lines and easily made with a regular crosscut saw. In fact no special tools are needed to make this inexpensive piece of furniture.

You will need in addition to the plywood and cover material, about 4½ feet of 1 x 1 inch lumber as support for the base, also eight corner brace clips counters, a pair of semi-concealed hinges and an 18 x 18 inch piece of foam rubber.

STRAIGHTEN DRILLS

To straighten very small drill bits which have become bent, sandwich them between two flat pieces of hardwood. Press down as hard as possible while sliding the blocks back and forth so that the drill bits roll around between them.

The Rose Is Most Versatile Flower

For versatility, the rose stands first among flowering plants. Its amazing popularity has lasted for many years and seems destined to go on forever. The popularity of the rose is due in large measure to divert and talented hybridizers and growers who never rest on their laurels, but who each year invest large sums of money and human energy to produce ever better varieties. Hats off to them!

Think of the versatility of the rose! It can be worn as a corsage; makes an ideal flower for the dinner table or other home decoration. The aroma of the rose is edible. It always pleases, whether growing in the garden, or used as a cut flower indoors. The plant itself with only moderate care can be grown by everyone. The form of the rose bloom is one of the most heavenly creations in all nature, opening up gradually from a tightly-packed bud into a large, velvet-petalled flower of usually soft colors that blend into any surrounding. There's gaiety in the rose bloom, a cheerful association that brightens up wherever we look at its sleek perfections - like a lovely woman, reflecting pleasant crowns, charm, softness and happiness. It is one of few blooms that have such a wide range of colors from which to choose.

In use, the rose plant can be used for a living fence. It can be planted in a small-colored garden, or by itself. It can climb around a porch or garage or other outbuilding and transform the structure into a lively, flowing mass of color. In the foundation planting, or as specimen plants around the property, roses in bloom create splashes of color to create an artist's touch to the yard. The first year enough flowers are produced to more than pay for the whole plant.

The Floribunda and the newer Grandiflora classes of roses are practically ideal for the average home owner producing clouds of blooms in all colors. For perfection of bloom the hybrid tea rose is often preferred. For great masses of color, the rose climber stands alone. In many areas in Canada, the ever-blooming climber makes a magnificent, broad, living fence with spectacular display over a long blooming season. Most rose plants, properly cared for, will produce some blooms from Spring to Fall, with two heavy-flowering seasons each year.

A reasonably fertile soil is all that is needed to grow roses well. Their range of soils is from sandy loam to fairly heavy clays. A formal rose bed may be prepared by spading up an area to a depth of eighteen to twenty-four inches and adding organic material such as peat moss, plus a sprinkling of a balanced organic or commercial fertilizer. (Be careful not to burn). Or, without making a formal garden, one may simply dig a hole in a fairly good soil to a depth of twelve inches or so, then pulverize the soil with trowel or spade, add a handful of fertilizer and plant, according to the Canadian Association of Nurserymen.

Roses thrive with full sun, or light partial shade during the hottest part of the day. Watering should be done in the morning preferably. Use of rose sprays is recommended every few weeks for the best results. Likes and dislikes are known - roses are given the better the blooms will be. However, do not fuss over your roses continually. Excessive care sometimes can be as bad as little or no care. Water only when the soil becomes dry, and then provide a good soaking. Don't water again until the soil again becomes dry. For bigger blooms remove side buds, leaving only one main bud on each stem, but if you want masses of color don't bother disbudding.

Select your roses upon the advice of your nurseryman or from mail order catalogues.

Now You Can Put Your TV On The Wall

At first the suggestion to put your television set on your wall may sound like an idea of the Mad Hatter's.

However, there is more sense than nonsense in the idea, as has been proved with mural TV sets designed for wall installation without the expense of special mounting.

These mural TV sets are designed to be part of the over-all decoration of the room, with frames that may be decorated to harmonize with the room's color plan. When not in use, they may even be concealed with a swinging picture.

One of the particularly valuable features of mural television from the standpoint of the viewer, according to RCA Victor engineers, is that it is possible to plan the lighting so that the best results are obtained from either color or black-and-white pictures. Another advantage is that the mural TV set may be placed in a location to permit the largest number of viewers to see it without distortion.

This mural TV idea should have an added attraction for small-apartment dwellers, too, who need all the floor space they have for other furniture.

Spruce-Up Days Are Here Again

As inevitable as the blooming of the first flowers of Spring is the home-owner's urge, at this time of year, to spruce up his property, give it a fresh "new look" inside and outside, make necessary repairs and other improvements.

So universal is this movement, that Marc marks the beginning of the season that has become known throughout the country as "Clean-Up, Paint-Up, Fix-Up Time."

Following the ravages of winter weather, this is indeed the most logical time of the year for the home-owner to take a long and hard and very critical look at his property, and determine what steps should be taken, not only to make it look better, but to maintain and, if possible, enhance its value.

PROTECT INVESTMENT

The home represents the largest single investment that the average family is ever likely to make. Sturdily constructed though it may be, it is continually subject to attacks from many quarters which can weaken it and threaten the home owner's investment unless preventive measures are taken.

Winds tug at and loosen shingles. Rains probe for entry. Mortar crumbles and boards decay. A house, which expands in warm sunlight and contracts in the chill night, is like a living thing which must be cared for.

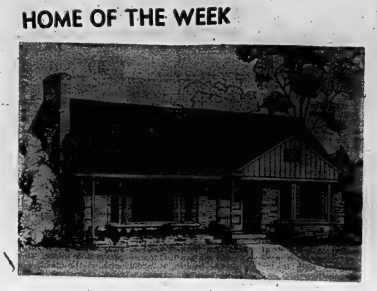
Developing dangers the average homeowner can watch for and combat have been listed by the Construction Research Bureau, national clearing house for building information. Alertness can forestall serious damage and keep the value of your property at peak level.

REPAIR CHECK LIST

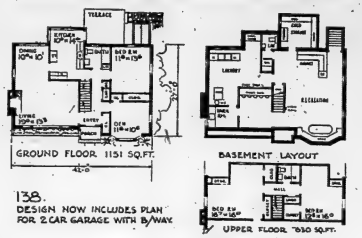
Check these trouble spots:

Exterior walls: Masonry. Loose mortar between joints should be scraped out and replaced, pressing fresh mortar in firmly. Broken brick, stone or tile should be chiseled out, new unit pressed into fresh mortar.

Clapboard or wood shingles, when damaged, may be removed with a small ripper or hacksaw blade slipped under shingle to cut nails. Slip new piece into place, fasten with rust-proof nails.



Leaking roof: If caused by missing shingle, replace unit. Split shingle may be repaired by slipping piece of copper underneath. Fasten loose shingles with galvanized nails covered, sink and cover head with roofing cement.



Chimney cracks: Scrape loose mortar from joints, brush out dust and dampen well. Pack fresh mortar in tightly.

Cracked interior plaster: Remove loose material and dirt. Force fresh plaster into crack to form firm bond with old.

Floors: Cover worn, dull wood surfaces with resilient tile such as asphalt, vinyl, asbestos or solid vinyl tiles. These are also excellent for basements where there is no hygroscopic pressure problem to eliminate during of aging concrete floor.

Wallpapers Can Coordinate Decor Throughout Home

If you are about to redecorate, keep in mind two major objectives. The first is to bring sparkle and interest to the home and the second it to keep a look of harmony in the home. No matter how imaginative your ideas are, if they don't jell together the result will be unsatisfying.

For the unprofessional home decorator this often presents a problem. But there is help at hand, and at no charge. Visit your local wallpaper store and take a look at the sample books there.

You will find in almost every sample book groups of co-ordinated papers that make a good starting off point for a decorating scheme. Two, three or even four papers are tied together by design or color or mood, or sometimes by all three.

A typical grouping might be a repeat design of a Colonial scene in light beige, brown and burnt orange, which could be used effectively in the hall; a small neat documentary pattern in the same three colors, which would look well in the dining room, and a simple embossed texture of beige with slight flecks of brown and burnt orange, which would be a good choice for the living room as a background for the many books and pictures.

This would give both contrast and harmony in three connected areas. Use these ready-made schemes throughout the house wherever you have adjoining rooms to decorate such as bedroom and bathroom, or kitchen and dinette.

These matchmates are not new, but they are now to be found in the popular priced field in many attractive designs of fine quality. They bring unity and distinction to the home.

Where a room has no particular life, either because of different furnishings that don't blend too well or because of too many distracting colors, the use of these matchmates will do a great deal to tie in scattered effects and give harmony to the room.

Trained decorators know how to use what is on the market, and tha, do-it-yourself decorator too, should use all these built-in aids that are there for the looking. The job will be easier and the results better.

THINNING ODORLESS PAINT

Space Telescope Put Into Orbit By United States

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—A complex "space telescope" was fired into orbit Thursday to explore radiation mysteries of the universe.

The 35-pound satellite named Explorer XI sped away from this test center at 9:37 a.m. in the nose of a 76-foot Juno II rocket. All four stages of the booster ignited successfully and propelled the payload into orbit at nearly 18,000 miles an hour.

More than two hours after launch the National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced that "tracking stations at Johannesburg, South Africa; Woomera, Australia; San Diego, Calif., and East Grand Forks, Minn., confirmed that the satellite is in orbit."

The 7½-foot telescope is designed to give the U.S. the first astronomical observatory in space. Its specific task is to measure gamma rays which stream from sources such as the Milky Way and other galaxies. Scientists believe they may be the keys to more information about the electronic making up the universe.

SEEK SOURCE OF RAYS

Results of the experiment also could help determine the source of cosmic rays believed to be created by great flares on the sun and distant stars, or from the death explosion of stars.

These invisible cosmic rays bombard the earth steadily. They penetrate the atmosphere but most are caught in the earth's magnetic field. During times of great flare activity the particles race with such intensity that they badly influence communications and weather on earth.

The telescope is expected to have a useful lifetime of more than six months and to remain in orbit more than three years.

Scotiarie

"Take a dozen little clouds,
And a patch of blue
Take a million raindrops
As many sunbeams too
Take a host of violets,
A wondering little breeze
And sprinkle of little leaves
Dancing on the trees;"
Then mix them all together

In the very quickest way—
Showers, sunshine, birds and flowers,
And you have an 'April day'"

Asks Bargaining Rights Be Given Civil Servants

OTTAWA (CP)—Extension of collective bargaining rights to Canadian civil servants is long overdue, Claude Jodoin, Canadian Labor Congress president, has told a Commons special committee on the proposed new civil service act.

Mr. Jodoin, reading the 25-page, 5,000 CLC brief, urged the committee either to recommend a suitable amendment or alternative legislation which would allow civil servants such rights.

The Congress, which has a membership of more than 1,000,000, represents approximately 20,000 civil servants across Canada.

Main bone of contention in the proposed bill as far as the CLC was concerned was that it provided only for consultation between representatives of government and civil servants. There was no assurance of any binding agreement on wages and working conditions.

Mr. Jodoin said the section of the bill dealing with consultation at best "is a no-man's land still viewed through a matter of principle or law but a distinction to treat government employees as if it [it] are other categories of employees."

The brief noted that Saskatchewan civil servants, covered under the Trade Union Act, enjoyed the right to strike and had never taken that action.

Directors Named, Reports Given at Annual Meeting Of The Quinte Curling Club

A sound financial position, an active membership and enthusiastic co-operation were the highlights noted at the annual meeting of the Quinte Curling Club held in the clubhouse at the fairgrounds on Thursday evening under the direction of Harry Trepanier, the energetic president. The club has a membership of 308 while the women's section numbers 96.

A note of sadness crept into the proceedings, when it was announced that "Jerry" Jarrett the efficient treasurer of the club since its inception and the one person more than any other who has been responsible for the success of the project over the past twenty ago, was quitting the post due to his retirement from the Bank of Montreal on June 30th, when he will move to his cottage at Sandridge. The thanks of the membership for his excellent job were ably expressed by past president Bill Caulfi and a vote of thanks with a cheque enclosed was presented to the retiring treasurer.

Mr. Jarrett was entirely surprised by the gesture but he thanked the members for their kindness. "After 43 years of banking service I am leaving the service with the kindliest of feelings and hoping to enjoy my retirement" said Mr. Jarrett. He outlined the efforts that were made to have the fine club that now exists completed and he thanked the many members who contributed time and ability to the project. "We are over the hump as the financial statement will attest and I see nothing but progress for this fine organization" said Mr. Jarrett. "This city will always be home to me" said the speaker and "I will be returning on many occasions to have a game of curling".

In order that Mr. Jarrett will not have to sign the guest book when he does come back, Mr. Trepanier on behalf of the club presented to Mr. Jarrett an honorary life membership, the first ever to be given by the club. It was announced that Mr. Jack Murphy, the assistant manager at the Bank of Montreal will be the new treasurer of the club and this announcement received hearty applause from the members.

DIRECTORS NAMED

The nominating committee of Pat Houston and William Gault gave their report with the following nominated for the directorate, Steve Bakay, Arthur Bannon, Everett Black, Ev. Gowsell, Murray Johnson, Robert Lanning, William E. Riley, Dr. J. F. McCorquodale and Hugh Murray. Others nominated from the floor were Pat Houston, Mac White and Gil Wambold. Following a spirited election the following directors were elected Arthur Bannon, Everett Black, Ev. Gowsell, Pat Houston, Murray Johnson, Robert Lanning, Dr. J. F. McCorquodale, William E. Riley and Mac White. The directors will meet in the near future and select their president and Mr. Trepanier will be a member of the Board as immediate past president. Also returned to office were Harry Fuke and Bob Bastable, auditors of last year.

Reports of the year's operations were given by the chairmen of the various committees. Everett Black reported for the ice committee, stating that purchase of some equipment was needed. Both Steve Flintoft and Everett Black have done a terrific job with plenty of help from the membership. Dick Beare reported for the locker room and showed a good year. Don Stanton for the house committee showed that $1,150 worth of new furniture had been purchased of which $375 was provided by the women's section of the club. A letter of thanks will be sent to that organization. Bill Gault reported on the building stating that more cinders will be put on the parking lot and that the east and west walls will be sheeted during the summer. "The building and equipment is in first class shape" said the speaker.

Ev Gowsell, general chairman of the games committee, had a number of suggestions to make, one being that members should be rated and that skips be chosen by a general vote of the membership. John Peverett reported for the men's games; Pete Acton for the mixed spiels and Bill Riley for the Saturday spiels. All of these activities added revenue to the exchequer. Dan Cowley reported for the school boy curling and stated that three good rinks could be secured from those who curled. Enzie Wilkinson and Ben Corke also reported on Sunday curling.

TROPHIES PRESENTED

Two trophies were presented, the W. C. Gault trophy for the club championship, to Jim Blickers, Art Marshall, Stan Hart and Ev. Gowsell as skip, and the "Slag Day" trophy to Bud Drury, Pete McGuire, Dick Beare and Mac White as skip. Incidentally the members sincerely thanked the sponsors of the "Slag Day" stating it was the finest event run by the club during the season and hoped that it would become an annual spiel. Prizes were heaped on all the chairmen, the president and all others who in any way contributed to the success of the club. As Jack McArthur put it so well, "We put the right man in the right place when we elected 'Jerry' Jarrett to the post of treasurer."

At the close of the meeting a film of last year's Brier playdowns in which the Richardson rink from Saskatchewan was successful was shown through the kindness of the McDonald Tobacco Company. It was a fine evening and all wended their way homeward with lingering memories of a most delightful curling season.

AID NEWS

reported reluctant to accept any more "assumptions" from the Central Intelligence Agency and the defence department until Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, former army chief of staff, makes a thorough investigation.

It's in this atmosphere of having suffered personal loss in prestige as well as loss of prestige for the United States that Kennedy now asks newspapers to think twice about publishing news that may not serve the national interest.

Washington newspaper men say that because of the heavy competition for news, a voluntary form of restriction or censorship simply won't work. The American constitution guarantees freedom of speech and freedom of the press. Outside of a declaration of war and revival of emergency powers, Kennedy would find it almost impossible under current conditions to impose compulsory censorship.

Some of his aides looked into the possibility of developing an official guidelines act, along the lines of those in British and Canada, but decided it would be too difficult to get such an act through Congress.

CLOSE TIES

West Germans annually send Germans in the Soviet zone between 30,000,000 and 40,000,000 gift parcels and at least 70,000,000 postcards.

President's Report

Harry Trepanier, president of the Curling Club, presented the following report at the annual meeting:

"This, your annual meeting, represents the completion of another successful year of your club's activities. During the past year your directors have worked efficiently and sincerely to promote and improve the operation of your club in all its phases. Any success we have had is due entirely to their work and guidance. I take pleasure in submitting the following report of your directors.

"The chairmen of the various committees set up by your directors will make their individual reports. I will, therefore, make only a few brief remarks now.

FINANCIALLY

A year ago your club's liabilities were as follows:

Series "A" Debentures	$17,000
Bank loan	9,000
Total of	$26,000

At the end of this year they are:

Series "A" Debentures	$17,000
Bank loan	2,000
Total of	$19,000

"This represents a reduction of $7,000 in your club's liabilities. This favourable situation is due to a firm policy on the part of your directors to reduce the liabilities of your club as rapidly as it is economically possible to do so. This has only been possible because your treasurer, secretary, committee chairmen and a substantial number of the members have given their time and effort to perform the various duties that are necessary in the operation of a club such as this. This very substantial saving is reflected in your financial statement. If you will refer to item "1" under expenditures you will see that our total labor cost for the year was $1,230. This represents the wages of one full time employee. I would urge that this policy be continued for several reasons.

"1—This is the major item in your operating expenses which can be controlled very substantially.

"2—The club members participating in the work of the club increase their interest and enthusiasm. If enough of the members will do a little of this work it does not have to be a big job for any one person.

"3—If this policy is continued it will not only reduce the balance of your liabilities as rapidly as possible, it will also permit you to build up a reserve for any major improvements you might want to make in the future.

MEMBERSHIP

"Your membership is gradually becoming more stabilized. Your turnover in members is dropping. Which is natural as your club becomes better established. During the past year new members represented an increase of two more than those transferred to the inactive list plus those who moved away. We were able to accomplish this without a membership drive. We now have almost the maximum number of active members that we can accommodate with regular curling on our present draw system.

COMMITTEES

"Committees were set up to conduct the business of your Club. The chairmen were members of your board of directors. Your policy has proved very efficient in conducting your Club's business. The committees were as follows:

House-chairman — Don Stanton; ice-chairman — Steve Flintoft and Everett Black; games and bonspiel-chairman — Ev. Gowsell; locker room chairman — Dick Beare; building and property-chairman — Bill Gault.

"The business of your Club is actually conducted by your treasurer, secretary and these committees. To these people and the members of your Club who worked on these committees I want to express the appreciation and thanks of all the Club members for a job well done.

LADIES CURLING CLUB

"During the year your Ladies' Curling Club have worked in many ways toward the improvement of your Club. The new furnishings in the lounge are a direct result of their efforts. To the ladies, therefore, on your behalf as well as my own, I wish to say a very sincere "Thank you".

HIGH SCHOOL CURLING

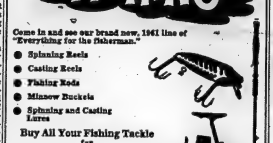
"This activity was continued and developed with a great deal of success. I am sure that this phase of your activities will continue to grow and will eventually produce some of our best curlers.

BRIER COMPETITION

"During the past season you were fortunate in having a club team go right down the last "Stone" in the "Provincial Brier Playdowns" at Ottawa. They were a credit to your Club, not only as top quality competitive curlers, but also as good sports. The team was composed of Al McCullam, lead, Tom Carruthers, second, Bill Riley, vice, and Mac White, skip.

"On behalf of all Club members I thank these men for the honor and distinction they brought your Club.

DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS



"To the directors and officers of your Club, I want to express my personal thanks. Without their whole-hearted support and work the past year would have been a dismal failure. To Jerry Jarrett who has done a tremendous job in handling your finances; to Bob Lanning for his quiet and efficient work as your secretary. During the curling season we held regular monthly directors' meetings with almost perfect attendance at all of them.

"It has been a privilege to have been appointed to act as president of your Club for the past year. My only regret has been that I did not have more experience to bring to the office. This however, was offset to quite a degree by the guidance, support, and work of your directors. I want to thank them once more for this whole-hearted support, and also to thank all of the Club members for extending this honor to me.

Respectfully submitted,
Harry J. Trepanier.

With One Exception

Riders Will Be Intact

By AVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Coach Frank Clair delivered the best news Thursday to the other eight football clubs in Canada: With one possible exception, all his 1960 Grey Cup champion Ottawa Rough Riders will be back for the 1961 season.

Ten of last season's 38-man team have already been signed. About 14 new Americans and 10 new Canadians are expected to join the Riders when their training camp opens July 3.

The possible exception is lineman Milt Graham of Boston, and Clair told a press conference he hopes Graham will stay one more year.

Even 33-year-old flanker Dewey West, who broke his arm in two places in the Grey Cup game, has asked to come back, the Ottawa coach said.

"I'm very confident we can win again this year," Clair said. "I feel better going into this season than any other. . . .

"I don't see much change in our defensive team. Defence is of the first importance. It breaks the morale of the offensive team if the opposition scores often on you.

"Halfbacks are our big problem. We didn't have any spares last year and I'm looking principally for Canadian backs. What you need in this game is Canadian talent."

Clair said he is looking for a punt return man to replace Ron Stewart so Stewart can concentrate on his offensive halfback position. Stewart holds the all-Canadian rushing record for a single game.

Riders will play an intersquad game July 15. Their first exhibition game will be against Winnipeg Blue Bombers here July 30.

CALGARY GETS HALFBACK

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference announced the signing Thursday of halfback Lovell Coleman for his second year with the club. The University of Western Michigan speedster was used sparingly last year and twice injured a leg, but on 30 carries averaged 8.3 yards.

Stamps Boss Scoffs at AFL Boast

CALGARY (CP)—Dean Griffing doesn't make sense when he rates two practices Football League all-stars ahead of their Canadian counterparts, says the general manager of the Calgary Stampeders.

Jim Finks scoffed Thursday at Griffing's comment in Winnipeg that a picked AFL team would wear down the best men from the Canadian Football League's two conferences.

Both Griffing and Finks have experience on each side of the border. Griffing now is general manager of Denver Bronco of the fledgling AFL and went from player to manager of the Saskatchewan Roughriders. Finks played in the National Football League before running the same pattern here.

An AFL team might beat one club from the CFL, Finks said. "But it couldn't in an all-star game. We would have better athletes on our side."

Given the same rules, the same number of players, and a platoon system, Griffing "just doesn't make sense," Finks said. He agreed with Griffing that the hypothetical tussle one on records only, they would never would come about "but seem to favor us by a large as long as we're playing this score."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

One of the most prized targets of anglers will be fair game at the crack of dawn tomorrow when the trout season officially opens. Literally hundreds of winter weary-trouters are geared for action with a lot of them trekking for the northern haunts tonight.

Prospects? Good, if you don't go too far north. Fine weather will make for some of the best fishing in years in certain districts.

At this Thursday night writing the lakes in Algonquin Park are ice-locked.

Most of the lakes are open on a line south from Wellington and Limerick Lakes to Wesleymoss and the Maximow. The majority of the Mississippi chain are open or should be by tomorrow, weather permitting.

Russell Whitfield, Department of Lands and Forests, Tweed District Fish and Wildlife supervisor said by tomorrow three-quarters of the lakes south of the Park should be open.

Trouble in general are low, slightly below normal but not detrimentally low as far as fish life is concerned.

Lateness of ice clearance in lakes is or should be a boon to fishermen. Insect life food is not yet apparent in lakes just freed from ice and the trout should be hungry and willing to take the man-made or other bait.

Lake trouters should have good fishing in the Flown district. Wemiley Lake is said to be ready and open. Good catches of small bass and trout were taken last year. Papineau Lake is not open but boats can navigate in fishing water.

And remember when you've landed that third baker you must call it a day. The old five-a-day limit is out, although efforts are being made in this particular district to have it reinstated. This includes spinke, that hybrid developed through crossing a speckle with a laker.

You can take five rainbow, including Kamloops, trout, and five brown and Aurora in one day.

You can keep in one and an additional fourteen speckles in one day providing the additional fourteen in the aggregate weigh not more than ten pounds.

And remember every season, fishermen drown, get lost, suffer mishaps and encounter disaster because some safety precaution was overlooked or because they were unaware of or neglected one or more of angling's prime safety rules.

Always land your fish carefully. Keep a landing net handy—and use it. Otherwise your hand may slip on the slimy fish and run about of triple-barb hooks with painful results.

Cast clear of other anglers. Learn the overhead ballcast. It's accurate, effortless safe. Casting ball by the "sidewinder" method is fun when you're alone. It's dangerous to fly-cast overhead—a part of wind may blow the hooked fly in your face. Most fly-casters use a "three-quarters" cast—keeps the line to one side a bit, though, so be sure your companions are out on your other side.

Fish only from a firm footing. To fish from a slippery rock or log is to invite disaster. Avoid the loose slippery kind. Test them out with your feet before you mount them. If they don't feel good, seek firmer footing. Take your time. Move about slowly.

Wade streams with care. Never chase a running fish unless you know the stream and its bottom beyond peradventure. A hidden rock or log, a hole, soft mud, or sudden drop-off and you're down. And sometime you won't come up. Just be sure your line has plenty of backing to cope with a trout's rushes, and stand still. No fish is worth an accident.

Twins Take Over Top, Tigers Beaten

Wynn Spins Sox to Win

By ED WILES

Utility man Dick Williams was the player Baltimore Orioles were after when they traded right hander Jerry Walker and outfielder Chuck Essegian to Kansas City A's, but pitcher Dick Hall, 30, a tagalong guy in the deal, has proved to be a surprise bonus.

The right hander came through with a two-hit performance Tuesday night for a 5-0 victory over Washington Senators.

It was Hall's second shutout in a major league mound career that began with Pittsburgh Pirates in 1955. And it came in his first start for the Orioles.

In the only other night American League game, Early Wynn and Minnie Minoso combined to give Chicago White Sox a 9-1 victory over Kansas City. Wynn, 41, nailed his 286th career victory with a five-hitter, and Minoso, 38 at least, drove in five runs.

In the other AL games, Minnesota regained first place by ruining Los Angeles Angels' home debut 4-2, Detroit skidded to second with a 5-2 defeat by Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees beat Cleveland 4-3.

WON NATIONAL GAME

Chicago Cubs whipped Cincinnati 5-2 in the lone National League game scheduled.

The only hits Ball allowed the Senators were singles—one in the fourth inning by Danny O'Connell and the other with two out in the ninth by pinch-hitter Joe Cunningham struck out three and walked just one.

The Orioles were shut out on two hits by rookie Joe McClain until the seventh. Then Brooks Robinson doubled and scored on Russ Snyder's sacrifice fly after two walks—the first abowed by McClain (2-1) in 22 3-3 innings. Consecutive singles by Williams, Whitey Herzog and Robinson then got the Birds started on a four-run spurt in the eighth.

The White Sox staked Wynn, now 2-0, to a quick lead against lower But Dkley (1-3) with three runs in the first. Minoso drove in the last two with a double, then singled home two more in the third inning. A sixth-inning home run by rookie Jay Hankins, his first, broke up Wynn's shutout.

A three-run homer by Earl Battey brought the Twins from behind in the sixth against the Angels, who now have lost eight in a row. Camilo Pascual (2-0) was the winner, giving up both runs on Earl Averill's homer in the second. Ed Grba, who nailed the Angels' lone victory in the season opener, lost his second.

DROVE IN THREE

Vic Wertz drove in three runs for the Red Sox and paired with Russ Nixon for two-run homers off Jim Bunning (0-3). Dave Hillman won his first in the AL, bouncing back from last year's injuries with 6 2-3 innings of three-hit, shutout relief after Tex Delock walked home the Tiger runs. It was Detroit's second straight setback after winning eight in a row.

Mickey Mantle again led the Yankees, breaking a tie with a 407-foot triple off loser Johnny Antonelli (0-2) in the seventh inning and then spearing Bubba Phillips' long drive on a game-ending, sliding catch with the tying run on base. Art Ditmar (2-0) won it with a six-hitter.

The Cubs sent the Reds to their sixth straight defeat on home runs by winning pitcher Don Cardwell (2-0) and Frank Thomas off rookie Ken Hunt (1-1). Don Elston saved it. Bob Robinson homered for Cincinnati.

Pro Soccer Studies New Entries

HAMILTON (CP)—The Eastern Canada Professional Soccer League has formed a committee to study applications from interested cities for possible future expansion. It was announced Thursday.

But the league remained firm in its decision to allow only four clubs in its first year. The league now has two entries from Toronto and one each from Hamilton and Montreal.

Interested cities have been aroused in Montreal, Ottawa, Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Cleveland, all have sought entry into the league and the committee will review their applications.

Buzzers Take 2-0 Series Lead

OWEN SOUND (CP) — Toronto St. Michael's College Buzzers defeated Owen Sound Greys 5-2 Thursday night to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Ontario Jockey Association Junior B finals.

Buzzers scored three goals in less than two minutes late in the second period to overcome a 2-1 deficit, and were never threatened from there in, adding their other goal in the final period.

Memorial Cup

Irish Make It Two Over Kings

EDMONTON (CP) — "Our boys played with a lot of heart and stuck to their checking when they were dead tired."

That, briefly, sums up the success of Toronto St. Michael's Majors so far in their Memorial Cup final series against Edmonton Oil Kings.

The Majors, seeking to become the first team in history to win the cup and the Canadian junior hockey crown four times, picked up their second victory of the best - of - seven series Thursday night by beating the Oil Kings 4-1. They swept the opener 6-0 and could make it triumph No. 3 Saturday night.

The observation about heart came from Majors' coach Rev. David Bauer, who guided his collegians through the tough Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series to the Eastern Canada championship.

CAUTIOUS OPTIMISTS

Father Bauer was pleased with Majors' showing, before 6,112 customers, but still figures the Oil Kings are a threat. When someone suggested in the Toronto dressing room that Majors could take the series in the minimum four games, Father Bauer cautioned:

"No, No. They've much too good a team for that.

"I think it's going to be a close series the rest of the way, both the scores and the games. Oil Kings were not about to let the second game and looked like they might get better still.

"I didn't think St. Michael's played quite as well, but perhaps that was because the Oil Kings wouldn't let them be that good twice in a row."

Edmonton coach Buster Brayshaw said: "You can't win if you can't score. I think the reason is that our big guns all seasons are going nothing. I think there'll be some changes Saturday night."

St. Michael's, winners of the title in 1934, 1945 and 1947, share with Toronto Marlboros, Oshawa Generals and Winnipeg Monarchs the honor of having won the cup three times.

KEEP OFF BALANCE

Persistent checking by Majors kept Edmonton off balance for the most of Thursday night's game. When the Oil Kings managed to get away from enemy forwards, they ran into key saves by goaltender Jerry Cheevers. He blocked 31 shots. Edmonton netminder Paul Semmith stopped 24.

Defenceman Ken Stephanson of Winnipeg Braves and forward Bryan Hextall of Brandon Wheat Kings were dressed by the western champions, who benched forwards Owen Malloy and Vince Downey.

Terry Clancy, 17-year-old son of former National Hockey League great King Clancy, pulled Toronto ahead with the only goal of the first period and added another after 25 seconds of the second period.

Edmonton's goal, scored by winger Tom Burgess, followed 6,112 customers, but still figures the Oil Kings are a threat. When someone suggested in the Toronto dressing room that Majors could take the series in the minimum four games, Father Bauer cautioned:

Wings Halt San Juan Win Streak

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Rochester Red Wings, up to now as cold as the handful of fans who turned up Thursday night in Jersey City and Richmond, have finally deserted the International Baseball League cellar.

And the Wings did it by beating the loop's hottest team, San Juan, which had won four in a row. Rochester, capitalizing on the wildness of relief pitcher Ray Washburn, chilled the Marlins 6-3, and moved ahead of Syracuse into seventh place.

Syracuse lost to Jersey City for the second consecutive night, this time 5-3 as only 405 fans watched in 40 - degree weather. The thermometer registered the same in Richmond where the Virginians beat Buffalo 6-1 in the other scheduled game before only 408 fans.

Rochester, now 2-6, used four walks and one hit to score three decisive runs in the seventh inning, after leading 2-1.

Bob Johnson homered for the Wings while Ron Plaza hit one with a man on for San Juan. Bob Anderson was the winner and Bob Milliken lost.

Jersey City used half of their six hits and two runs in the fourth inning and got their three hits in the next inning for their other runs. Dave Stenhouse, with relief from Jerry Fisk, was the winner, while Hal Griggs lost his second for the Chiefs.

Tony Asaro and Jim Pisoni each had three hits for Richmond including key doubles in a decisive four-run sixth inning. Bill Bethel was the winner while Dick Bunkerick won his first. Bethel is 2-0.

The Sailors earlier in the series had trailed 3-1 in games. They meet defending champion Napanee Comets in the opening game of the finals in Napanee Saturday night.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Forty years ago, most National Football League teams couldn't afford a change of uniforms. Today the league's 14 teams are insured for $31,500,000.

A plan for restocking teams in case of disaster, with the league insuring each team for $2,250,000.

Player pensions and other benefits of $300,000 a year from the league's new contract with the National Broadcasting Company for radio-television rights to the annual championship game.

Gabe Paul New Boss Of Indians

NEW YORK (AP) — Gabe Paul, in a move as surprising as it was sudden, quit as general manager of the Houston club in the National League Thursday to accept a similar position with Cleveland Indians of the rival American League.

The 51-year-old baseball executive, who left Cincinnati only six months ago to take charge of the new National League entry, refused to explain the switch except for "personal reasons."

Craig Cullinan, Jr., president of the Houston club, said the Colts accepted the resignation with regret and named George Kirksey, executive vice - president, as acting general manager until Paul's successor is selected.

Where to Fish or Hunt
SOLUNAR TABLES
by John Alden Knight

The schedule of Solunar Periods, as printed below, has been taken from John Alden Knight's Solunar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory or hunting in good cover during these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major Periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

The following chart is for the period from Sunday, April 30th, to Sunday, May 7th. All times are Eastern Daylight Saving Time.

10 More Players Involved

U.S. Basketball Scandal Spreads

By DON WEISS

NEW YORK (AP)—The cloud of widespread bribery scandal that had hung ominously over U.S. college basketball for six weeks has descended, engulfing 10 more players from six more schools.

There were strong indications today that more disclosures and possible indictments resulting from point shaving and game fixing were due from the district attorney's office.

The term of the grand jury investigating college basketball has been extended until June 30." District Attorney Frank Hogan said after announcing a 37-count indictment for corruption against previously convicted football fixer Aaron Wagman.

The indictment, confirming earlier reports that the scandal might mushroom to equal or top the size of the one that rolled the game in 1951, named 10 players from six colleges in the East and South and cited 26 games played in 13 cities. One player was named as one of four co-conspirators.

MORE IN 1951

Together with previous disclosures, it brought the count of the current scandal to 12 players from seven schools. The 1951 scandal involved 33 players from seven schools. Hogan also conducted the investigation then.

The players named Thursday were:

Jack Egan, high-scoring ace of St. Joseph's of Philadelphia, which finished third in the national college title tournament last month, and two teammates —Vince Kompton and Frank Matwick.

(Egan, who said he "needed the money," is married and the father of two children. Thursday night he was to have been honored at a banquet as St. Joseph's outstanding athlete. The banquet went on without him.)

Ed Bowler, sophomore at Lasalle College in Philadelphia.

Jerry Graves, all - Southeastern Conference star at Mississippi State.

Dick Fisher and Ed Test, seniors at the University of Tennessee.

Pete Kelly and Glenn Cross, senior at the University of Connecticut.

Lou Brown, senior at North Carolina University.

GIVEN IMMUNITY

All but Brown, were granted immunity from prosecution for their testimony. Hogan said, adding that each allegedly accepted or agreed to accept from Wagman sums ranging from $250 to $1,500 for shaving points in games. The games included one during the 1959-60 season and 25 last season. Of the 26 Hogan said 12 were "successfully" rigged.

Brown, who played in only two or three games near the end of the season, was not successful, Hogan said, in making such arrangements at North Carolina.

"Brown made efforts to line things up for Wagman at North Carolina," said Hogan, "but he (Brown) was more successful at luring players at St. Joseph's and Lasalle."

As a result, Brown was named co - conspirator along with Bill Minnerly, former halfback of the Connecticut football team, Jerry Vogel and Dan Quindazzi, both former Alabama basketball players, and Joseph Green, described as a close associate of Wagman. Green has disappeared and is wanted for questioning.

Rainbow Trout Get Helping Hand to Reach Spawn Beds

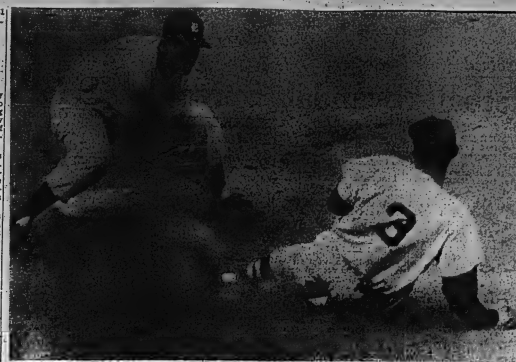
ALLISTON, Ont. (CP)—Rainbow trout, which grow big and bumptious in the Nottawasaga River, are getting a helping hand in reaching their spawning grounds this year.

Borrowing a technique common on salmon streams of both coasts, the Ontario department of lands and forests has built a fish ladder to give the spawners passage around the Nicholson dam.

The six-foot-high dam at this community about 20 miles southwest of Barrie has been a troublesome barrier in the past. Although rainbows are noted leapers, there's an apron at the bottom that hampers them in the running start they need—particularly this year when water levels have been unusually low.

The result has been a cluster of fish below the dam, a severe temptation to pre-season poachers and generally unsatisfactory spawning conditions.

WORTH PRESERVING



Conservation officials are particularly anxious to keep things congenial for the trout in the Nottawasaga, which rises in a series of small up - country creeks and flows northward into Georgian Bay. It ranks among Eastern Canada's best - rainbow waters, regularly placing fish of up to 15 pounds in major angling contests.

The ladder consists of a series of landes arranged like stairs. The fish leap from one to another and at the top step are netted for tagging by conservation men studying the rainbow's movements.

The spring spawning run was already in its early stages when the ladder was opened. Robert Trotter, fish and wildlife supervisor for Lake Simcoe district, expects the fish to get used to the gimmick after a few futile attempts at the dam.

Conservationists hope the dam, urged for years by anglers, will help rainbow fishing throughout the Georgian Bay area by stocking increased numbers of newly-hatched fish back to grow up in the big water.

Meanwhile late arrivals or hesitant leapers will get a measure of extra protection. Although the regular Ontario trout season opens April 29, the river below the dam will remain a sanctuary until June 1.

THE BALL ELUDES CHICO — Pete Runnels, Boston Red Sox infielder, is safe at second as Pumpsie Green grounded out to first base in second inning of game with the Tigers in Detroit yesterday. Chico Fernandez, Detroit shortstop, is credited with an error as the throw from first baseman Norm Cash jumps out of his glove as he begins to make his tag on Runnels. - Boston won 3-2. Show Explained Lot About Space, Scientific Progress

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—CBS Reports, in simple, understandable form, explained a lot about space and scientific progress Thursday night.

The most fascinating hour had a quality of fantasy, and there were serious suggestions about life in space.

Most scientists agreed the chance of life existing on nearby planets—except perhaps Mars—seems remote. But none discounted the real possibility it may exist on the more distant ones.

One professor suggested that the human race might become slaves of intelligent species from other planets, older and much superior species than the human race.

"The best we could expect would be the sort of treatment we give domestic animals here," he said. "We're kind to them, and feed them, and when they are big enough we slaughter them. We could well be an excellent source of protein to an exceptionally advanced species."

Pretty Julie London has had a big season guesting around all the various action - adventure shows. This week she was a very effective girl-of-the-week on Hong Kong . . . One Happy Family, one of the early casualties of the current TV season, travels back into NBC's Friday night lineup May 12.

The "Sword And The Dragon" A Massive Cast — a Mighty Legend.

It is rare indeed to see a spectacle of the scope and sweep of the "Sword and the Dragon, that opened yesterday at the Belle Theatre.

The massive cast of 106,000 literally floods the screen with monumental battles and unmatched pageantry based on the legends of the magic sword of lovrinoor wielded by only the noblest of warriors, the "Sword and the Dragon" is a mighty saga of kings and conquerors, demons and dragons. It is folklore at its richest.

Into a heroic giant of a man, whose beloved Villa has been abducted by a band of marauding Tugars, is selected as the new bearer of the Sword of Invincoor, his mission is to rid his country of the tyranny of the plundering Tugar hordes led by the sadistic Kalin. After rescuing from the enemy camp, the subdues the ferocious Wind Demon whose scourgings have levelled whole towns and forests. With Villa and his cavalry, he heads for the fabulous palaces of the good prince Vando, to enlist in the battle against the Tugars. However, treachery, deceit and intrigue reign in the court of the unsuspecting Prince and soon Lilya is imprisoned in the palace dungeon and Villa is again the captive of Kalin. After a series of severe tortures and feats, the enemy outside the gates and the city being attacked by the fiery three-headed dragon, Prince Vando releases Lilya to lead his forces in the final stupendous battle. The climax, which will probably go down in the annals of motion picture history, is one of the most impressive battle scenes ever filmed. The screen swarms with thousands upon thousands of soldiers in an epic conflict which pits the forces of good against the forces of evil.

FOR YOUNGSTERS OF ALL AGES

The result is that the "Sword and the Dragon" is one of those infrequent that will entertain and thrill the entire family. Youngsters of all ages will love the colorful action and the theme of knights and dragons. Adults will be gratified that the adult human drama is not unmatched special effects, the magnificence of the costumes and the enormity of the cast all contribute to making the "Sword and The Dragon", an unparalleled motion picture experience.

Here is a picture with something for everybody. It has action, spectacle, color, romance, drama, suspense and intrigue With a recent history of record-breaking opening in London, Paris, Rome and Moscow, the "Sword and the Dragon", could, and should have a record-breaking smash here, at the Belle Theatre, for the balance of the week.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RICHTER
Saturday, April 29, 1961.

General Tendencies: This is one of those days when it is necessary until the sun goes down to act with far more than usual care and caution to avoid and sidestep any and every sort of problem. Be sure that you do not expect limitations or delays and realize these give you a chance to perfect all details sensibly. Tonight delve into whatever you do not understand.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) It is important that you remain neutral during an altercation between a higher-up and an associate otherwise you will be the one to suffer if you become involved in it, P.M. Take the health treatments that you need. Fix clothing, too.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Dashing back and forth from job to that new venture will see little or nothing accomplished. Plan your time wisely so that you first complete necessary labors, then delve into the new with clear mind and conscience. Expand.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) While you are desirous of enjoying yourself, one in authority will be very harsh with you if you don't get your work done, so be sure you first meet your obligations then there is still time for fun and recreation you like.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) If you plan your time and activities more wisely, you can carry through with obligations at business on time and well and not incur the displeasure of associates and still be at home in the evening to please family, the traits.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be sure you get out to the civic and business affairs that are important right now, even if it means you have to put aside regular routine work which really isn't too remunerative anyway. Concentrate upon bettering yourself publicly.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Every opportunity is yours now to get the support of old and trusted friends, as well as enjoy the proven pleasures. However, be sure you keep within your buget and find ways to be more economical in the future. Be active.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) This can still be a fine day for going after your goals, despite difficulties at home or feeling you cannot assert your own will. Act positively and tactfully. Evening fine for cultural pursuits. Be very sociable.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21) Don't allow that private worry to keep you from transacting business wisely, getting shopping done, handling other matters intelligently. Later, be sure you give a helping hand to that individual who asks for aid.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Rather than fret and fume about what you lack in the material things, get out with good companions and have them assist you in bettering your lot in life. Get sound advice and follow it. Meet interesting people, study new outlets.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Refrain from giving that highercup a piece of your mind simply because you feel you are being abused — look within yourself, the answer may be there. Be honest with yourself and then make the improvements that are needed.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't be satisfied with things that you are in, but find a more efficient way of over-seeing so that you get wonderful results. Meet fascinating new people who are experts, do some serious studying, be broad-minded. Expand.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Be sure you follow the advice of trusted experts and those who truly are interested in your welfare instead of being influenced by that overzilli new individual. Forget about being so emotional and get feet on the ground.

If your child is born today .. he, or she, will be of that genre of people who must do everything the hard way during adolescence. But some of these hard knocks will be remembered lessons throughout the lifetime. Give a good education in matters that have to do with, allspecial phases of life, particularly the handling of money and property as well as some course in art, and its appreciation.

Ottawa Warehouse Is Focal Point of Stocking up Supplies in Case of A-War

By JACK VAN DUREN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — A giant warehouse here is stocking supplies in event of nuclear war.

The warehouse is the focal point of Canada's program to stockpile the thousands of tons of medical supplies that will be needed if and when Canada suffers a nuclear attack.

"The possibility is there and we must prepare for it," Dr. A. C. Hardman, 57 - year - old head of the program, said in an interview.

The Korean War veteran left the army medical corps to take over the federal health department's emergency health service branch, in charge of the collection and distribution of the $18,000,000 worth of supplies.

The possibility of nuclear war is so great, said the native of Kapuskasing, Ont., that civil defence preparations at all levels "should be part of our normal way of life."

TRAINS PERSONNEL

His job is to see that supplies are available to treat the thousands of casualties that would result from a nuclear attack and to see that people are trained to treat them.

Courses have been given so far to more than 1,500 physicians, dentists, nurses, pharmacists and veterinarians.

There will be a tremendous shortage of trained medical people in the event of a nuclear attack, said Dr. Hardman, and even veterinarians will be needed.

"The problem will be just too great for the medical profession to handle itself." Therefore, persons from allied professions with a basic knowledge of medicine were being trained in case of emergency.

The hundreds trained by the federal government will return to the provinces to train more on a local level.

The supplies are sorted and packaged here for distribution to local warehouse and storage depots in the 10 provinces. Eight regional emergency health service offices have been set up in the provinces and more are planned.

AID SENT ABROAD

Parts of the supplies already have been used as Canadian contributions to countries hit by earthquakes or other natural disasters. Perishable supplies are constantly being taken out for use in such places as veterans' hospitals and are replaced.

The target is a stockpile of $18,000,000 worth of supplies, of which $11,000,000 worth is "ordered or on hand."

There are, for example, 2,800 hospital disaster supply outfits completely packaged and to be located in hospitals across the country. Arrangements are being made with the provinces for the safe-keeping of these supplies so they can be moved into hospitals as soon as possible and be on hand to replenish hospital stocks in event of attack.

They include, besides medicines, such things as burn dressings, bandages and special stretchers.

There are 420 portable advance treatment centres, designed "to render emergency medical treatment to the rescued patient and prepare him for transportation to hospital away from the scene of battle."

Plans call for the manufacture of 900 of these centres, pre-packaged in 91 units, each weighing about 80 pounds, to be whipped to the edge of a nuclear blast for emergency treatment. They carry supplies and equipment to handle 500 persons in a 48-hour period.

There are 26 blood-handling depots, each capable of processing 3,600 bottles a day.

Some $6,400,000 has been set aside for manufacture of 200 portable hospitals complete with three operating rooms each. In an emergency these 200-bed hospital units could be shipped aboard four three-ton trucks to centres where they are needed. Each is equipped with its own water and power facilities.

PREPARES FOR NUCLEAR EMERGENCY — Medical supplies to be used in event of nuclear war are being stockpiled in an Ottawa warehouse. Dr. A. C. Hardman, 57-year-old veteran of the Korean War who is in charge of the program, examines a suction pump, one item of a portable hospital unit assembled for shipment to the scene of a nuclear disaster. The program includes the collection and distribution of $18,000,000 worth of supplies and the training of personnel to use them. (CP Photo).

Kennedy Calls Security Group Special Session

May Be Near Decision On Laos Intervention

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy summoned the National Security Council into extraordinary Saturday session today amid a deepening anxiety here over Soviet-backed rebel military successes in Laos.

There was speculation the administration might be close to a decision for allied military intervention on the side of the pro - Western Laotian government, but officials declined to indicate what if any new steps the president might order.

Kennedy flew back to Washington early today following a speech in Chicago Friday night, where he said:

"We are the chief defender of freedom in a time of maximum danger. We have committed ourselves to the defence of dozens of nations. This we are determined to do."

MUST DESERVE FREEDOM

Kennedy, speaking to a political gathering, added:

"We can only defend the freedom of those who are ready to defend themselves. Our present ally is that people desire to be free."

State department authorities were reported still hopeful the Communist line in the Laotian civil war could be prevailed upon to work out the British-Soviet cease-fire agreement before the military situation deteriorated further.

But there was growing concern over evidence that the rebels were advancing on final acceptance of an armistice until they had consolidated their military position.

Britain and the United States had expressed that the ceasefire agreement would have been put into effect earlier this week. Instead, the rebels continued military attacks on government forces driving toward the royal capital of Luang Prabang and the administrative capital, Vientiane.

The cease-fire also provides for a 14-power conference to open at Geneva May 12 to negotiate a permanent settlement for Laos.

LUANG PRABANG (AP) — Two hundred pro-Communist rebel troops launched a dawn attack today on government positions just 46 miles north of Vientiane, military sources reported.

The rebels attacked Ban Keun, key government city 10 miles east of the north-south highway between Vientiane and the royal capital of Luang Prabang, the sources said.

More than 300 royal troops were rushed to reinforce Ban Keun garrison of one company. Details of the fighting were scarce.

A few hours before, Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, the pro-Western government's military strongman and deputy premier, sent out an emissary with a white flag, hoping to work out a ceasefire date with the Pathet Lao rebels.

There was no word from the emissary, but it was reported government radio tonight would broadcast a message to the rebels, fixing another date and hour for a meeting to work out a time for stopping the shooting. Both sides have agreed to a cease-fire but the problem has now become one of getting them to agree on a date and time.

Gen. Phoumi said he sent the white flag into the front lines in a dramatic gesture to prove "our sincere desire for peace."

Western diplomatic observers, noting that Phoumi's hourly broadcasts asking the Pathet Lao rebels for an effective cease-fire have gone unanswered, said they expected no response now either.

Phoumi sent Lt.-Col. Sibo Lampheuhack to Vang Kai, town 40 miles north of Vientiane on the main highway, Vang Kai is the gateway to Vang Vieng, a stronghold recently captured by pro-Communist rebels. It was not clear which side holds it.

The rebels have been de-

Concrete Proof Is Needed For Conviction

STRATFORD (CP) — The mere receipt of identical tenders by a municipality body does not mean that the anti-combines law has been broken, Justice Minister Fulton said here Friday.

He said tenders identical to the last penny are not necessarily suspicious of guilt or appearances of guilt are not enough for a conviction. Concrete proof was needed.

Trade Minister Hees said the government is not standing idle amid anticipation in trade matters although there was a certain real expectancy of an upturn in U.S. economic activity.

Chesley W. Carter, (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) said he fears too many good Canadian trade commissioners are being taken away by private enterprise when they are badly needed.

Frank McGee (PC—Scarborough) renewed his case against capital punishment and outlined the government against any move to spell out categories of murder punishable by death.

External Affairs Minister Green said "very grave consequences" would result if a cease - fire was not arranged quickly in Laos.

ALL OFFICERS OF PARATROOPS GIVE SELVES UP

400 Arrests Made In Algiers Region

ALGIERS (Reuters)—French authorities today announced the surrender of all officers of two paratroop regiments and three parachutist commando units in Algeria who were involved in the abortive Algerian revolt.

The announcement was made by Algerian Affairs Minister Louis Joxe and Armed Forces Minister Pierre Messmer as Joxe opened an on-the-spot investigation of rebel activities in Algiers.

Joxe said the units already are being dissolved under the disbandment order announced Friday by government spokesman Jacques Comp de Frejac. Details of the fighting were scarce.

The order also applies to the 1st Paratroop Regiment of the French Foreign Legion which led the revolt against President Charles de Gaulle in Algiers a week ago. Altogether about 4,000 to 5,000 men are affected.

Meanwhile, Joxe, working with Delegate - General Jean Morin and Chief of Staff Gen. Jean Olie, began a sector-by-sector investigation of military and civilian police personnel in Algiers after returning Friday from Constantine in eastern Algeria.

Reliable sources said they expected the arrests in each case of those who offered no resistance to the revolt in addition to those who actively supported it.

A government spokesman here said Friday that disciplinary action is being taken against 200 officers, five of them generals.

The spokesman also said there had been 400 arrests in the Algiers region. Also a shakeup was on in the joint services staff here.

Patent Control Used to Create Drug Monopoly

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail says the federal restrictive trades practices commission was told Friday Canada's pharmaceutical industry is using patent control of ethical drugs to create a monopoly situation.

In an Ottawa dispatch, the newspaper says the charge was made by W. H. W. Henry, director of investigation and research under the Combines Investigation Act.

It says Mr. Henry told the commission that for all practical purposes the drug industry in Canada is operating under conditions determined by the patent laws in the United States.

The research director said that Canadian patent laws prescribing such penalties are not being invoked because they said there is very little price competition for the retail level, except in proprietary and sundry household items."

Mr. Henry is quoted as saying most druggists "appear to have little choice" concerning their prescriptions and to retail such competition as at least verging on unethical professional conduct."

Recent Trends Justify Attempts To Put Trade Eggs in More Baskets

OTTAWA (CP) — Recent trends point to more emphasis on Canada's trading eggs in more baskets abroad, Trade Minister Hees told the Commons this week.

Sales overseas have helped compensate for declining farm exports to the United States, he said in a general review of his department's activities.

There is general expectancy that an upturn in U.S. economic activity is beginning or is imminent, he said, but Canada is continuing to be active abroad opening its own trade opportunities.

Mr. Hees was introducing the 1961-62 spending estimates of nearly $40 million for his department—an increase of $15,400,000.

Chesley W. Carter (L—Burin-Burrgeo) said the review contained serious omissions as well as reflecting Mr. Hees' "natural" optimism.

There was no word of the so-called invisible exports such as the tourist industries, dividends on interest, said Mr Carter.

There was nothing about the forces shaping world trade—for example, Communist economic penetration and aggression.

Harold Winch (CCF—Vancouver East) said the fears looming over good Canadian trade commissioners are being lured away by private enterprise at a time when they are badly needed. Mr. Hees' trade statistics did nothing to help the more than 700,000 unemployed.

The main discussion was another airing of matters well ventilated during the week when the opposition launched a full attack on government trade policy.

Mr. Carter said the fact is that Canada is not holding its own in world trade. Most countries had boosted exports.

He said Canada should reexamine its position as a free-enterprise nation, correcting its boo-management discord, price-fixing and the like.

Hubert Badanai (L — Fort William) said Canada might be better advised to concentrate on increased exports of raw materials and allow in more manufactured goods.

MERCURY CAPSULE TEST — A Mercury capsule, such as U.S. astronaut will use in a space flight next week from Cape Canaveral, Fla., is sent skyward on the nose of a Little Joe rocket launched at the NASA testing pad here Friday morning. It was a test of the capsule and the emergency escape system. The capsule was recovered in good condition 10 minutes later and returned to shore by helicopter. (AP Wirephoto.)

Premier Stresses Need For Third Political Party

HAMILTON (CP)—A world so civilized that international disputes are settled by a world court, democracy is served by a world parliament and military conflict is relegated was forecast Friday by Premier Douglas of Saskatchewan.

The 56-year-old favored contender for the New Party leadership said this prospect is a revolution of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC) that such a world is not a dream-er's utopia.

With tongue in cheek he said even the wild Canadian West of 100 years ago had become lawabiding.

"In the old days when two men quarrelled over a cow, out came the six-shooter and the man who got his out first got the cow," he said. "The other didn't need one."

"Today, when two farmers fight over a cow, they go to the city, see a lawyer—and he gets the cow."

But the short, fast - moving premier with steel - rimmed glasses didn't let such down-to-

Disclose Close Gambling Links Between Canada-U.S.

NEW YORK (CP) — A vast gambling net over the years across the United States and Canada from Nova Scotia has been revealed by a New York state investigation.

It has reports dealing with syndicated gambling, which it calls the prime law - enforcement problem, the New York state commission of investigation — complains that only "feeble" efforts are being made to fight professional gamblers.

"Many in law enforcement today view gambling as a type of criminal activity most suitable to be treated as a neglected interest, 'clean - up' campaign," the agency says in its annual report.

"Nothing could be less effective. By its very nature gambling is a continuing offence and unsupervised activity is essential to profitable operation."

In a supplementary study, the commission notes that the gambler, "aided by well-meaning and misguided persons, has tried to lull the public into a belief that professional gambling is a harmless activity."

On the contrary, the enormous profits from gambling were used to finance other unlawful enterprises — particularly the narcotics traffic, prostitution, bootlegging and running. Labor racketeers, bribed officials and lesser criminals also shared in the profits.

The international ramifications of bookmaking in the United States include layoff centes "in several cities in Canada and until recently in Havana;" the study adds. When a bookmaker has a volume of bets too large to handle, he "lays off" some of the money by asking a bigger bookie to accept some of the risk.)

"Some bookmakers do a very large gross volume of business (approximately $5,000,000 per year) with a consequent enormous net profit. On the other hand, some small town bookmakers earn as little as $5,000

Accused Given 25-Year Term

TORONTO (CP) John Alexander Bigelow, 30, who shot a friend during an argument, was sentenced to 25 years for attempted murder.

Mr. Justice R. I. Ferguson described Bigelow as "an extremely dangerous man" after an assize court jury convicted him of the attempted murder charge, possessing an offensive weapon and causing bodily harm with intent to wound.

Fred Lemaire testified he, Bigelow and a third man, Walter McCullough spent Jan. 30 drinking in hotels. He said that during an argument Bigelow pulled out a gun and fired three shots. One creased Lemaire's forehead, another hit McCullough in the chest.

NO PART WAY IN ABOLISHING DEATH PENALTY

-- McGee Member Speaks On Amendment

OTTAWA (CP)—The government was cautioned by one of its supporters Friday against going only part way in abolishing the death penalty for murder.

Such a move would lead to difficulties and contradictions, said Frank McGee (PC—York Scarborough), the Commons' leading proponent of outright abolition of capital punishment.

Mr. McGee told the House that the government, which has said without elaboration that it will amend the present mandatory requirement that the death penalty be imposed on persons convicted of murder, is "preparing a bill to limit the application of capital punishment."

He indicated that the British system would be followed under likely legislation—life imprisonment for murder in most cases but with the gallows kept ready for capital crimes committed during a theft, or with a gun or bomb, or if a second murder is committed by a person convicted or if the victim was a police officer or prison guard.

Mr. McGee scoffed at that distinction. He said:

"Contradictions and difficulties have evolved in reaching and determining the degree and the degree of culpability of murder at which a person shall be hanged.

"When you draw that line a case which qualifies for capital punishment will differ so infinitesimally from one just on the other side of the line that for all practical purposes there is no difference."

Under the British system, Mr. McGee said, a man would

Britain Decides To Seek to Join Common Market

LONDON (Reuters) — The British government has decided, in principle to seek entry into European Common Market provided negotiations are held on terms and provisions for difficult issues such as agriculture and commonwealth preferences, a diplomatic source said today.

The source said Conservative Prime Minister Macmillan first wants to complete the bilateral talks which Britain has been having since fall with individual members of the six-nation trade group. These talks would disclose exactly what technical difficulties have to be overcome.

Then, the sources said, British would apply to adhere to the Rome treaty which set up the Common Market on condition that special provisions were negotiated for the difficult issues.

Hitherto the British government has not made known that it is ready to take the plunge in adhering to the Rome treaty. The farthest it has gone in public is to offer to discuss a common or harmonized tariff with the Common Market.

Public Faith in Stock Exchange Said Shaken by Two Stockateers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government lawyers say public confidence in the American Stock Exchange has been severely shaken by charges of conspiracy of massive market rigging.

Lawyers for the Securities and Exchange Commission said Friday investigation of the affair is attributed to Wall Streeters Jerry and Gerard Res "have been a heavy blow at the market."

The exchange, the second largest in New York City and the United States, promptly issued a statement saying it has instituted a number of new rules and policies since the SEC inquiry began to restore confidence these "will prevent the recurrence of a similar situation."

The exchange has suspended the Res partners' decision in their case by the SEC.

Evidence against the Res, father and son, was summed up in a 96 - page brief filed with the five members of the SEC.

Eichmann Trial May Run Till Last of July

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's case against Adolf Eichmann is so massive that indications today point to July or later as a likely closing date for the end of the hearings.

"We hope to complete our proof by the end of June," Attorney-General Gideon Hausner told the court.

Canada Makes Big Wheat Deal With Red China

Communists Given Short-Term Credit

HONG KONG (AP)—Canada announced today it has made a new deal with Peking for 6 million grain lift to Red China hungry millions that may set an all-time record.

Canadian Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton indicated the deal would run well over the $60,000,000 grain agreement made with Peking last January and might "smash the biggest sale of grain in Canadian history."

Hamilton would not spell out the terms of the present deal, but he hinted Canada had agreed to give the Communists short-term credit.

In view of the present world situation, he told a press conference, Canada recognizes the need for commercial credit in this part of the world.

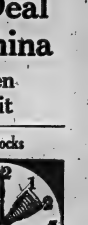
The Canadian and Australian's government's credit terms normally range from 30 to 180 days.

START SHIPMENTS SOON

Hamilton said an "agreement of intent" already has been signed with representatives of the Red Chinese government and the first shipment under the new pact will start loading in June. It may be completed by mid to the end of October, he added.

Peking authorities, who started their trade drive last year with their decision to go on the world market for grain, have been placing huge orders with both the Canadian and Australian governments.

The Chinese have been trying to keep the deals with the Western world quiet and official details have been scarce. But it is known a ship already has put out the equivalent of nearly 3,000,000 tons of wheat, flour of Australian and Canadian wheat and flour plus large quantities of fertilizer.



Terms of the January agreement is a mix of Canada and China were strictly cash. Delivering on that pact originally were scheduled to end in August, but Hamilton said they would be completed ahead of schedule.

A series of natural calamities in recent years, bureaucratic bungling and special pressure on agriculture by widespread food shortages on the China mainland.

Western observers have described the more than 2,000,000 tons of Canadian and Australian

Diment School of Dance Pupils Present Scintillating Recital

The Belleville Collegiate auditorium was filled to capacity on Wednesday evening, when the pupils of the Diment School of the Dance, under the direction of Gail (Henricks) Chapman, presented their annual dance recital.

The stage was decorated in a spring setting, with baskets of Easter lilies and pink snapdragons with a backdrop of pink spring flowers and blankets of pink and white flowers suspended from the ceiling. The opening number was a scintillating jazz routine by the rhythmaires, members of the senior baton corps, after which Robert Burke as master of ceremonies gave a brief resume of this year's theme, depicting two city dwellers on a visit to "Ole MacDonald's Farm". Here they meet the children and all the various characters pertaining to life in the country.

These included cottontails, turkeys, pet skunks, water buffalo, baby chicks and even a fire bug. While on the farm, they witnessed fine performances of the junior baton corps in "Country Capers," as well as other such features as on a hayride; a hobo's life; country girl; scarecrows; a Canadian beauty rose; and a twisting tumbler. After their holiday in the country, the two visitors return to the city and here they view the bright lights of city life, where the various dance and baton routines were splendidly performed.

HIGHLIGHTS

Every number was well presented, but just to mention a few of the highlights were the jazz performances of Betty Bannon in an acrobatic routine; Joyce Gran in a breathtaking flaming baton manipulation; and the rhythmic solo routines of Gail Chapman and Sheila Canning also a smooth tap-ballet routine by Ralph Wood in the duet class Iris Lohnes and Jackie Cook as always gave a splendid performance of several dance routines and acrobatics. The trio of Mary Elizabeth Young, Joel Hendricks and Betty Bannon gave a stirring performance, as well as the three baton groups — senior, junior and beginners.

SPECIAL GUESTS

As special guest, Cy Leonard with his pal Happy, a ventriloquist from Toronto, who has appeared on TV, night clubs and on stage, gave a hilarious performance, which was especially popular with the children.

Farmers Have Enough Water For a While

Water, water everywhere

Never a week ago district farmers were complaining that the lack of snow caused low water to run out of the creeks and when the spring thaw came.

Now they've had just about enough water for a while.

Heavy rains in the outdoor market today add steady rain for the past few days has flooded low-lying fields and slowed them up in their endeavors to begin seeding. Some farmers had hoped to start planting peas before now but the exceedingly wet ground has cramped their efforts.

Prices remained steady on the market with a good assortment of produce available.

Raymond Taylor In String Group

"Performs with style," was the opinion of Lee Kingland of The Globe and Mail in reviewing Tuesday's recital performance by five senior students at the Royal Conservatory in the Concert Room, Eaton Hall. The students were three violinists, one 'cellist, Mary Hrobelsky and Raymond Taylor, a violist, Leonard Odynski, and pianist, Ronald Laurie.

"The Faculty of Music of the University of Toronto and the Royal Conservatory have made efforts to present chamber music programs by senior students . . . there is greater promise for the future since ensemble playing will become compulsory when the faculty's new building opens later this year.

"That there will be a fairly substantial base to build upon was demonstrated last night Monday when a concert characteristic of all the performances was remarkably good ensemble playing and generally precise attack."

The program: Haydn - Op. 76, No. 2; Beethoven—Op. 18, No. 4; Shostakovich—Op. 49, No. 1.

Raymond Taylor, a member of the quartet, resided for some years in Belleville and was a student at Albert College, where his father, Barney Taylor, taught violin.

County Will Contribute Up to $165,000 to Proposed Addition to the Hospital

The County of Hastings will contribute 25 per cent of the net cost of the proposed new addition to Belleville General Hospital up to a maximum of $165,000."

This was the decision of the county fathers late Friday afternoon as they wound up the business of their April session. In making their decision councillors turned down a motion calling for payment of up to $200,000 toward the hospital addition.

Hospital board governors had requested a grant of $250,000 toward the proposed 60-bed hospital addition, the cost of which is estimated at $900,000.

The decision on the hospital grant came following a lengthy discussion in which it was generally agreed that the county had a moral responsibility in making a contribution to the hospital addition program. The question undecided by council appeared to be "how much", and on what basis will it be paid?"

The figure finally decided on was contained in an amendment to an original motion tabled by Marmora village reeve William A. Shannon, county representative on the hospital board, who favored the $200,000 amount.

AMENDMENT CARRIES

The amendment carried was introduced by Tweed reeve Douglas Spencer and Elzevir Earl Sager of Madoc township.

Getting discussion on the grant question underway, Reeve W. J. Davis said it didn't "quite add up to him that the Ongwanada Sanitorium in Kingston had 100 vacant beds when other hospitals had long waiting lists.

"It looks as though there was a need of a little more co-ordination," he said.

Tyendinaga Reeve Charles Long mentioned Ongwanada hospital on Thursday, noting that pressure was being brought to bear on it by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission to recognize the hospital for regular patients.

"I don't like to take anything away from the Belleville hospital but there is a feeling that there are patients in hospitals at Belleville who do not require the high standard of services available.")

NO BEARING CLAIM

But Warden Harleigh Hamilton decided whether Ongwanada hospital would be of much benefit to patients in the Belleville area even if it were approved by the OHSC. "It would not have any bearing on the need for a 60-bed addition at Belleville", he said.

Reeve Victor Hughson of Wallaston was one of the same opinion saying that any vacant beds there would be swallowed up by Kingston.

But Reeve Verne McMurray of Tudor felt the possible availability of beds at Kingston should be given consideration.

Reeve Earl Sager agreed that all people had some obligation in helping to pay the capital costs of hospitals, but along with Reeve Spencer felt that the estimated cost of $900,000, for the proposed wing was much too high.

He could not see a hospital wing providing for 60 beds being as large as the new county building which including furnishings cost but $700,000. He pointed out that in the case of the hospital addition no new services would be required.

SHOULD HOLD CANVASS

He felt also that the hospital board should not rule out the possibility of a public canvass to help raise funds and said that doctors should be expected to contribute toward what was actually "their own workhouse."

On the basis of lower than estimated costs and a lower responsibility on the part of the county, he suggested a grant of $169,000.

But Reeve J. N. Brown of Bancroft said any contribution the county might give should be on a percentage basis rather than a definite figure.

Reeve Shannon stressed that the hospital need was as stated and felt that the amount asked by the hospital board was "a miscugle as possible before plans were drawn.

He agreed, however, that the overall amount of the grant should be based on actual costs, and suggested the maximum figure of $200,000 or two mills of the actual cost if this was lower than the original estimate.

Rawdon Reeve Kenneth Mumby said the Belleville hospital was also the county hospital.

"The need is great, I'll go along with Reeve Shannon's suggestion," he said.

Some councillors felt the county should delay action until more definite figures were secured by the hospital board with Tudor Reeve Verne Whittemore and others feeling the hospital board of governors should have had things in a more concrete form before making their request of county council.

Reeve Spencer's amendment which was seconded by Reeve Sager, called for the hospital grant to be paid at the rate of one mill per year at no interest with the first payment to commence in 1962.

The Friday afternoon session was taken up entirely with the consideration of grant requests ranging all the way from grants to fall fairs, and recreational grounds up to the hospital grant.

One of the requests was from the Belleville YMCA for $5,000 to help aid the considerable discussion contributed to that amount payable over a five year period. Here again the first payment will not be until next year.

The request was generally of the opinion that the benefits from the Belleville "Y" were confined to Belleville only. Reeve McMurray said the "poor taxpayer" had to be considered.

Reeve Carl Whittemore summed the matter up this way: "We will get to help make our young people good citizens, physically and mentally", he said. "I'll go along with the request".

Deputy Reeve Bateman took a bit of good-natured ribbing when he said that the Stirling Old Home Week Committee which two years ago sponsored the "boys" project, will had $3,000 in profit which was being held in trust.

"The recreational centre would be a good place for that committee", commented Reeve Davis.

Local fall fairs were given the usual grant of $175; $125 went to the Ostawa Winter Fair; $250 to the British Hospitality Cheese Show held annually in Belleville, and $350 to the Belleville Fair.

A grant request for $500 from the Bancroft Old Home Week committee was laid on the table with the assurance that if the committee had a deficit after the event, the county would "help out."

The Friday morning session of council was taken up mainly with routine matters of finance including that for equalization of the county assessment for 1962; the general rate by-law of 13.25 mills and the road by-law of 7.5 mills.

Also by-by-law the salary of the county assessor was increased $200 to $4,500 per year, and the salary of the county home physician was set at $3,000 per year.

County home committee chairman Carl Whittemore said the method of paying the physician was being changed to an annual salary rather than by a per call basis. Also under the new system the county would receive a provincial grant of $1,000 per bed.

"Actually the county will save money," he said as the salary is exceedingly low for the work done. It is just another way of paying."

Council turned down a grant request from the Belleville School for Retarded Children with one councillor suggesting that the school approach local municipalities in which there are retarded children attending the Belleville school.

Council also took no action on a motion from Reeve Pat Fitzgerald asking that the county road department reimburse the county $2,000 for clerical work done in the general county offices.

The above matter has been frequently discussed by county councillors and each year the county auditor makes note of it in the annual report.

The feeling generally on the part of council is, however, that there is no point in getting too technical in making inter-department cost charges.

Laboratory Technicians May Be Trained in City

Setting up of the proposed school for laboratory technicians at Belleville General Hospital will mean a capital outlay estimated at $44,000, plus the salary of a full time instructor, members of the hospital board have been told.

Equipment for the school would cost approximately $19,000 and conversion of existing space another $35,000.

The school would train ten students, some of whom would remain on the staff of the hospital.

The board has voted to carry on with the long range program to establish the training school.

Equipment purchases amounting to more than $15,000 plus a Bird breathing assister, were authorized by the board at their regular monthly meeting on Friday. The latter assister, costing $633 is used in the operating room in conjuction with the anaesthetic machine.

The major item among the purchases authorized was a mobile X-ray unit costing $5,200.

APPROVE MOTION

Hiring of an assistant pathologist has also been approved by the board. The recommendation for the hiring of an assistant pathologist came from a combined meeting of the executive committee and a committee from the medical staff.

The board is proceeding with its preliminary studies toward plans for the proposed new 60 bed hospital addition costing an estimated $900,000. The hospital property committee has been authorized to interview several architects and bring in a recommendation to the board.

The $900,000 cost estimate for the proposed wing is admitted to be a very rough figure but a more accurate estimate will not be available until plans are drawn. The $900,000 figure is based on an estimated $15,000 per bed, but with no new services to be provided there is a feeling the cost may be less than the preliminary estimate.

Three Premises In City Entered During Night

Night operators forced their way into three different premises in Belleville Friday night.

Petty cash was said missing from the Ontario Cheese Producers' office on the bay shore where entry was gained through a shipping door.

At the Gary Sine service station at the corner of North Front and Moira Streets, a window was broken and the intruders made off with a mantel radio and a power buffer and polisher.

A local church was also reported to have been entered.

Council Rescinds By-Law Which Hired Walter Murray As Town Engineer in 1960

TRENTON — Town Council held a special session last night and rescinded a by-law by which Walter Murray was hired in January, 1960, as town engineer.

No reason was given for council's decision to release Mr. Murray.

Col. Thomas Medland of Toronto, executive director of the Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario, who has been engaged as Mr. Murray's spokesman said yesterday in a telephone interview, "We are investigating to ensure that he has been fairly treated and that he has not been subjected to any unfair persecution. A municipal engineer who is really doing his job and protecting the interests of the taxpayer is bound to step on someone's toes."

Col. Medland declined to comment about whose toes Mr. Murray may have stepped on.

CONFIRMS RUMOR

Acting Mayor Ross Burtt yesterday confirmed rumors that Mr. Murray had been asked to resign. But he declined to comment on the circumstances surrounding council's decision.

A reporter from The Ontario Intelligencer has tried to confirm rumors concerning council's request for Mr. Murray's resignation since an advertisement appeared in a Toronto newspaper Monday seeking applications for the job. But all councillors were non-committal. Mayor James MacDonald was out of town until Friday. He attended last night's council meeting but he was unavailable for comment afterward.

Mr. Murray came to Trenton from Point Clare, Que., where he was employed as city engineer from 1955 to 1959.

Trenton High School

BY SANDY BROWN

TRENTON — At a Students' Council meeting held Tuesday, it was decided to change the theme of the Spring Prom from "Paris" to "Underwater." The new theme will give the decorations committee more scope.

Invitations to the dance can be obtained at the school next week. The price is $2 a couple and the boys are asked to wear suits, the gals may show off their latest formals. Corsages are in order, boys! A hot lunch will be served and music provided by an orchestra.

• • •

Last night's semi-formal planned by Tuesday's council cancelled due to lack of interest. A casual dance was put on as a replacement. Dancing to the Rhythm Rockets, a Belleville group, was enjoyed.

• • •

All students seen running, jumping, pole vaulting, etc., around the school haven't newspapers. I figured out that there are only 29 more days left this year. They may be practising for the coming track and field meet. Speaking of the 29 days—how time has flown!

THE TATTLER

A new week brings new gossip, so away we go!

Barb has had a sojourn in the hospital. She's out now and well on the way to recovery.— We hope.

What grade 9 students (female vistim) what hospital patient (male) last week

We understand the Judy C., has a ring, and has had it since Christmas. Pardon us for being so snoopervising.

Hubert claims that he isn't afraid of Pat . , but we know different.

H . . . to Yvonne in Deseronto, I hope you're still reading the column.

Who owns the little black car of ancient vintage seen in the parking lot this week? Talk about your antiques.

Judy and Kenzie are still going strong. Nice couple, too! Speaking of long-time twosomes, wouldn't Nancy and Gary get a mention for the year they've been demonstrating togetherness? How about Elaine and Fred? Or even Lorraine (her sister)and Fred? Design for living.

Judy and Kenzie are the latest to peer off.

If witches and cats go together, what does that make Mr. Macdonald who boasts of not one, not two, but three felines?

That's all for this week.

A Bank and the Housewife

"This season of the year, when the country-side is vibrant with the nascent promise of spring and Canadians are wistfully looking forward to summer activities . . ."

What an opening sentence—for a commercial letter by a bank, of all things!

Giving credit where credit is due, though—which is something the banks do not always do, bless 'em—some of the best publicity writing in Canada is done by the men and/or women who produce these monthly letters for the chartered banks. The Royal Bank production is outstanding, while the Canadian Bank of Commerce, from which the phrases quoted in our opening paragraph have been taken, is a close rival.

Believe it or not, these opening phrases were used to introduce a learned discourse on "Capital in the Home," capital in this case being the investment in such things as radios, electric refrigerators, television sets, washing machines, stoves, sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, telephones and automobiles.

Graphs show "the degree of market saturation for Canadian households" in these facilities. Radios lead the way. Approximately 97 per cent of Canadian households have a radio and this proportion has not changed materially since 1953. Washing machines appear next in popularity, increasing from a little over 80 per cent in 1953 to almost 90 per cent today. Television sets have made the greatest gain, from about ten per cent in 1953 to 80 per cent today. A puzzler is provided by the table on cooking equipment. At first glance it would appear that only 60 per cent of Canadian households cook food, but the explanation seems to be that only electric and gas stoves are listed. In 1953 less than 60 per cent were equipped with either gas or electric stoves. Biggest field for expansion is for home freezers. While over 10 per cent of Canadian homes are now equipped with them, compared with a meagre two or three per cent in 1953, there is still a long way to go before the saturation point is reached.

Those who buy household equipment on time find support from the bank. "Household capital goods represent stored-up consumption," says the letter, "and their ownership yields benefits over a considerable period of time. Current consumption is becoming increasingly a matter of using the services of capital goods which, incidentally, provides a rationale for consumer credit or installment buying. There would appear to be no logical reason why a consumer should necessarily pay for his consumption in advance by paying cash for capital goods."

No logical reason, except that it is cheaper.

Nasser and Castro

David Rowntree, a Canadian Press staff writer, observed in an interpretive article the other day that there was a similarity between the invasion of Cuba and the British-French attack on Suez.

Superficially this is true. In Egypt, Britain and France had seen their interests, in the Suez Canal nationalized by Nasser, just as U.S. firms in Cuba were nationalized by Castro. At the time of the Suez invasion, Nasser was being painted-as a tool of the Communists, though it is perhaps of some significance that much less is heard of this theme now that Nasser is considered as being a Communist stooge. At the time of Suez, it was feared that Russia would use Egypt and her influence there as a wedge to get into Africa. Now it is said that all Latin America will be threatened if the Communists can use Cuba as a base.

Here, though, the similarity stops. The British and French sent their own forces against Nasser. The U.S. did not move against Cuba itself, but supported Cuban exiles. If we liken the role of these exiles to that of the Israeli forces in the Suez invasion, it needs to be said that the Israelis had real reason to fear an eventual Arab attack against their country, by reason of Nasser's continual threats.

The most striking difference, though, is that the UN acted promptly to restore and maintain peace in the Suez invasion, in effect protecting Nasser, with the approval of the U.S. One wonders what would happen today if Britain and France pressed for UN action in Cuba, to assure Castro against any intervention by the U.S.

If this invisible germ of life in the grain of wheat can thus pass unimpaired through three thousand resurrections, it shall not doubt that my soul has power to clothe itself with a new body, suited to its new existence, when this early frame has crumbled into dust.—William Jennings Bryan.

Signs of Life Elsewhere

By John N. Wilford in the Wall Street Journal

Scientists have turned up the first physical evidence to suggest that life exists elsewhere in the universe.

A hint of such life somewhere in space has been found in fragments of a meteorite that fell to earth near Orgnoil, France, in 1864, according to a research team in New York City. Only now, nearly a century later, have analytical techniques advanced sufficiently to enable scientists to determine the meteorite's exact composition. Their finding: It contains certain hydrocarbon molecules composed of hydrogen and carbon atoms that are similar in structure to those occurring in living matter.

"We believe that wherever this meteorite originated, something lived," concludes Dr. Warren G. Meinschein of Esso Research and Engineering Co., the scientific arm of standard Oil (New Jersey). Dr. Meinschein and Drs. Bartholomew Nagy and Douglas J. Hennessy, of Fordham University here worked together on the research project. They reported their findings and conclusion to the New York Academy of Sciences.

While other scientists are cautious in commenting immediately on the Esso-Fordham discovery, they admit that it is interesting" development that is sure to intensify efforts of other researchers who are looking into the possibilities of life in space. Scientists might take the form of strange one-celled creatures or animals more advanced than bacteria, they speculate.

Already, a massive scientific quest for signs of life within our own solar system is under way. Researchers are concentrating their study on Mars and Venus. Mars, orbiting 141 million miles around the sun are nearest the earth of all planets. The temperature and atmospheric conditions on Venus and Mars are believed to be more like our own than are those of any other planets. Presumably, this increases the possibility that life exists in some form.

Up until now, all talk of life in space has been pure conjecture. Dr. William Hiltner of Lowell Observatory, Flagstaff, Ariz., has reported that studies of changes in light reflected from Mars have given him a good indication of vegetation on that planet. Dr. Melvin Calvin of the University of California has reported that organic meteorites molecules of a type thought to be precursors of life. Dr. Calvin says, however, that there is no telling whether or not these fragments were of biologic origin.

Scientists have assumed that physical conditions on some other planets are enough like our own to support life. At a recent symposium on "Life in Other Worlds," Dr. George B. Kistiakowsky of Harvard University, former president of National science adviser, stated: "Astronomers tell us that in the galaxy alone there exist many millions of planets on which physical conditions are similar to those on earth. It would be totally unscientific to deny them the probability of life."

Dr. Kistiakowsky believes, however, that it is unlikely any extra-terrestrial life is like us in shape, size, intelligence or color. Says he: "It would be still less probable to find intelligent beings equal to ourselves if we just at random picked out one of them. Modern man has existed but a fraction of a million years, a mere instant in the cosmic timescale. The chance of finding somewhere in space a planet in precisely this instant of evolution is small, indeed. But, on the other hand, if we could visit all the million or so planets similar to our own, it is almost probable that we would find all stages of evolution here and there, including beings fully developed with intelligence processes at least as good as ours.

The few examples shown at this exhibition are striking for their sense of humor as well as for the sense for color and form of the artist.

"Snowy Owl and Egg." "Excised Man Forgets His Wesson," and "Seal Thoughts of Man" are some of the titles.

Czechs Like Eskimo Art

Prairie News Letter

Canada's northern territories, extending for 1.5 million square miles, account for 40 per cent of that huge country's area—although yet they are inhabited by only 25,000 people. The bewildered inhabitants of this vast isolation are 12,000 Eskimos.

This remote Eskimo fishing according to traditional 2,000 years old, is now undergoing a transition period ;economic development of the northern territories since the war has brought white men, schools, doctors and trading opportunities.

This change can also be seen in Eskimo art: the traditional stone carvings of animals and of men engaged in their family life, or hunting, trapping and fishing are more sophisticated, better finished, more realistic.

These artists are no longer made only for the artist's own satisfaction but find admirers out side the Artic circle

That they deserve this admiration anyone may ascertain himself who visits the small exhibition prepared by the Canadian Department of External Affairs and shown in Bratislava, Brno, Prague and Pardubice at present.

In "Man Blowing up a Sealskin Float," for instance, the artist Inukpuk of Port Harrison has perfectly observed outlines of the heavily-dressed hunter and the inflated skin blend to form a floating unit.

"Bear and Seal" illustrate the lively humor of Eskimo art in unknown artist; the large bear forms a living rug for the small seal.

A new form of art developed in the past few years under the guidance of James Houston, an artist and Canadian government official living at Dorset Bay, are prints made either with wood blocks or skin stencils.

An Eskimo co-operative formed at Dorset Bay helps the hunter-artists to print their designs and sends them to urban art stores for sale.

Guard That Credit Card

Cleveland Plain Dealer

More than 20 million Americans now carry credit cards which permit them to buy everything from a gallon of gasoline to a round-the-world cruise. Most of them get little or troublesome unless those to whom they have been issued are careful.

Reader's Digest for April warns that such cards are becoming increasingly more attractive to thieves. A lost credit card happens to wind up in the hands of a crook you may be stuck for the bills he runs up on your card from the time it is lost or stolen until you report that loss to the credit card company.

"In the case of airline travel cards," the article advises, "the responsibility for loss continues for 30 days after notification."

How can one prevent such liability? These suggestions are offered. Every time you open your billfold check to see that your credit card is still there; never leave it lying in a hotel room or in the glove compartment of a car; never sign a charge slip in a restaurant, department store or anywhere else until your card has been returned to you; destroy the old credit card when a new replacement has been issued; and once again, and most important, notify your issuing firm promptly immediately when a card is missing.

Of course there's still one old-fashioned way to avoid such complications entirely. Pay for what you get when you get it.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR EARL L DOUGLASS

COURAGE

Courage — probably no virtue of mankind has been more assiduously admired in all ages and cultures. From the oldest literatures down to yesterday's news stories, everyone admires courage.

The history of Western civilization has been a history of exploration, of settlement, of war; in all these activities, courage has distinguished the great leaders, and especially in war, although the methods of warfare change, the need for courage remains the same, as the multitude of novels and memoirs of World War Two constantly reminds us.

But the greatest need for courage is not in war, which for most people occupies relatively little of their lives. Everyday living is what really takes courage — if we are to live differently — and not an occasional, showy courage, but a steady everyday, uncomantic willingness to fight the good fight.

Life is full of difficult and unpleasant tasks which not only must be done, but which also must be faced again each day. In every community of this nation there are men and women struggling with illness, poverty, debt, loneliness, alcoholism, and countless other crushing forces. Not even all those who have courage win out in the fight. It is true, But none of those who quit and give up will win out.

"The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?"

Light grey geese are winging their way to the northern haunts early today, honked a raucous salute to city residents shortly after dawn broke in the east. Another flock of the birds were heard at approximately two a.m., the sound of their flailine wings and hoarse cries awakening many people as they lodged northward at a low altitude.

William J. Newman, of Norham, finished first in the senior year final examinations of the following students, according to reports released yesterday by the principal. The following students were awarded their junior year in Agricultural Representative Richason of Holloway; W. J. Pigden of Madoc R.R. 1; and C. J. Shannon of Plainfield.

Fire believed to have originated from a spark from a bonfire, totally destroyed the large barn and outbuildings of William Mumby, well known second concession of Sidney farm-area Monday afternoon. Several young calves, a horse, a number of chickens and a pigpen were lost in the flames; also lost were two haystacks, a strawstack, farm equipment stored in the barn and a large driveshed with its contents.

Need Appetite For Future

Ottawa Journal

What is the world's greatest need?

The New York Times put that question to some outstanding men and women and published a chorus of human aspiration. The ideals are high, as they should be. But when they are impressively stated they show again that we have not solved problems.

Mr. C. P. Snow, the scientist and novelist, says: "We must get back our appetite for the future":

"Too often we British are clinging by our fingernails to the existential moment . . . All healthy societies are ready to sacrifice the existential moment for their children's future and for children after those. This sense of the future is behind all great societies. Unless we have it we can give nothing either wise or decent to the world."

Some of the responses fixed upon a sharpening of man's goals as his greatest need. Rev. Martin Luther King used Thoreau's phrase to summarize modern society's failing. Man has achieved, says Thoreau, "improved means to an unimproved end."

The historian Mr. Arnold J. Toynbee says that our need is mutual confidence:

"Only when being ever knows all the secrets of another's heart. Yet there is enough confidence between mother and child, husband and wife, buyer and seller, representative and constituent to make social life a practical possibility. . . . Where confidence is absent, life is 'nasty, brutish and short' as Thomas Hobbes said."

Senator Margaret Chase Smith took the idealism out of the realm of abstraction and gave us no escape:

"We need an individual firmness to be willing to pay higher taxes — to work longer hours — to pay higher luxuries— to give our individual time . . ."

Dr. Peale said Mr. Charles P. Taft of the famous Ohio family, he added, "has combined with the dynamic individual free conscience, courage to oppose, courage to take a chance, to speak out, and to lead, in spite of persons and powers in his way toward a godly society".

Perhaps it all comes down to this: The world needs more good men and women.

Strange Kind Of Recession

Calgary Herald

A cross-country manpower survey by Christopher Young has revealed three outstanding facts:

First, this is an unusual recession in that the "in-works" are enjoying high wages and an excellent standard of living, while the "out-of-works," of course, are not. There has been, in other words, a shift in ratios of salaries among the employed. It is fresh evidence that although the latter is softened nowadays by unemployment insurance.

Second, there is little or no place nowadays in labor's ranks for the unskilled man or woman.

And, third, that automation and improved techniques are throwing out of work an increasing number of skilled tradesmen.

Away From It All

No, Cigaret Smoking Does Not Keep a Person's Nose Warm

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

Years ago smoking used to be opposed on grounds that it would stunt the growth. There never has been any evidence to support this, but at least it was an argument that the eighth graders sometimes found convincing. If you think kids didn't smoke in the seventh and 8 grades 40 years ago, you've forgotten too much!)

Well, today the big argument is that cigaret smoking causes lung cancer. And there's another group that contends, with some evidence, that there's no proof that cigarets cause lung cancer.

All right. I'll agree. There's no proof. I know people who have smoked cigarets since World War I and still have good lungs.

I even know of some people who have never smoked cigarets and yet died of lung cancer.

It isn't an open-and-shut rule that if you smoke cigarets you'll have lung cancer, and if you don't, you won't.

But one fact is now far beyond the stage of dispute, so far as I know: lung cancer occurs far more frequently among cigaret smokers than in any other group.

That's good enough for me.

The American Cancer Society is waging a campaign against teenage smoking. I hope it is successful. For anybody who's never starts smoking, so misses it.

Cancer isn't, however, the only factor involved. There's the cost. There's the risk of fire, in bed in the woods or elsewhere, caused by careless smokers. There's "cigaret cough." I could go on, but I won't, name an eminent cancer authority who finally quit, not because of the cancer risk but because he coughed so hard he couldn't get enough sleep.

Smoking, however, enjoyable, is not a healthful habit, and the public doesn't advise I can give is, "Don't."

I don't really, expect my words to have any great effect. It's all been said before, and nothing to it has happened. For reasons I don't understand there seems to be some urge for young people to smoke, even though they don't, in the beginning, enjoy it. I guess it makes them feel grown up.

I remember a big, lumbering boy named Emil, in my own eighth grade class, who used to smoke cigarets right on the street. And one cold day he remarked candidly, "There's one thing about these butts, they keep your nose warm."

They really don't, of course, but that's about how much logic there is in smoking.

I guess maybe the old idea, "don't smoke until your are 21" is as good an approach as any. At least it postponed the problem, and postponing it at least some improvement over beginning smoking in childhood.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Could a continual tickling in the throat hurt me? My trouble is gone when I use them. — M. W."

Try a throat suppository to initiate a bowel movement in the morning. If you say using suppository for some rectal disorder, have a thorough medical checkup.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What method should be taken if a person refuses to go see a psychiatrist and is a danger to self? — V. M."

You can't force people to do things for their own good. All you can do is persuade 'em. If in the words of Shaw, a man said that it interferes with the rights of other people, then the law can step in and do some insisting. Since specific laws vary from state to state, my advice is to discuss the matter frankly with your family doctor first. If need be he can advise you as to further steps. In general, psychiatrists are a jurisdiction over such matters.

Just how beholden should we be to the sponsors of TV and radio entertainment? TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

KEEP ARRIVING

We are always arriving somewhere. As Tagore, the Indian poet and author beautifully put it, even the journey which we travel is in itself a part of our destination.

How anxiously we look forward to the meeting of some much loved whom we have not seen for a long time. How his or her arrival thrills us with joy.

And how we are thrilled the moment we arrive at some destination long-sought for and planned and worked.

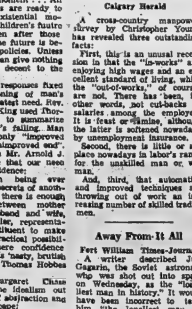
As long as I can remember I have looked forward to the close of each day — its lengthening shadows, its sunset, its stars.

But the greatest arrival of all is to arrive in someone's life there to carry beauty, happiness and inspiration.

How strange it is that the very presence of some people cheers and brightens the atmosphere about them no matter where they go. What a beautiful world would be if we were all like it!

Just to arrive in a new day and to feel that you are wanted for it, and that you have definite work to do, is an inspiration.

To bring happiness to someone else is to double your own.



I like to watch the effect upon an audience the first arrival of a great actor or actress as they step on the stage over his or her role in the play.

We add lustre to virtue, energy to beauty, and build stars where the worship of true values may have honest expression, every time we determine to make our arrival — no matter where or when.

Remember, you are always arriving somewhere!

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

A Lift For Living

Wish to Win Stirs Creativity

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

We try to stimulate our children in school to make something of themselves. We say "Be somebody." Most American adults learned Longfellow's lines:

"Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us,
Footprints on the sand of time."

It is pride which is always striving to make the headlines. The overweening desire for publicity is to be deplored. But it is normal to want to count for something in the community; to be remembered by someone.

We picture life as a race. Our schooling and our sports instill in youngsters the desire to win.

This wish to win is not contrary to the Christian spirit. The Apostle Paul apparently attended the Greek games of his day, for he drew illustrations from the athletic contests. In his letter to the Philippians he likened himself to a contestant in a race. He wrote: "I press on toward the goal for the prize of the upward call of God in Christ Jesus."

A GODLY AMBITION

If players were not eager to win there would be no zest in games. It is a selfish ambition which drives men to the pace that kills. But it is a godly ambition which spurs men to the pace that creates.

The question is, can we make life a recreative game instead of a death-dealing battle?

The month of April 1961 has been making history. In Jerusalem the Eichmann trial reopened our memories to the mass slaughter of millions. In Russia the globe-circling feat of a young astronaut opened our minds to vast new vistas of space travel. These two events reveal the new dimensions of living and dying.

For the first time in human history we can now commit race suicide. With our nuclear energy, our missiles and space vehicles we have both the power, and the proximity to our neighbors to kill them all off. We face the choice between fighting to the death or playing the game for a fabulous future of greater living.

In a spirit of good sportsmanship, we should applaud the courage of the Russian astronaut and the engineering skill which made his flight possible. But Russia should remember that the game of global living is not won by brilliant star performances but by the spirit of team play. Let the Soviet Union in her present moment of pride, the war basis so that we could now show her goodwill by teamwork to end the strife in Laos and speed up negotiations for nuclear control at Geneva.

Mr. Eisenhower, a few years ago, proposed an atoms-for-peace program. Mr. Kennedy has started a Peace Corps and outlined new forms of service for Latin America. These are pointers in the right direction to turn the human spirit from battles to games.

Recently a card came to my desk headed with the question, "Are we civilized?" Below was a picture of a silver dollar cut into segments, showing that 73.5 per cent of America's national budget is spent for past, present and future. What if we could get the world off the war basis so that we could spend three-quarters of our budget for peaceful uses! What a great game we could play for a glorious future!

The Local Association for Belleville - Southern District Guides and Brownies met at the home of the Commissioner, Mrs. H. T. Floyd, on Monday evening.

The minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. D. Lamb, and the treasurer's report given by Mrs. R. Bailey. The new Badge secretary, Mrs. T. Colson, reported ten Golden Hand Badges and two Toymakers badges earned by Brownies.

Mrs. Floyd reported on the various activities of the District packs and companies. Several groups are planning Mother and Daughter banquets for their closing in May.

FLOWERS AROUND THE WORLD

"... Nature never did betray the heart that loved her."—William Wordsworth.

"The one thing I'm looking forward to is getting out into my garden. I can scarcely wait until it's time to feel the earth in my fingers, to plant seed and watch the plants burst with life up through the soil and grow into a miracle of beauty. It never ceases to thrill me."

This Belleville woman's botanical love is shared throughout the world. Many communities have horticultural and garden clubs. Such a one is the Horticultural Association which is embarking upon a new garden venture in the spring along with The Rhode Island, Mass., and Michigan horticultural societies and the Civic Association of Garden Clubs. And what's the venture? Garden tours on a world-wide scale!

Briefly, they are sponsoring to combine a trip abroad with tours, which will allow tourists the visits to show gardens, green houses and private estates; initiaries to suit wide range gardening tastes.

The first 1961 European Spring Garden tour which includes stopovers in Italy and the Netherlands at tulip time, Belgium, France and England, sails from New York in April and ends the last of May. The total cost (not including transAtlantic transportation) is $1,262.

There is a British Isles Spring Garden tour of slated to leave from New York in May. Gardens and historical places of interest in Scotland, Sweden Demark and the Netherlands will be visited on the Scotland Scandinavian Gardens and Scenic tour which leaves from New York at the end of May. This (not including transportation will cost $1,297.50.

For are those of the Orient forgotten, and itineraries are arranged for spring and autumn garden tours which will include visits to gardens in Hawaii, Japan, Hong Kong, Thailand and Cambodia. There are also spring and autumn Mexican garden tours, if, as yet, there is no dearth of choices!

But one not listed is in Indonesia.

This is not too surprising considering its political problems. Perhaps in the not-too-distant future tours will be allowed to view Kebun Raya, "The Great Garden," which refers to but one spot, the beautiful Javanese garden at Bogor, Brown in Dutch colonial days as Buitenzorg. Today 150 years later, this is considered the most famous of all tropical gardens.

CENTRE OF STUDIES

Ever since 1817, when a Dutch governor general established the garden, the Kebun Raya has been the centre of plant science studies in the Indies. It is said that more than three-quarters of all living plants are native of equatorial Asia. Botanists sent there is a lack of sufficient trained personnel. Kebun Raya still serves as the centre for most natural history studies in Indonesia. Down through the years numerous plant hunters, stationed at Bogor have gone on expeditions to the outlying islands of Borneo, Halmahera, New Guinea, Celebes and Sumatra.

The plant-gathering expeditions have been most successful. It is possible for visitors to the gardens to see a lively sampling of the flora of an archipelago which, if placed across Canada, would stretch from coast to coast.

Thousands of different kinds of plants have been cultivated at Bogor. At present about 10,000 to 15,000 living species are inventoried on the Kebun Raya's grounds and many others are found at branch gardens in Indonesia.

Since many botanical gardens in the New World strive to obtain whether tropical plants will thrive under green house cultivation, such species are rare in demand. To collect and prepare living plant specimens for shipment from such a garden as Kebun Raya, for example, involves great thought and care. Permission must be granted first fro mthe Indonesian authorities as well as observance of quarantine restrictions from our own government. Plans shipped by air must meet plane schedules and assurance that the precious cargo be carried first-class in heated compartments.

There are all of the kinds and numerous species that may be collected and ultimately shipped here, there are the bizarre members of the ginger and arrowroot families; unusual arums, including several giant aquatic elephant-ears; unusual orchids, such as the sugarcane orchid, whose numerous 20-foot-long stems make it the largest of all orchid plants, as well as the tiny, leaf-

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

When Thoreau said, "I had three chairs in my house: one for solitude, two for friendship, three for society," he must have been feeling more sociable than he usually felt. I never found the companion that was so companionable as solitude. He did not say what kind of chairs he had in his hut, but they were not likely the soft, padded variety we can get today.

The dictionary says that a chair is 'a separate seat for one, of various form.' I must cut the examples which follow connect chairs with prestige or authority. The Encyclopaedia says a chair is 'a movable seat, usually with four legs and for a single person, the most varied and familiar article of domestic furniture. It also connects the chair with authority such as a professorial or ecclesiastical chair. While the chair goes far back in antiquity, for many thousands of years it was connected only with the dignity or state or church.

LATE DEVELOPMENT

It was only at a comparatively late date, in the sixteenth century, that chairs became common anywhere. Until that time, the chest, the bench and the stool were used for seats in everyday life. They were of wood, mainly oak and were not upholstered until the middle of the seventeenth century in leather first and later in richer materials and fabrics. Almost all the early chairs were quite heavy and had arms; the smaller styles came later.

The chair became the object of attention of artists and designers and we have the period chairs whose styles are copied to this day. The history of the chair says that the eighteenth century was the golden age of the chair; afterwards the quality ceased to attract the artist.

This may have been when chairs and other pieces of furniture became primarily functional - for use rather than art - and continued to the present day. However, the field of modern art is careful to assert that it influences all our man-made surroundings - furniture, draperies, utensils, clothing.

When we remember some of the plush and fringed monstrosities of an earlier day, the present designs seem beautiful indeed. There is an ever changing taste, of course, but it is to that lovelier has become more changes to chairs and some other pieces of furniture than anything in decades. The style has become neater, trimmer, and the swivel chair is now the living room as well as in the executive office.

Fashion also may influence the popularity of various styles, such as the upsurge of interest in rocking chairs since President Kennedy has shown a preference for them because of their relaxing qualities. Our grandmothers knew that, too, but for a time they were considered too old-fashioned. Now Morris and a combination of two types called the rocker-swivel.

Do you write that the Morris chair which was so popular in the early part of the century? Well, there are some still around, they were not too comfortable, by modern standards, but they were useful. Many a child's bed has been made on an old Morris chair. The fine, white-haired American poet, Robert Frost, has his study sitting chair in a Morris chair with a board on the lap.

The 'wing' chair has retained much of its popularity and style. It seems that it should be near a fireplace; maybe it was designed before there was central heating in order to keep side draughts from the occupant.

But the ancient dignity and authority of the chair is still retained in many of our expressions. We 'chair' a meeting; we address 'the chair' in respect to a presiding person; we 'take the chair' and in point of disorder, we still cry, 'Chair, Chair.'

The division plans a dessert bridge for the afternoon of June 5. Plans for a mixed bridge on June 20 are being finalized.

The Resurrection

By ALMA MASON

In the spring the artistry of Nature sets us a living example of restored beauty. At first, as winter slowly retires, the white gown of the flamboyant skirts of spring. We are conscious of hushed expectations. Then, almost overnight, the miracle of spring is upon us.

In our garden we planted a wee tree. Before its tender roots had found the solace and security of the warm earth unmerciful winter winds arrived. The baby leaves were torn asunder before the eyes of their mother tree. Cobbish hands, using the tree for ballast, broke its tender body and levelled it, almost to the ground. It stood through the dark stormy hours of winter, unprotected and alone. We grieved for we thought it had died a'borning. A sense of shame spread through our hearts for we felt we had harmed it out, a youngling, into an uncaring world.

Suddenly, spring arrived with a flourish of gold and harvest purple and white. Forsythia flaunted golden banners. White plum and vallley lilies spread a hoary perfume through the garden. Blue iris shrieked. Yesterday in a cool zed. A swallow, a cardinal and oriole swept up from the south. In all this revival, in awaking beauty, the little tree was forgotten.

Strolling through the garden one day, we found a green shoot on the young body of the sapling. Another and another appeared. Today the boughs of the neglected tree shelter the whole garden. Why did we grieve for the seemingly dying tree? Why did we not take it into the loving care of the Creator of all beauty?

Unlike the tree in our garden, the human tree is too often wrapped in despondency too thick for the sun and God's love to penetrate. Often when there is grief, sympathy for it to still and green shoots upward, it listlessly decays.

Human hearts have perpetually exposed to cold and disheartening winds. They lie broken on sod beaten in the snow of defeat. The hail of lost hope beats and breaks them. Downward, but, if deep in the heart a little bud of life struggles to grow again, there comes a second chance and a new spring. Given profound faith in God and a diffusion of hope, the little bud will break its shackles and send forth a stirring, green spring. At first the spring may be Lilliputian in size, but, in time, its destiny may be one of splendour.

As long as there is Christian belief and spiritual sustenance under the bark of life, the human tree can be restored to living, radiant beauty. It can gloriously rise above a despair-hooked faith, a spring-like faith. It blossoms can perfume the immortal and spiritual garden of life. It can meet the bleak winters of trouble and sorrow and lose its bloom again and again in the summers of faith and love and prayer and trust in God.

I planted in my garden such a frail and puny tree,
Around its slender branches
stormy winds swept ceaselessly;
The leaves were tossed with ruthless scorn;
The bark grew scuffed and torn.

It looked so lonely and forlorn,
A youngling without care.

But soon, the spring had come again and, in the,
healing sun,
The little battered, storm-tossed tree a new life had begun;
It spread its budding arms of green
To God in skies above
As if to thank the One
For shelter and for love.

Oh! for the faith of that wee tree — the bravery divine!
Oh! That we more surely might spread to hearts like mine!
So that after stormy winter mors
The spirit of my poor soul,
A spring-like faith might heal the scars
And might make me whole!

SIMULATOR INSTRUCTOR prepares to throw trouble at pilots in training from "trouble console" of jet simulator, a grounded cockpit wherein all flight conditions can be reproduced electronically with the aid of 1,000 tubes and 500 miles of wiring.

Going Places

Pilot Training in Simulator Means Safer Flying for You

By Shirley and Bob Sloane

New York — So "there we were," 10,000 feet in the air over Riverhead and cleared for an approach to the cloud-shrouded Idlewild, when the firebell rang.

Calmly Capt. Russell Green wood leased over and turned off the alarm, shut down the DC-8's number one jet engine, pulled a valve marked "Fluid to Load" and yanked an overhead handle labeled "Fire and 2." The ominous red light in the handle flickered momentarily and went out.

"What do we do now?" said the pilot on the captain's right, Lester McDevitt.

"Better go to Detroit," answered Greenwood, a veteran of 19 years with Pan American.

"Can't," McDevitt told him, "not enough fuel."

"Then we'll declare an emergency and go straight in."

"Can't do that either; only one engine got and 10,000 feet — they'll tell us we can fly all night this way."

"Then we'll make a standard approach. Standard briefing."

I don't know what that meant. Captain This is my first trip with the company and besides, I've lost my checklist."

Greenwood reached into his briefcase and came up with a copy. Together they ran down the technical details of field elevation, beacon, location, landing speed adjusted to gross weight, and a score of others.

PROCEEDED ON COURSE

The colored markers on the control panel lit up in order as the approach proceeded on course. Greenwood asked McDevitt to make a final check on the weather.

It was all they needed: fog patches rolling in, ceiling and visibility reduced to zero, "three hundred feet and no runway lights," called McDevitt.

Greenwood hauled back on the yoke. The speed indicator crept back from the 160 knots needed for landing to the 130 needed for flying.

"Let's restart that engine and try it again," said McDevitt, as we stepped our throws and stepped out of the cockpit to leave them to their own devices.

Fortunately, none of this actually happened — at least not in a DC-8. In all likelihood most of it never will happen.

But because no one would like to fly with a crew that wouldn't know what to do if all of it did happen, every airline puts its cockpit people through such indoctrination.

They take place in a diabolical machine known as a simulator, which reproduces every flight condition imaginable and a few more, but fly. The devil's advocate in this playpen is McDevitt, for from a raw co-pilot, he instructs others. His job is to keep pilots under pressure that a real flight will be kiddy-car driving by comparison.

There never has been an instance of an engine fire in a commercial jet. Yet every pilot knows what to do should there be one, a situation where a pilot is unable to land at his destination but hasn't enough fuel for an alternate field is all but unthinkable. Yet every experienced flier has such problems thrown at him in simulator "flights" to test his ability to cope with them.

PRECISE REPRODUCTION

The simulator is a precise, functioning reproduction of an airplane cockpit. To the rear is a panel known as a "trouble console." Behind it are 500 miles of wiring and 1,000 tubes which, instead of transforming the pilot's questions into the physical forces that fly an airplane, translate into computers "the electronic squiggles that show him how he would be flying if he really were flying it."

In the simulator an instructor can treat crewmen with situations that would be difficult, not to mention dangerous, to reproduce in a real airplane. The pilot's only experience in dealing with them may be in the stimulator.

On the trouble console are switches, dials and knobs that can pull the flying carpet out from under the pilot with make-believe fires, bad landing, and even crashes. There's even a sound knob which can be turned up by the instructor operating the console if it registers crash.

But most of the time it's unnecessary. Pilots, before they get into a simulator, have had years of pilotin experience, a home study course on jets, and three weeks of ground school. Before they can operate scheduled flights they spend up to 25 hours in the simulator and 20 hours in flight training, and must pass batteries of government and company checks which draw the percents out to as long as seven months.

The reason is that of the last two times we jetted into Idlewild, one was in a snowstorm and another in a sleet storm. On neither occasion did the trouble console light up.

But back to Greenwood and McDevitt. Greenwood leased over and turned off the alarm, shut down the number one jet engine, pulled a valve marked "Fluid to Load" and yanked an overhead handle labeled "Fire and 2." The ominous red light in the handle flickered momentarily and went out.

"What do we do now?" said the pilot on the captain's right, Lester McDevitt.

"Better go to Detroit," answered Greenwood, a veteran of 19 years with Pan American.

"Can't," McDevitt told him, "not enough fuel."

"Then we'll declare an emergency and go straight in."

"Can't do that either; only one engine got and 10,000 feet — they'll tell us we can fly all night this way."

"Then we'll make a standard approach. Standard briefing."

I don't know what that meant. Captain This is my first trip with the company and besides, I've lost my checklist."

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. H. F. — They owe me an apology. Roland is a good boy.

Mr. J. T. — The tests reveal inclinations toward delinquency.

Mrs. H. F. — I was never so insulted in my life. I was called to Roland's school and accused of neglecting the boy. If ever a mother was conscientious, it's me.

I'm a cashier in a movie theatre, but even though I work evenings I keep tabs on Roland. He's 14 and he gets his orders from me, along with his supper money. And he knows I'll bear of him getting out of line, he gets it from me, big as he is. Or worse from his uncle, my brother, with a razor strap.

But lately, the child hasn't given me one bit of trouble. His marks are up, but he also got promoted. And I tell him if he sticks it out to 17, he can join the Navy. So what should I listen to those people?

Mr. J. T. — I'm one of the youth workers assigned to Roland's school. Our office has been conducting a series of "pen-friend" tests among the teenagers. These are designed to point up anti-social attitudes, habits and impulses which might later catapult these kids into serious trouble.

From our examination of Roland, he appears to be a most unhappy and disturbed adolescent. He informs us that his father deserted him, and because he thinks, is over-strict with him and lets her brother browbeat him cruelly.

On the moral side, we find the boy has no clear concept of right and wrong. To him, anything is right so long as his parents don't catch him doing it. We need her help to fill in the blanks.

The Council — Instead of resenting the school's report, Mrs. F should be grateful for it. "Neglect" can take forms that don't show, and Mrs. F. is fortunate to have Roland's warped emotional development called to her notice.

Being a parent is a lonely, hard job. We need all the intelligent help we can get. So the school's call is like a road sign to a traveller, in strange territory. Mrs. F. ignores it at her peril.

The parent seems to be the key person in a rescue operation, because the parent played the largest role in the child's formative years. "Each adolescent is just about the kind of person that would be predicted from a knowledge of the way his parents treated him," says Dr. Robert F. Peck, after a 16-year study. What counts, he adds, are: Mature parental love, and rational discipline. These adjectives make the difference.

Mrs. F. can be aided, even helped by those two adjectives. Despite her commendable efforts, she hasn't "reached" Roland so far as his character training is concerned. The atmosphere they find him crippled in spirit. With his mothers cooperation they feel he can be released.

The fact that he gets provided doesn't mean much. Often this is mandatory because of a boys age. Also, the fact that he lives with his mother not one bit of trouble doesn't mean a thing. The trouble seethes within him, and the trouble may well be brewing for himself, his mother, and others.

A few years ago a three-year-old girl was violated and killed by a 15-year-old boy. Her father cried out: "How was it possible for this boy to go through his whole 15 years without anyone noticing the early upbringing failing to note the danger signals before the tragedy."

Not that Roland is headed for tragedy, but one of those responsible — the school — is definitely not getting it to the mother — to the signals. Together they can deal with them constructively.

MODERN MANNERS

Camilla Harrow Chase

DON'T BE A LINGER-LONGER GUEST

The "lingering guest" is the bane of every hostess! This is being the case, it is amazing to me that the situation exists and is so often deplored. After all, those who complain change places at times. The hosts at one party become guests at another, and vice versa. Obviously, therefore, we ourselves are at times guilty of the same faux pas that we criticize others for.

We never seem to learn that an, anti-climax is always bad. Nothing dulls the enjoyment of a pleasant evening more than the departing guest who keeps everybody standing at the front door (filling the house with either cold or bugs) while he chatters about something he forgot to talk about during the party. The result of these tactics is to make your host wish you would either come back in and sit down, or go home. Preferably the latter!

When will we learn that when we are ready to leave a party, or any gathering for that matter, we should make our farewell and "thank you's" quick and sincere, and get out. Shakespeare's advice is well worth following: "Stand not upon the order of your going, but go at once."

If paying a social call, your stay should be of short duration. A half hour at the most should be the length of your visit, even if urged to stay longer.

When invited to a friend's home for dinner, bear in mind that you were not asked to spend the night. If dinner is at seven, make sure you take your leave before eleven o'clock.

When attending a luncheon do not give your hostess the very unnerving idea that you may not be enough food in the house for for an extra guest for dinner. This unhappy thought is brought about when you stay so long that she fears that you will arrive before you finally leave.

In any of these situation, the hostess is of divided mind, there's a natural satisfaction that her guest has enjoyed himself so much that he can't tear himself away, and at the same time a complete frustration as to how best to get rid of him. Short of being downright rude, there is much she can do.

So it's really up to the individual, when in the role of guest, to make a point of leaving while he is still wanted. It's a knack that can be learned. Those who do learn it, will find that more invitations will be forthcoming.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Question — I recently received a thank-you note for flowers that I had sent to a funeral for a friend. It was written by his mother and a fairly large black border went all the way around the writing paper. I have never seen this done before, and am wondering if it is correct. — Mrs. H. T., Newark, N.J.

Answer — Up until a few years ago, the black border appeared around what was known as "mourning paper," and was in general use by those who had suffered a bereavement. This custom has grown or less disappeared, but it is still proper that it be used.

LETTER:

. . . Your recent columns have asked for tips on saving pennies. May I offer a few suggestions, some not concerning foods but rather items that do get into our grocery lists. 1) Use "washables" instead of "disposables" wherever practical. This could apply to servettes. Some of us have had our "washables" tucked away for years and years, for the paper ones for daily use. Also disposable tissues can be replaced by face cloth, servette or bib for baby-feeding — or rather for baby-mopping-up-after-feeding. 2) Wax paper liners in boxes of ready-to-eat cereals, can be used again. (Who buys ready-to-eat cereals on a strict budget? says Mary). For garbage bags, rather than buying the gilded paper bags, I line a plain paper bag with bread wrappers. 3) For dish-washing, laundry detergent purchased in as large a size as you can with those adjectives. Despite her commendable efforts, she hasn't "reached" Roland so far as his character training is concerned. The atmosphere they find him crippled in spirit. With his mothers cooperation they feel he can be released.

The fact that he gets provided doesn't mean much. Often this is mandatory because of a boys age. Also, the fact that he lives with his mother not one bit of trouble doesn't mean a thing. The trouble seethes within him, and the trouble may well be brewing for himself, his mother, and others.

Premature Retirement or Not This Business Woman's Problem

By THOMAS COLLINS

Here is a business woman with a retirement dilemma that is common to almost every successful man who turns gray.

She is more intelligent than most, as you will see:

"I am a woman alone. I am in business and am approaching my mid-50's. I have no relatives, even to squabble with.

"I am not broke. If I retire I can have an income of about $4,500 a year. In contrast to the $10,000 I now expend.

"My job pays well but it is lonely, and very demanding.

"The courage to give up my job and leap into the unknown is gone. But the desire for adventure is still with me. And if, like in the French Proverb, I had the strength of one straw to leave on, I would venture forth.

"A couple, hand in hand, can venture into a new locale and give moral support to each other through the trying, lonesome days of re-establishing themselves in a new community. But what of a lone woman? How can she re-establish without purchasing, for such a high price, even more of the loneliness she already has, than I share of?

"I am the sort of woman who grows weary of the inane chatter of a woman's world. The viewpoints and the conversations of men are more satisfying — and there are no romantic overtones to this.

RETIRE TO SUNSHINE?

"I toy with the thought of retiring to the sunshine. But how do I prepare myself to give up the privileges I do have fleating about in my set of locales and retire to that I-do-not-know-what, . ."

The fear of loneliness governs almost everybody's retirement. This is why you see so many people following friends to retirement areas — in some instances knowing there are as many as 60 retired people from one big company in Kent, meeting of them hungering for the closeness of somebody they know.

The business woman, fearing more loneliness than she already has, has a larger problem. And it is the larger problem of most successful men in the mid-50's: how to satisfy the desire for adventure that is in us.

First, the loneliness. With a few exceptions, the person who is lonely in Toronto, Oshawa, will be lonely in Miami, Fla. The person who is not lonely in Toronto could collect friends in the Congo. New circumstances can release inhibitions and your personality — for instance a bookkeeper in Toronto can become a carnival barker in Miami — and everything's a change.

The business woman, lonely already, had better seek a new circumstances or prepare to be lonely still, no matter? where she goes.

But should she go now? Should she have the "one straw to lean on?"

The person or company that employs you can give you money, position, security, honors. In return you give the time of your life — in fact, your life. You have only one, at last report, to give. So it is a question of how to spend this one life. For most of us, obviously, it is best to play safe, clinging to the weekly pay and the security to the end of the string, taking the full pension and hoping it is not too late to live some more.

ONLY ONE LIFE

Rebellion can make us bums. Any bold moves to scratch the itch in our hearts, and the utility company will cut off the attend.

High School Activities

R.C.I.V.S.

By GALE BRADEN

"Friends, Romans and countrymen lend me your ears."

Yes, once again campaign week is well underway, as preparations are completed for the Students' Council elections. Many students have been running for the six vacant offices forming a line-up of keen competitors. Their enthusiastic supporters have been showering the student body with banners, tags and other such "paraphernalia" to encourage the candidate in their choice. Signs and banners hanging from every possible position adorn the school a gay billboard appearance. As in the past, Wednesday's assembly was devoted to the candidates' campaign speeches. The climax of this week's excitment however, will be at the large pep rally being held just before the voting. Win or lose, I'm sure all the candidates will agree that it was an experience to remember.

ELEVATOR

Before the end of May the school year book, The Elevator should be off the presses. A hard working staff has been again successfully crammed a year full of exciting events into this latest hard-cover edition. For a preview one only has to look in the foyer. There the Elevator pictures will be on display and may be purchased for a nominal fee.

SPORTS

Watch the birdie everyone! At least this is what the badminton teams were doing at the recent C.O.S.S.A. games. Both the boys' and girls' teams fared well with Alan Mott and James Hurst capturing Junior C.O.S.S.A. championships. Congratulations.

F.D.

Just another reminder about the up and coming Spring Fling on May 5. Time is running out and who wants to miss this grand affair? Council has gone all out in its preparations to make this the best formal ever. So plan now to attend.

Scouting activities

The Scouts of the First Belleville Scout Troop carried out their regular meeting on April 24 with the precision of the top Air Force drill team. The occasion was "Parents Night" at the St. Thomas Parish Hoosier.

The Scout meeting under the direction of Scoutmaster Harold Jinkinson, assistant Scoutmaster Paul Allen and Troop Leader Jim Pickering opened with the flag break by Patrol Leader Barry Athey of the Owl Patrol, following which the Padre of the Troop Rev. A. S. McConnell led the assembly in the Scout prayer. Following inspection the theme of the meeting was given by Scouter Jinkinson who also acted as master of ceremonies for the program.

The first item on the program was a rope making demonstration by the Sing Patrol under the leadership of Patrol Leader Barry Smith. Ron Gerow displayed his project a rope board on which knots had been beautifully mounted. He explained the method of tying knots and conducted an interesting instructional relay with Jeff Connors as the student.

Queen's Scout David Fort Patrol Leader of the Bulldog Patrol led his Patrol in a demonstration of camp arrangement, types of tents, pitching tents and gave an interesting talk on the requirements of the Campers Badge.

Queen's Scout Barry Athey next gave an interesting talk on the Pathfinder's badge as required badge for the Queen's Scout Award. His colored illustrated map of the City of Belleville indicated the hours of painstaking work required.

A break to ease tense muscles was next on the program. This, if nothing else, gave the fathers an indication of their lack of condition. Queen's Scout and Troop Leader Jim Pickering donated a model bridge, built by Scouts in assembly hall to the troop. He explained there were seven different types of lashings in all, totalling nearly 300. He also displayed part of a rock collection solicited on camping trips in the United States and Canada.

Bruce Dowdall had on display his sketches and drawings competing to obtain the artist's badge. Their excellence of design and proportion would indicate a real talent.

Anthony Kelsey displayed woodworking and basket weaving learned at the "Y". The baskets would be an asset to any housewife for fruit or rolls.

The work and aims of the Scouting movement were given by Assistant Scoutmaster Allen. He explained some of the problems in handling a group of over 30 boys. The parents were requested to come to the Scout Hall and offer their communities with their problems as only through co-operation could any organization function properly. All parents were requested to remain for refreshments served by the Scouts' Ladies Auxiliary.

Then A. S. McConnell thanked the leaders for a job well done.

be hanged if convicted of shooting and killing his wife.

But the same man would secure the gallows if he killed her with a hatchet, boiled her in oil or chose to "strap her to a board in the style of the Perils of Pauline and run her into a buzz-saw."

Frank Howard (CCF — Skeena) challenged Mr. McGee to say how Conservative backbenchers would vote when the government introduced its bill later this session.

"I am not prepared to speak for anybody in this House apart from myself," said Mr. McGee, "but if that bill develops so as to limit the application of the death penalty I would certainly support it as a measure moving towards abolition."

Mr. McGee spoke as he renewed sponsorship of his bill to abolish the death penalty for all crimes except wartime treason —the same bill that produced a two-day debate in the Commons last session. No vote was taken at that time.

The 35-year-old Toronto MP, whose brief has served on juries at murder trials, spoke — by house agreement—for the full hour allotted Friday to his bill. The bill now drops to the bottom of the order paper and is due to come up again this session.

Temper Threatens Marriage

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—For me, marriage has become a drab round of duties. My husband is habitually rude to me and even downright insulting at times. When I discipline the children he tells them they don't need to do whatever it is unless they want to. He pays some of the bills when he feels like it, but we are well into debt because he neglects what could be a very good retail business.

I feel that things are going down hill and I am powerless to change them. Can you suggest anything?—HELPLESS.

DEAR HELPLESS:—Downhill is right. And not long before you'll hit bottom, at the present rate.

Your husband is behaving like a child. Marriage is a sharing. If he is not ready to share, to help with the children, to give you the courtesy and other evidences of love you should have, to pay the bills, and so on, he is no marriage partner and the marriage can't last.

Obviously yours is not that disposition to stand up to him. Unless you can show him he can obtain way of life you must have co-operation and kindness, you must have outside help. A skilled marriage counsellor can help you—and him—to remodel your marriage. You owe this to your children.

Consult the worker at your Children's Aid Society, 63 West Moira Street, Belleville.

DEAR DORIS:—I'll be 16 next month and want to leave school and start earning money. Every time I want something I'm told my parents can't afford it.

I'm in grade 10 and I don't mind finishing my year, but after that it's quits, unless you can give me one good reason why not.—HAD IT.

DEAR HAD IT:—One good reason? I can give you four.

One: You are too young for most of the jobs available.

Two: Two or three years from now will not only give you matriculation, but will help you grow a little older before going on the market for work.

Three: You need as much education as you can get in order to find and hold down a job. The least educated workers get laid off first.

Four: It is a lot easier to take that education now than to come back for it later, after you've been the rounds and found out how tough jobs are.

If you have stopped learning in academic subjects, which I doubt, get a trade by taking technical training. A special skill is good job insurance. Right now something like 675,000 Canadian workers are unemployed. Don't you be the one to make it 675,001!

DEAR DORIS:—I am engaged to be married and am very worried about a question which has come up. My mother died in a mental hospital and a friend tells me my children might have it too. Is this true?—BETTY ANN.

DEAR BETTY ANN:—Not necessarily. Much mental illness is caused by stresses which are too great for any of us to bear without a crack-up. The nature of the illness, its severity and duration, should be taken into account in any such prediction. There are inherited tendencies to some illnesses.

This is a medical question and should be discussed with your family doctor or with the Heredity Counsellor at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto.

Great Variety In Battery Costs, Quality

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Prices on new batteries vary widely, and so does quality. Obviously, you can't expect a $10 battery to perform as well as one which costs $25.

Battery size is not necessarily an indication of quality. Many motorists do not realize this because it is generally accepted that larger batteries have a greater number of plates and thus offer more power. True, greater plate area does mean greater battery strength — but interior battery design varies, and a larger size battery may actually have fewer plates than a smaller one.

Even the number of plates does not tell all because not all battery makers offer plates of the same size.

When you are buying a battery, it is well to find out the ampere hour capacity. The higher it is, the better. Do not, however, compare amp hour capacity of a 6 volt battery with that of a 12 volt type because their ratings differ.

From N. E. : "Does wheel alignment greatly affect tire wear?"

(A) A misaligned wheel is one of the leading causes of rapid tire wear. Unbalanced wheels are also bad because they soon cause flat spots to wear.

* * *

H. S. writes: "I understand it's easy to but I cannot figure out how to remove the feul pump filter in order to clean out the dirt."

(A) Just loosen up the clamp underneath the glass bowl and be sure to tighten it securely after replacing the bowl.

* * *

D. W. asks: "Of late, more effort is required to steer my car, which has power steering. Noting your answer to one reader, I have kept a close watch on correct tire pressure so I do not believe that is my trouble."

(A) Front wheel alignment should be checked, as well as adequate front end lubrication.

From L.A.: "A month ago I bought a '55 sedan in very fine condition and only 21,000 miles registered. Although the original owner always used high test, according to the manual, I've been using regular gas. The engine runs perfectly so I assume this can't be harmful."

(A) Most regular grades today have octane ratings equal to or higher than premium gas of six years ago.

CAR RALLY:

Shell presents Canada's first cross-country car rally — the longest, most gruelling test of top performance ever held in the Western hemisphere. Arrives Toronto Sunday afternoon

Sunday at 7 a.m., one hundred and six of the world's greatest car rally teams, their tanks filled with Shell for top performance, will head west from Montreal. They will compete against terrain and time to reach the British Columbia International Trade Fair in Vancouver by 6.30 p.m. Saturday, May 6th.

For seven days en route, everything from driving skill to navigation and endurance will be tested. Safety will be paramount.

71 trophies and over $5,000 in cash will be awarded to outstanding drivers. Shell will provide these awards.

Follow the progress of this exciting 4098.2-mile contest, and watch the drivers compete in special driving skill contests during city stop-overs. Here are the details.

One of the major international sporting events of 1961 starts Sunday in Montreal. It's the British Columbia International Trade Fair Car Rally—the longest, most gruelling test of top performance ever held in the Western Hemisphere*.

The rally has been organized by the B.C.I.T.F. and is sponsored by the Shell Oil Company of Canada, Limited.

Famous drivers

212 top drivers and navigators from five countries will compete. The celebrated names include Hans Ingier and Nils Hagen of Norway who have competed in over 30 International events including six Monte Carlo Rallies, and Homer Trotter of Watertown, New York, two-time winner of the Canadian International Winter Rally. Seven ladies' teams are also entered.

The drivers and their navigators will negotiate an arduous 4098.2 mile route from Montreal to Vancouver. Their skill will be put to the test over some of the world's toughest terrain, including rugged mountains and rough country roads.

They will also compete in a series of driving contests in Mosport Park, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton, and Vancouver (see the map above for dates, and the box at the right for details).

Rally rules

Procedure will be largely the same as in the other great International rallies. Here are a few details for readers who are newcomers to this growing and fascinating sport:

• A rally is not a race. It is a contest of skill and timing for drivers and navigators, and a test of the reliability and endurance of their cars.

• The winner is the car that gets the fewest penalty points.

• Penalty points are handed out for damage to the car, for mechanical failure, for unsafe conduct, for violation of traffic laws, and for failing to arrive exactly on schedule at numerous control stations along the route.

• The timing is ferociously precise. Cars are penalized a point for every minute they're off schedule—early or late.

NOTE: Officials at every check point will make sure their clocks are right by getting time signals via radio from the Dominion Observatory in Ottawa.

• Other penalties: for failing to report at controls; for approaching controls from the wrong direction (i.e. getting lost).

• Exact details of the route are not revealed to drivers until they arrive at the starting point. There they receive special Shell maps to guide them along some sections of the route—and nothing but written instructions to help them navigate the other sections.

• Drivers are told the locations of some control stations at the start of the rally. Other control stations pop up at unexpected points along the route.

• Changes of flat tires are the only repairs allowed during overnight stops. To enforce this, officials impound all cars every night. All other servicing and repairs must be made in the daytime while the rally is in progress, when lost time will cost points.†

Early results

The rally is divided into five 1-day and 2-day sections. Each section will be a rally-within-a-rally, having its own winners.

†If you should see a stalled or disabled rally car don't offer to push. It's against the rules. Cars may be pushed by the driver and navigator only.

Results will be reported with astonishing speed. IBM punch clocks and punch cards will compute the scores, producing provisional results within a half-hour after the last competitor completes each section—and official results within 24 hours of the end of the rally.

Over $5,000 in cash

The B.C.I.T.F. will award 71 trophies and over $5,000 in cash to outstanding drivers. Shell will supply these awards.

Prizes will be awarded to cars in each category and class, and for each section of the route as well as for the entire rally. There will also be a Coupe des Dames for the ladies and cash awards from manufacturers.

All cars to get top performance from Shell

Shell will provide the gas and oil for all rally cars.

The cars will ask a lot from Shell gasolines. And it will give them these nine ingredients for top performance!

#1 is TCP! for power, mileage, and longer plug-life. Super Shell's improved formula contains an aviation grade of this world-patented additive. It gives you up to 15 per cent more power; up to 17 extra miles per tankful; and can make spark plugs last up to twice as long.

#2 is "cat-cracked" gasoline for power with a purr. This anti-knock ingredient has actually been cracked under 900-degree heat. Its heavier molecules have been shattered into lighter, livelier ones that make your engine purr with power the moment you put your foot down.

#3 contains heavy alkanes for power and economy at all speeds. Another high-octane, anti-knock ingredient. Heavy alkanes give you plenty of knock-free power whether you're driving slowly, accelerating, or cruising on a super highway.

#4 is anti-knock mix for extra resistance to knocks. One teaspoon per gallon can boost anti-knock rating by seven points.

#5 is butane for quick starts. This highly volatile ingredient fires your engine in a hurry in winter. It also happens to have outstanding anti-knock value in warm weather. So it helps smooth out your car's performance all year round.

#6 is a mixture of pentanes for fast warm-ups. This quick-firing ingredient speeds up the delivery of heat to your engine—gives you top performance in a hurry.

#7 is an "anti-ice" your car needs even when the temperature is 45°. Why add an anti-icer at forty-five degrees? Because even then frost can form in your carburetor just as it does in your refrigerator. It can choke your engine dead.

#8 is gum-preventive to keep the fuel system clean. This ingredient's job is to prevent gumming of carburetors, fuel lines, gas tanks and pumps.

#9 is Platformate for extra energy and more mileage. It takes one million dollars' worth of platinum catalyst to produce this super-energy ingredient.

Test new Super Shell for yourself

Why not discover the top performance that your, own car can deliver?

Try Super Shell next time you fill up. You'll see, feel and hear a difference in the way your engine runs.

SEE SPECIAL DRIVING CONTEST IN MOSPORT PARK

(and watch rally cars arrive at Shell Tower in Toronto)

First stop for the B.C.I.T.F. rallyists is Mosport Park, Sunday, April 30.

Shell invites you to see these famous drivers in competitions starting at 4:00 P.M.

The drivers will compete in a number of driving skill tests. The tests themselves will be kept top secret until minutes before the start. So the goings-on will be as much of a surprise to the drivers as they will be to you.

To reach Mosport Park follow Highway 35 past the junction with 115 for 1.1 miles. Turn left at red brick church and proceed another 2.6 miles on a gravel road to the entrance, opposite the white schoolhouse. Admission is free.

You can also see the rally cars later in the afternoon, when they arrive in Toronto. All cars will go to the Shell Oil Tower on the C.N.E. grounds. There they will be impounded for the night.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Some of them left last night. A lot of them took off this morning. Others left later in the day. Estimates are that the largest "army" ever to invade the northern haunts of the elusive trout will see action over the weekend.

All will have a lot of fun. Some will bring in the trout: Others may not be so lucky. Conditions are said to have been good, and there should be some appreciable hauls.

But if you have a week with nothing to do, $300 to spend and the yen to fish virgin trout waters, there's a "spot" far north that is trout angler's paradise.

Anglers are being informed this month of the fabulous trout fishing now available in a 50,000 square-mile Ontario wilderness area which for six years was closed to all hunting and fishing.

The area is north of Parallel 51.55 and lies beyond the north banks of the Wabassi and Albany Rivers. It was visited last year by Woodie Jarvis of DeTour, Michigan, well-known sportsman and outdoors writer. Jarvis flew into the region with Orville Wieben, Fort William.

They arranged for guides at the Indian village of Wabakimi and Whisk river.

Jarvis reports that previous fishing parties on the Whisk had been taking as many as 50 speckled trout, ranging from two to four pounds. He and Wieben, however, adopted a rule limiting their keepers to four pounds or over, except for what few smaller fish they needed for the pan.

Between them they caught and released a bushel of trout, but the limkers evaded them until the second day. Then Wieben scored with two which put him close to the ten-pound possession limit. Jarvis landed one weighing four pounds three ounces.

Jarvis points out that the newly opened area is only about half of that closed in 1953 as being too dangerous to travel for hunting or fishing. It was re-opened in 1959 in recognition of the topnotch safety record racked up by Ontario's bush-flying services. The other half of the vast wilderness is expected to be opened within the next year or so.

However, those of you who won't be making such a trip and land the limkers in this district, don't forget you can collect a substantial cash award in a province-wide "big fish" contest being conducted by the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters.

For the third consecutive year Molson's Brewery is co-operating with the Federation in the promotion of the fish tournament by contributing cash awards of more than $3,000. Over one hundred cash prizes, ranging from $10 to $100 are being offered to winners in various categories.

The contest is open for large-mouth black bass, smallmouths, yellow pickerel, great northern pike, muskinongo, lake trout, speckled trout and rainbow trout. They must, however, be caught in Ontario waters during the regular season on rod and reel.

The tournament is open to all residents of Ontario and to all legally licensed non-residents. It will run from the opening of the season through October 31st. All entries must be submitted by November 8. Entry forms and other particulars may be obtained from any member of the Ontario Federation, or the secretary-manager, Ridgetown, Ontario.

The biggest "whopper" in 1960 was caught by Leo Gauthier of Corbeil, Ontario, who hooked and landed a 42-pound muskie. The previous year he had won the top award in the same category with a 40-pound lunker.

And here's news for the fishing kiddies.

The Belleville Fish and Game Association is finalizing arrangements for "Kiddies' Trout Derby" to be held in the near future.

Permission of two farmers to use about a quarter mile of stream has been secured. The Department of Lands and Forests is co-operating to the point where officials will furnish some 500 speckled trout of "catching size" garnished with some big fellows.

The trout will be deposited in the stream, which will be sectioned off. The association will give prizes for the best fish and so on. More about it later. And it is strictly for the kiddies.

Warren Spahn At 40 Hurls No Hitter

Braves Move To Top Of Heap

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

You hear it every spring—a whispered whimsy that wonders whether this might be the year Warren Spahn finally loses his touch. Some year, of course, it has to happen. But this year? Forget it.

At 40, he's still Warren the wonder, pitching his second no-hitter and putting away the 290th victory of his 17 - year career Friday night as Milwaukee Braves beat San Francisco 1-0 and moved past the Giants into the National League lead.

Only two batters reached base against the sturdy southpaw, and both were rubbed out in double plays that Spahn himself started. Thus he faced the minimum 27 men while gaining his third shutout, a total which like his pile of victories, is an all-time high among NL left handers.

The Braves collected only five hits off lorr Sam Jones.

The only other game produced 94 hits as St. Louis Cardinals defeated Philadelphia Phillies 10-9 in 11 innings. The Pittsburgh-Cincinnati and Los Angeles-Chicago games were postponed because of cold.

GOT UNEARNED TALLY

The Braves, who have won three in a row and five of their last six games in a climb from the cellar, got their run in the first inning—an unearned tally when singles by Frank Bolling and Hank Aaron sandwiched a passed ball by new Giant catcher Ed Bailey.

Spahn walked Charlie Hiller on four pitches in the fourth, but Harvey Kuenn then hit into a double play. And Willie McCovey led off the fifth with a four-pitch walk, only to be cut down as Spahn converted Orlando Cepeda's tap back to the mound into a double play.

Pinch - hitter Matty Alou dragged a bunt down the first base line in the ninth but Spahn pounced on it and threw him out.

Pinch - hitter Red Schoendienst, another veteran who has been written off in the past, won it for the Cardinals with a two-run double off losing reliever Dallas Green (1-3) after the Phils had gone ahead in the top of the 11th on a squeeze bunt by Bob Martyn.

The Cards, blowing a 6-1 lead, came from behind on a tying, two-run double by pinch-hitter Alex Grammas in the ninth. Al Cicotte won his first in the NL in relief. He has lost two.

Spahn Calls Baseball Wonderful, Crazy Game

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Warren Spahn, a 40-year-old wonder, called baseball "just a wonderful, crazy game" after the second no-hitter of his brilliant career.

The Milwaukee Braves' southpaw faced the minimum of 27 batters in handcuffing San Francisco Giants 1-0 Friday night for the second no-hitter in his last six National League starts.

"It's just a crazy, wonderful game," Spahn said. "Here I go 16 years and throw a no-hitter. That's enough for anyone. But here I've done it again. It's just crazy—but wonderful."

Spahn, who reached a milestone in his career by holding Philadelphia Phillies hitless in a 4-0 victory in Milwaukee last Sept. 16, posted his 290th league triumph while dazzling the Giants.

The top left-handed winner in National League history, he suffered two momentary lapses of control. However, he recovered quickly on each occasion, getting the next batter to hit back to him for the start of a double play.

HE'S DAZZLED, TOO

"How do you figure it?" Spahn asked. "All those years of coming so close and now two of them. Sure, I was trying for a no-hitter, but I figured one in a lifetime was enough, so I was just out there trying to protect that one-run lead."

Spahn, who hurled a 2-1 victory over Pirates at Pittsburgh, became the second oldest man ever to fire a no-hitter. The immortal Cy Young pitched his third and last hitless game at 41 in 1908.

As usual, Spahn rewrote the record book, in addition to being the leading southpaw winner in league history, he also holds the circuit record for shutouts with 32.

A drag bunt by pinch-hitter Matty Alou nearly took the lustre off the terrific performance before 8,518 fans with one man out in the ninth inning.

Spahn raced over and scooped the ball to first baseman Joe Adcock to foul nip the speedy Alou.

JUST MADE IT

Needing four outs, Spahn got pinch-hitter Joe Almaficana to hit a hard grounder to shortstop Roy McMillan. The ball bounced off McMillan's chest, but he pounced on it and threw out Almaficana by a step.

Spahn, 2-1 for the season and aiming for his 12th 20-victory campaign, struck out five men—he got Willie Mays twice.

Charlie Lau, reserve catcher substituting for the injured Del Crandall, committed the only Milwaukee error. He dropped a foul pop by Ed Bailey in the ninth. Spahn took Lau off the hook by striking out Bailey.

Spahn was given all the cushion he needed in the first inning when the Braves scored an unearned run off Sam Jones. Frank Bolling singled, went to second on a passed ball and scored on Hank Aaron's two-out single.

Jones struck out 10 men, all in the first three innings, and walked five. The Braves moved past the Giants and Pittsburgh into a tie for first in the league race with a 6-4 won-lost record.

MacKAY BEATEN

MONTREAL (CP) — Frank Sedgeman downed Barry MacKay 10 games to eight Friday night in the featured singles match of Jack Kramer's tournament professional tennis show here. Sedgeman leads MacKay seven sets to six in the tour. Andres Gimeno beat Pancho Gonzales 12-10. Gonzales leads 5-4 in sets. Sedgeman and Gimeno beat MacKay and Gonzales 14-12 to take a 5-3 lead in sets.

Los Angeles Nips Twins

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Like Bob Scheffing said: Those Los Angeles Angels might raise the devil in their bandbox home at Wrigley Field.

Scheffing, Detroit manager, made his comment after his Tigers used a three-game sweep over the Angels to step into the American League lead. He figured the Angels' defense would cause them trouble on the road, but their bats might make up for the mistakes in their cozy ballpark.

That's just what happened Friday night as the Angels, after losing eight in a row, three times came from behind on home runs and knocked off Minnesota Twins 6-5 in 12 innings despite five errors. The winning run came in when Ken Hunt was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded, spilling the Twins to second place and pushing idle Detroit back on top by .035 percentage points.

BALTIMORE WINS

Baltimore defeated Washington 4-2 and Chicago White Sox beat Kansas City 4-2 in the only other games played in the AL.

Boston-Detroit and Cleveland-New York were postponed because of cold and rain.

The Angels trailed 3-0 with one of Minnesota's runs unearned before Earl Averill's fourth-inning home run. His second in two games at Wrigley Field, tied it. The Twins broke the tie on two walks and Reno Bertoia's single in the eighth, but Ted Kluszewski squared it again in the same frame with his fourth home run—this one a 400-foot shot.

In the 12th, Don Mincher doubled and scored on an error, giving the Twins a 5-4 edge. But the Angels bounced back once more, tying it on Ken Hamlin's home run—his first hit of the season. Then they won it when loser Bill Pleis, working in relief of Pete Ramos, plunked Hunt after singles by Alex Pearson and Ken Aspromonte and an intentional walk to Kluszewski had loaded the bases. Tom Morgan was the winner in relief of Ramos.

A two-run homer by Jerry Adair broke up Washington's no-hit bid for Orioles in the seventh inning at Washington and beat Bennie Daniels. Chuck Estrada scattered

Argos Sign New Player

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Green, 23, a quarterback who can double as a defensive halfback, has been signed by Toronto Argonauts, the Big Four Football League club announced Friday.

Green, five feet 11 inches and 185 pounds, played both positions in his four years at Youngstown University, split up by two years in the United States Navy.

His best year was 1959 when he passed 187 times for 81 completions, 1,241 yards and 12 touchdowns. He also rushed for 259 yards in 43 carries.

for the Orioles and had a one-hit shutout until the sixth, when Marty Keough walloped a solo homer.

Hoyt Wilhelm was the winner for a 2-0 record after relieving Dale Long and Billy Klaus on infield pops and striking out Dutch Dotterer when he relieved in the sixth with two on and none out.

Reliever Frank Baumann saved it for the White Sox and Cal McLish at Kansas City, getting pinch-hitter Bob Boyd on a bouncer to the mound for the final out with the bases loaded in the ninth. Ray Herbert was the loser, giving up the clinching run in the seventh when Sherm Lollar singled, went to second on a sacrifice by McLish and scored on a single by Jim Landis. Andy Carey homered for the A's.

Portland Wins

Nips Totems To Even Series

PORTLAND, Ore. (CP) — Spurred on by a record playoff crowd of 10,307, Portland Buckaroos came from behind to nip Seattle Totems 3-2 in overtime Friday night to deadlock their Western Hockey League final series 1-1.

Third game in the series will be played here Sunday and another 10,000-plus crowd is expected.

Little Arlo Goodwin snapped the 2-2 tie with a goal at 2:36 of the first overtime period to give the favored Buckaroos victory. Larry Leach of Portland scored at 5:38 of the final period to send the game into an extra session.

Portland opened the scoring in the first period on a goal by veteran Gord Haworth, but less than 1½ minutes later Marc Boileau tied the count for Seattle. Don Chiupka sent the Totems ahead midway though a riotous second period.

Tempers flared repeatedly during the first 40 minutes. Before the period ended, 17 penalties were handed out.

Taking the brunt of the penalties were Seattle's Ed Stankiewicz and Murray Wilkie and Portland's Tom Thurlby and Bill McCulley. All drew five-minute majors for fighting and additional minors and 10-minute misconducts for leaving the penalty box during another fracas.

Deloro League Honors Champs At Banquet

The Deloro Stellites mixed bowling league wound up a very successful season on the lanes with an equally successful presentation banquet and dance at the Columbus Club Hall last night.

A large crowd, from the bowling league and the Deloro Stellite Social and Athletic Association enjoyed a delicious turkey dinner prepared by the ladies of the Legion, Branch 99, danced to the music of the "Starduster" into the morning' early hours and honored the champions of the alleys with numerous awards.

Charles "Duke" Doran, master of ceremonies for the evening, got the presentation part of the affair under way following the dinner, by introducing Mr. James C. "Pat" Houston, manager of the Deloro Stellite plant here in Belleville. Mr. Houston, head table guest along with his charming wife, addressed the gathering and expressed desire that the fine sportsmanship of the social and athletic association continue for many years.

Mr. George Brooks, president of the bowling league, handled the major part of the presentations.

Mr. Houston presented the Dauphines with the loop's top trophy for finishing the season in first place. Members on the championship team were captain Jim Reid, Marlene Reid, Gene MacDonald, Margot Insley, Martell "Slim" Wheadon and Marg. Gellinger. Each player received a beautiful individual trophy.

The Leftovers, consisting of captain Don and Muriel Ogilvie, Ron and Pam Ward, Garry Alexander and Sheila Insley, received the Larry Herrington Trophy for capturing the play-off round, presented by Mr. Al Means. Difference Is in Coaching Says Rev. David Bauer

EDMONTON (CP)—Coaching is the chief difference between Ontario and the West in junior hockey, says Rev. David Bauer.

Father Bauer, 38, coach of Toronto St. Michael's College Majors, said Friday night ability is not the reason champions of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series have taken the Memorial Cup in nine of their last 10 meetings with the West.

Father Bauer, whose Majors lead 2-0 over Edmonton Oil Kings in the Canadian junior hockey final, said the OHA stresses checking.

In the West, the offensive and the power play are given emphasis, he said, and the three replacements allowed the western champions in the national final never will help them.

CHECKING DOES IT

Persistent checking has been the main difference as the Toronto team won the first two games 4-0 and 6-1. Third game of the best-of-seven series will be played here tonight.

Father Bauer said he still expects a "rough series . . . our boys will just have to be out to do their best.

Edmonton has "not had too many breaks," he said. "You never can take an opponent for granted and there's a full 60 minutes to be played in each game."

Stan (Sonny) Osborne, one of the best St. Michael's forwards, arrived here by plane Friday night after finishing examinations at the University of Toronto. He is expected to play tonight.

Coach Buster Brayebaw of Oil Kings was confident despite losses in the first two games.

WILL SPONSOR TELECASTS

DETROIT (AP)—Ford division of Ford Motor Co. said Friday it will share sponsorship of all National Football League games on television next fall. Earlier this week the NFL sold television rights of its 36 regular season games to Columbia Broadcasting System for $4,650,000. Ford will sponsor one-quarter of each game.

Gunsmoke Will Have 34 Hour-Long Shows in Series

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Gunsmoke finished shooting its first hour-long show this week. Says Dennis Weaver: "We thought it would never end."

The reaction is understandable. With his fellow Gunsmokers Jim Arness, Amanda Blake and Milburn Stone, Weaver had made about 240 half - hours during a six - year stretch. It's no small change to a seven-day shooting schedule, double the usual number.

"And we've got 34 of them to do this season," Weaver adds. "That will take us to the end of next March with hardly any time off. If we were going into such a schedule with a new show, it would be a little easier to work up enthusiasm. As it is, March seems a long, long distance away."

At the end of the season, Chester may turn in his badge and limp over the hill.

BUT MAY RETURN

"I'm not saying I positively will leave," Weaver says, "I said that last year and that's west back."

What changed his mind?

"Money. I figured I had got about all I could get out of that part. But they offered me such a nice deal that I had to consider my family and accept. Now we've bought a lot and will build a house for the first time.

"Also there were certain fringe benefits. The major one was the chance to direct."

TO JOIN CAHA

QUEBEC (CP)—Georges Laberque, director of the Quebec Progression Ice Hockey League, says the league intends to join the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association before it wants to go on a European tour. The league intends to form a team with 20 of its best players and send it to Europe in January 1962. The league is formed of old - time pro players and hockey hobbyists.

Lyon Sloane for ladies' high triple of 659 and Bill Rivers for the men's counterpart a 780 triple, Pam Ward for ladies' high single of 302 and Harold Crossen for the men's high single of 363.

Special presentations were made to Fran Moon, Cathy Cunningham and George Brooks for outstanding service with the league executive and all other bowlers also accepted acknowledgement of their efforts on the lanes.

A surprise gift of a beautiful coffee table an chair capped the presentations. Mr. Brooks presented the gifts to Miss Sheila Insley and Garry Alexander and wished them success in their approaching marriage.

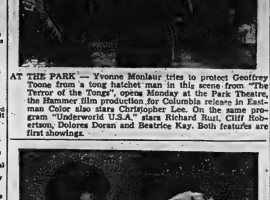
Court Program In Jeopardy

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The administration of Penn, Pittsburgh college basketball players, that they accepted a gambler's bribes to fix games last season has cast a shroud over the national Lonsily-known Big Five court program.

Participating in the now six-year - old program are Penn, Temple, Lasalle, Villanova and St. Joseph's. Games are played at Penn's Palestra against some of the top teams from all parts of the United States.

Penn's athletic director, Jerry Ford, said future developments would decide the fate of the Big Five program.

One of the four players identified by New York District Attorney Frank Hogan as taking bribes is Ed Bowler of Lasalle. The other three are St. Joseph's guard Ed Egan, Irwin Kempton and Frank Majewski.



More college players may be involved. Hogan said the grand jury investigating the basketball fixes will remain in session until June 30. So far 12 players from seven schools have been involved.

The Tracks

FORT ERIE (CP)—A horse officially dead for weeks came back to life with a flourish Friday.

Edgor's Lane, ridden by Hugo Dittfach, defeated Milton Man by a head in the featured Burlington Purse. It was the first time Edgor's Lane has finished a distant third.

The horse, owned by Edgor Ridge Stable of Toronto, was believed to have fatally injured itself in a mild accident early this year. But this week a check of tattoo identification on a horse of similar color owned by the same stable revealed that the wrong horse had been listed as dead.

Dittfach racked up his fourth winner of the day and his 53rd of the meeting when he captured the final race on Flakwin.

Edgor's Lane paid $17.20, $5.80 and $3.30. The three-year-old gelding labored through the deep mud, running five furlongs in 1.12.

The daily double of Poppy's First and Sidville, winners of the first two races, paid $296.50.

Recording artist Guy Mitchell began as a singer when he was 12 but never took singing lessons.

Astrological Forecast

Sunday, April 30, 1961

General Tendencies: This is one of those days when actually nothing is as it appears to be. Everyone is working angles to try to throw opponents, or even casual acquaintances, off the track of what he is really trying to do. Be sure you use this day to advantage by discussing and investigating all phases of what you don't understand.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Be sure you are accurate in going over any bills or statements during a.m. so that you do not have repercussions. Later, be diplomatic with loved one, or there can be a severance that can be serious. Keep a smiling exterior.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) This is one of those vital days when you must exercise extreme care in all that you do, be punctual with appointments, meet obligations of importance. Be very co-operative with the right people and gain added prestige.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Important you exercise much care in the performance of your duties now so that there is no damage or waste. Be loyal to hard-working co-workers, too. Take it easy in P.M., but be sure you get your wardrobe in better order.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 22) While you are desirous of enjoying yourself at recreations now, be sure you do not leave behind any important work that needs to be done. Get this completed first, then find inexpensive, wholesome amusement. Be kind to loved one, too.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) Real diplomacy must be used now in handling all matters concerned with home and family, or there can be a very serious argument. Concentrate upon increasing comfort and value of real estate, bringing greater harmony among members of clan.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)—Particular care must be taken while out driving today or in action anywhere or there could be some serious accident. Also, think before you speak so that some thoughtless remark will not touch off an argument or cause separations.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—While you may be worried about financial affairs, if you follow the advice of experts in business you can still save the situation nicely and not get deeper into the hole, speaking in the vernacular.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are prompted to lose your temper with those who are not acting properly, but this would only cause you indigestion and worse, so keep busily occupied bettering yourself and let them take the consequences. Get approval of higher-ups.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Rather than become irritated at adverse conditions, find out the cause for them and take the right steps to adjust matters. By investigating you get at the true cause and then you can remove the effect. Be alert and astute.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A deliberate and conniving individual who acts as a friend is really trying to steal your friend and profits. Keep alerted, use courtesy, but do not start any arguments, especially during any social affairs. Keep busy, also.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Act most circumspectly today or you lose some of the prestige you now enjoy. Also, be loyal to higher-ups and be sure to adhere to every law and regulation that applies to you. By being ethical and honorable in all things, you win.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) While you are highly inspired to study the new and plan new outlets for the future, this is not the day to take any action hereon, since you are not feeling very well and your thinking is not as clear and sharp as it should be.

If your child is born today — there will soon be a most decided ability in this nature to take what is wanted regardless of the feelings and rights of others. Early teach the Golden Rule so that your child will learn right from wrong and then evolve into a most capable person, also citizen. Religious training is a must here to polish the full success that is in this chart and a true quality of championship.

Monday, May 1, 1961

General Tendencies: A day for real trending in which your long-range plans have a good chance for success by adopting whatever new and improved methods are at hand to gain them. Be sure you let proven associates know of your desires — how else can they be aware and help you? Investigate whatever you do not understand, be very active.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) The ideal day to contact those persons you want allied with you in the future on some special project that vitally interests you. If you are well prepared, there will be no confusion and much that is constructive will be accomplished.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) It is possible now to have a conference with respected higher-up who can assist you to get new projects or ideas in operation that have been found feasible by experts. Be honest, be sure you have maps and statements in order. Be brief.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) A truly ideal day in which to exercise the greatest care and utilize every moment to the maximum of your property and possessions, as well as handle all financial matters very wisely. Tonight is fine for any romantic leanings.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) If you want closest ally to follow your inclinations, it is best you are not so economical and conservative about that money you have been hiding regularly. P.M. Get out to dinner in elegant fashion and then to place of amusement.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) It would be wise to know what your true relative position is with all higher-ups who mean so much to your career. Be sure in P.M. that you confide in close ties with regard to any important plans you may have made for the future. Get their help.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Your appearance at its very best early so that you can plan a charming evening with considerate and worthwhile persons who will be appreciative and pleasant to be with. Forget worries and get into spirit of fun.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Follow intuition that will lead you to greater profits that can later be enjoyed with loved ones. However, operate in such a way that you increase prestige and get the admiration of the influential.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) This is a day when you can accomplish a very great deal, but be certain you play square with good partners or allies, otherwise they can ruin all of your plans. Evening is also fine for any important social affairs. Be charming.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be kind to those who work for you today if you are to have the success that is possible. Don't look to your pals for assistance. The latter part of the day is then very good for any romantic or social pleasures you prefer.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Add to your circle of friends but, in A.M. and this evening, preferably through old acquaintances and at the meetings that combine business with pleasure. Look to the most progressive for best results and truly big conflicts. Grow.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you remain actively occupied in furthering your career, you can make rapid strides now, but be sure you also give much thought to furthering personal aims that will be of long duration. Think before you speak or act. Grow.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) You will have some wonderful occasions and opportunities to advance in your career during A.M. and throughout the evening. Also, be sure to combine social and pleasurable activities that will increase happiness for some time to come.

If your child is born today — he, or she, will be of such a practical turn of mind that soon there develops the ability and ability of putting other to work for personal gain without response. Teach your little Tom Sawyer early that nothing is ever truly enjoyed that is not earned honestly. Once this lesson is learned, the life then becomes very productive and successful. Much happiness is this chart!

profit for their year's work.

"One large bookmaking group in Buffalo was overheard accepting wagers of up to $10,000 on a single baseball game. The records of this same ring for a one-week period showed that the three parlors had amassed the $500,000 profit.

"A Canadian bookmaking operation, accepting layoffs from upstate bookmakers, noted a $500,000 during two months of the baseball season."

FIND MANY LINKS

Investigation in northern and central New York produced evidence of many links between Canadian and American bookmakers taking bets on horse racing, baseball, hockey, football and basketball.

In mid-1960, the locations and names of scores of New York bookmakers had been uncovered. Widespread raids were held at 3 p.m. Oct. 23 that year. It was Friday, a big day for bookies, and nearly $100,000 in cash was seized along with firearms and voluminous records, gambling equipment and powerful short-wave radios. One hundred and seven arrests were made.

At the same time, "The Ontario Provincial Police were at work in a co-ordinated effort in Canada. Acting upon information received from investigation and communicated to them they were able to close down a large illegal betting operation conducted by Americans there in conjunction with bookmakers in this state."

The commission found "an extremely close relationship" between big bookies in Ontario and those in the U.S. Niagara Falls, Rochester, Syracuse and Albany areas of New York.

Many of the bookmaking operations in Canada are transients from the U.S. who move periodically shift their operation."

DETAIL ONTARIO LINKS

Bookmakers in Niagara Falls N.Y., had a wire service which they invested in stocks favored, for one reason or another, by the Buffalo and Toronto bookies. They also had illegal authority to buy or sell for these accounts at their own discretion.

By using "hip pocket" orders of this kind, the investigators said, the Res were able to arrange strategic transactions designed to influence the course of the market.

The brief indicated the celebrities were wholly unaware that the operation was questionable.

Leslie Frost turned down the idea, Friday, saying:

"Rather than a royal commission, we will put the cops after them."

He was asked about other reports that the Mafia, a Sicilian terrorist society, is active in Ontario.

"We will clean up the Mafia if it is over here," Frost said. The Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission has called a meeting including the RCMP, the U.S. federal narcotics bureau and the FBI to consider the problems.

Commission Chairman C. O. Bick said evidence indicates there is organized crime in Toronto.

"We intend to find out who is behind this crime organization and stamp out the boodlums."

Will Air Cup Final Over CBC

TORONTO—Live coverage of the second half of the English Football Association Cup Final game between Tottenham Hotspurs and Leicester City will be broadcast on CBC radio, May 6.

The soccer game will be played at England's Stadium, Wembley, England, and will be heard on the CBC Dominion network beginning at 10:45 a.m.

For soccer fans the cup final game is the major sports event the Stanley Cup hockey playoff is to Canadians.

BBC commentators Raymond Glendenning and Alan Clarke will give play-by-play describing with color commentary by John Camkin.

This year's final is of more than usual interest to soccer fans. Tottenham Hotspurs have a chance to win both top place in league standings and the F. A. Cup. This has not been done by any team since Aston Villa took both honors in 1889.

WERE PERSUADED

The SEC brief said these people and others were persuaded by the Res to open brokerage accounts through which they invested in stocks favored, for one reason or another, by the Res. According to the brief the Res had illegal authority to buy or sell for these accounts at their own discretion.

By using "hip pocket" orders of this kind, the investigators said, the Res were able to arrange strategic transactions designed to influence the course of the market.

CANADA

ian grain already contracted for as "a drop in the bucket" for China's 650,000,000 people.

So far this year Canada has sold grain to Communist China, Czechoslovakia and Russia.

Czechoslovakia bought 11,000,000 bushels of wheat valued at $25,000,000.

Red China purchased 20,000,000 bushels of wheat and 12,135,000 bushels of barley-in a cash transaction involving $80,000,000.

Russia bought 7,300,000 bushels of wheat, but no price tag was put on the deal.

British adherence to the Common Market presumably would mean the breakup of the seven-country European Free Trade Association, whose formation Britain fostered in an attempt to provide a counter-weight to the Six.

There have been reports that Denmark and, perhaps, Norway would feel impelled to follow Britain in any steps it takes toward joining the Common Market.

The diplomatic source said the four neutral members of the EFTA — Sweden, Austria, Switzerland and the associate member, Finland — might under such circumstances have to consider making a separate arrangement with the Common Market aimed at minimizing discriminatory trading.

President Urho Kekkonen of Finland visits Britain next week.

The remaining EFTA—member is Portugal.

KING SEEKS SOLUTION

Meanwhile, King Savang Vathana sought in his royal capital here a way to unite his kingdom, torn by a civil war.

The king discussed with Prime Norodom Sihanouk, premier of neighboring neutral Cambodia, possible compromises to end the fighting.

Sihanouk was openly pessimistic about the impasse.

Foreign diplomats filled this royal Laotian capital, nested amid cloudy mountain peaks, to see the Buddhist cremation of the late King Sisavang Vong who died 18 months ago.

Though pro-Red forces stand 50 miles north and south of Luang Prabang, the lavish religious ceremony and the holiday fun that goes with it made the civil war seem remote.

The former king's body has been preserved since he died.

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet news agency Tass said today there is a state of emergency in Soviet Phouma of Laos has set a 48-hour deadline for the pro-Western Laotian regime to send delegates to a peace conference.

A Tass dispatch from Laos said Prince Souvanna made the statement at a press conference in commenting on pleas for a cease-fire between the country's warring factions.

According to the dispatch, he said non-arrival of pro-Western delegates at peace talks indicated the Boun Oum faction did not wish to achieve a cease-fire.

Britain and the United States have made it plain there are hopes for no peace talks until after a cease-fire has been confirmed. Thus far there has been widespread disagreement on a cease-fire but no time for stopping the shooting has been set.

"Does this mean if we in the EITA — Sweden, Austria, Switzerland and the associate member, Finland — might under such circumstances have to consider making a separate arrangement with the Common Market aimed at minimizing discriminatory trading.

KING SEEKS SOLUTION

Meanwhile, King Savang Vathana sought in his royal capital here a way to unite his kingdom, torn by a civil war.

The king discussed with Prime Norodom Sihanouk, premier of neighboring neutral Cambodia, possible compromises to end the fighting.

Sihanouk was openly pessimistic about the impasse.

Foreign diplomats filled this royal Laotian capital, nested amid cloudy mountain peaks, to see the Buddhist cremation of the late King Sisavang Vong who died 18 months ago.

Though pro-Red forces stand 50 miles north and south of Luang Prabang, the lavish religious ceremony and the holiday fun that goes with it made the civil war seem remote.

The former king's body has been preserved since he died.
